A large gathering enjoyed the Springtime Tea at Bates Hall during the first week of April. Anna and a group of wonderful volunteers served tasty tea sandwiches and delightful desserts as well as tea and coffee. Vocalist Tommy Rull entertained with songs remembered from our younger, dancing days of the Big Band era.

The following week, John Galluzzo paid us a visit. He showed a slide show and discussed his book, "Half an Hour a Day across Massachusetts." This documents his experiences taking a walk in each of the 351 cities and towns in one year.

On April 10, Carol Taylor, Marketing Director and Linda Chuckran, Community Relations Director from the Welch Company, discussed finding community resources, such as assisted living facilities, rehab/nursing homes and home services for seniors.

On April 17, presenter Jeanne Pacheco, R.N., focused on causes, signs, symptoms and treatment for high blood pressure. We participated in an interactive quiz on dietary sodium and a lively question and answer session. She also discussed what to look for on prepared food labels, while we snacked on the fresh fruit she brought for us to enjoy during the program.

On my way back home from church on Sunday, I noticed that the Bradford pear trees in the village had burst into bloom. Enjoy them, for their season is all too short. Then there is also my favorite hedge of forsythia on North Main Street, which I have enjoyed seeing every year since 1947. In spite of the terrible things that have happened both close to home and in the wider world, may we enjoy the budding of new life around us.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Support for legislation to curb gun violence

There is an urgent need to curb gun violence including the nearly 35,000 guns deaths in the United States every year.

In voicing its support for immediate legislation to curb gun violence the Democratic Town Committee passed the following resolution at its April 6, 2013, meeting:

"There is an urgent need to curb gun violence including the nearly 35,000 guns deaths in the United States every year. Some states are already moving in the right direction but a uniform approach is needed to prevent trafficking from easy access states. Therefore, the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee endorses the President's practical gun safety proposals, including an assault weapons ban; magazine clip limitations; and universal background checks.

We also urge our fellow citizens to contact their legislators to ask for their support – and vote – at this critical time for these long overdue common sense measures."

Candidates' debate on Cable-TV

The selectmen candidate's debate will be held in the 143tv studio on Monday, April 29 starting at 7 p.m. The debate will not be live, but will see many replays leading up to the May 11 election. Check out the schedule at: 143tv.org/tvschedule.htm

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

Louisiana Purchase – An illegal 'deal'

MARY KENNEDY

The Louisiana territory, after its initial "discovery" by French explorers in the 17th century, remained under the control of France until 1763 when King Louis XV "gave" the territory and New Orleans to his cousin, King Charles III of Spain. COURTESY ILLUSTRATION

"Let the land rejoice, for you have bought Louisiana for a song!" said New York Congressman Horatio Gates to President Thomas Jefferson in July 1803.

A stunned Jefferson had just received the news that his envoys in Paris, Robert Livingston and James Monroe, authorized to buy New Orleans and shipping rights on the Mississippi River for $10 million, had signed a treaty on Saturday, April 30, to pay $15 million for some 828,000 acres of land. Larger than Great Britain, France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Holland, and Switzerland combined, the huge land mass almost doubled the size of the United States, making it one of the largest nations in the world. The cost? About 4 cents an acre.

The Louisiana territory, after its initial "discovery" by French explorers in the 17th century, remained under the control of France until 1763 when King Louis XV "gave" the territory and New Orleans to his cousin, King Charles III of Spain. In 1800, Charles IV traded the territory back to France in exchange for six warships and a parcel of land in northern Italy (known as the kingdom of Etruria) he intended as a wedding present for his daughter. (At that time, it was customary for kings to swap pieces of countries much as neighbors might swap a few feet of yard space today).

The Louisiana Purchase, however, was illegal in several ways. First, the U.S. Constitution made no provision for expanding territory by sale and without a vote in Congress. Napoleon – not yet crowned emperor with divine rights – had never sought approval for the sale from his own legislature. Finally, France had an agreement with Spain not to cede the territory to any other power.

Jefferson, equally dedicated to insuring domestic growth and prosperity and keeping the new United States free from its greatest European enemies, France and Britain, was delighted that Livingston and Monroe had "seized" the opportunity to exceed their orders. He wrote "This removes from us the greatest source of danger to our peace." What he meant was that Napoleon's plans for an empire in North America were finally and forever finished.

Not everyone, however, approved of the "deal." Federalists in New England feared their shipping profits would be lost to the port of New Orleans. John Quincy Adams suggested secession. (In 1838, as president, he again defended both the wisdom and legality of secession). Josiah Quincy also urged that the New England states secede, "amicably if they can, violently if they must." In writing, he claimed that the Louisiana Purchase would result in the nation having to accommodate "a number of French and Spanish subjects whose habits, manners, and ideas of civil government are wholly foreign to republican institutions." One Boston newspaper editorial grumbled "We are to give money of which we have too little for land of which we already have too much."

Why did Napoleon sell so much for so little? War between France and Great Britain was looming. The slave uprising in Haiti was draining resources. He realized, of course, the certainty that Britain would later seize what might now be sold.

Understandably disappointed over the loss of any future French empire in North America, Napoleon wrote, "This sale assures forever the power of the United States." He continued, however, with some satisfaction, "I have given England a rival who, sooner or later, will humble her pride."

What if Jefferson had been more cautious and sought approval over weeks, if not months, through consensus? What if he had been more scrupulous about the rule of law (he had no authority to consent to the public purchase of land)?

Two weeks after the treaty was signed on April 30, 1803, Great Britain declared war on France. Less than two months later, Jefferson sent Meriwether Lewis and William Clark on an expedition to map out the new territory, stretching from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains. Yet another fascinating story.

On April 30, 1812, Louisiana ratified the U.S. Constitution, becoming the first state from the Louisiana territory and the 15th state of the United States of America.

FOR THE RECORD

Race to be first can be wrong

GREGORY MATHIS

Once again the rush to be the first to report important news led to a major blunder by a couple of reputable news organizations during coverage of last week's Boston Marathon bombings.

As the hours turned into days following the tragedy that left three dead and more than 170 injured, members of the media grew impatient waiting for details from law enforcement agencies and state government officials regarding suspects, explanations as to why, and answers to a million other questions.

There is little doubt the journalists who converged on Boston from all over the world were looking for answers and seeking the truth. While their intentions may have been similar to the thousands of law enforcement personnel working the case, the rush to get the scoop led to some shoddy reporting and misinformation being disseminated to the public at a very crucial time as tension remained high in and around the city with the suspected terrorists still at large.

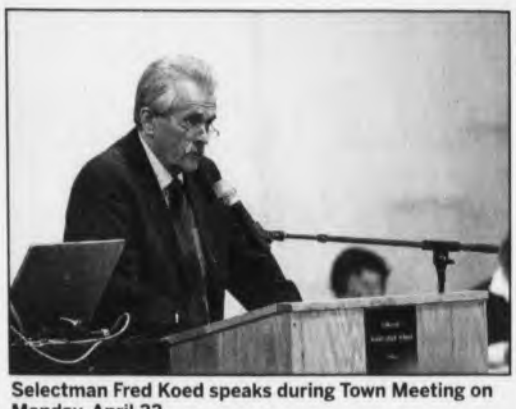
The Associated Press, CNN, and FoxNews.com, all credible media outlets, cited anonymous law enforcement sources that an arrest had been made on Wednesday, April 17. Of course that turned out not to be true and led to some embarrassment for the news organizations reporting that information.

Instead of holding a press conference to announce an arrest, the FBI issued a statement correcting the media reports and requesting that it show restraint and to go through proper channels to verify information.

Going through the proper channels, however, takes time and in this day and age there's a race to be first with information. But when that information is wrong it can be damaging and not at all in the public's interest.

The media in general, though, did a very admirable job covering the story as it began with the blasts at the finish line Monday, as well as the showdown with the suspects Friday.

With hordes of media usually on hand to cover the Boston Marathon under normal circumstances, journalists from many news organizations found themselves at ground zero at the finish line to record the blasts and the ensuing destruction of property and person. The initial coverage was compelling, frightening and sad. But it was important.



The media played another critical role Friday as the search for the two suspects resulted in an early morning shootout on the streets of Watertown and the manhunt that ensued to bring an important chapter in this case to an end.

But the screw-up in between is yet another example of trying to be first with information at any cost, even if it's wrong. It's a disturbing trend in the media.

The media walks a fine line between being fast and first, and being right. We need to balance the public's need to know with making sure the integrity of our news organization isn't at risk due to reporting false information.

In the end, those in the media that maintain the public's trust will emerge as the winners in this very competitive industry. Not who got what first... and wrong.

Selectman Fred Koed speaks during Town Meeting on Monday, April 22.

Diane Kennedy, Board of Selectmen vice chair, speaks in favor of Article 8, which amended the Town Manager Act, at Town Meeting.

Ronnie McMorris discusses problems she found in the Town Managers Act and urges citizens to vote against Article 8 during Monday's Town Meeting.

Cohasset citizens vote by secret ballot on Article 8, an amendment to the Town Manager Act at April 22 Town Meeting. Article 8 passed after the vote was counted.

Town Meeting

The Annual Town Meeting was held Monday, April 22 at the Cohasset High School Gymnasium.

In what had to be one of the speediest Town Meetings ever, voters zipped through 19 warrant articles in just over three hours. The entire meeting was wrapped in one night.

Town Meeting approved an amendment to the Town Manager Act, which clarifies the roles of the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen and changes who is eligible to be a town manager; a zoning bylaw that differentiates between veterinarian practices and vet hospitals; the fiscal year 2014 town budget; placing a year-long moratorium on marijuana dispensary clinics; and Community Preservation funds for several projects, including a new playground for the Deer Hill School.

The only article that was soundly defeated was the adoption of a local-option meal and hotel tax, which was broken up into two votes for each tax. This was the third time the tax had been brought to – and quashed by – Town Meeting.

TOWN MEETING

Meals tax not digestible

Voters defeat new taxes for third time

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The third time was not the charm for a meals or hotel tax in Cohasset.

Town Meeting once again had no appetite for the local options tax, which would have added a 0.75 (three quarters of one percent) increase over the state tax of 6.35 percent on all meals (including restaurant, catered, and prepared food items, even a cup of coffee). The tax on hotel room stays would have been 6 percent.

Last year's Annual Town Meeting, held in May, also killed the notion of new taxes. The November 2010 Special Town Meeting also said "nay."

Joe Campbell, general manager of the Cohasset Harbor Inn and Atlantica restaurant, has been an outspoken opponent on both of these taxes. Campbell was incredulous at Town Meeting on Monday.

"Again?" he addressed the floor. "Again? All right, here we go..." Campbell explained how the taxes hurt small business owners, especially those who primarily host wedding parties. Guests staying in one of Cohasset's inns over a weekend and dining in town would have a hefty bill, said Campbell. He estimated someone could easily pay close to $700 in taxes for a wedding party weekend in Cohasset.

Campbell said he wanted his businesses to maintain an edge over those in neighboring towns. "It's very competitive," he said of the wedding business. "I'll take any advantage I can get."

Those who were in favor of the taxes said that nearby towns have enacted the local options tax.

George Charmillard of the Advisory Committee explained that the board voted for the meals tax because it is a "very small tax that all the neighboring communities have. A large portion is paid by non-residents."

Kevin McCarthy, Fairoaks Lane, pointed out that anyone dining in Hingham or Scituate is "paying it there now."

"This is a penny on a cup of coffee from Starbucks. It's 10 cents on a slice of pizza," McCarthy said, adding that towns that have enacted the tax are reaping the benefits and using the excess revenue to support their elder centers, departments of public works and schools. Cohasset could do the same by implementing the tax. "People who come here and enjoy our town could return the favor."

Ray Kasperowicz, South Main Street, said Cohasset should continue to be different.

"I think we give restaurateurs a break," he said. "I don't care what other towns do."

Peter Brown, Atlantic Avenue, agreed that Cohasset should set itself apart. "I think the town of Cohasset should say tonight, no more taxes—we've had enough taxes," he said, suggesting the town could put up a sign on Route 3A that boasts, "Cohasset does not have a meals/hotel tax."

"Give someone a reason to come here," said Brown.

Edward Woods, Jerusalem Road, said he was not in favor of any taxes at all, to a round of applause from the floor.

The vote for the meals and hotel taxes were split into two motions, A and B. Both were defeated soundly by Town Meeting.

approved by Town Meeting last year, was to have at least 5 percent of the operating budget in a stabilization account. The goal for this year was $1.9 million; later that night, Town Meeting voted to approve adding money to the account so that there would be $1.5 million in stabilization funds.

Cohasset is also close to accomplishing the goal of receiving an AAA bond rating due to the financial improvements that have been made in the past year, said Milanoski.

OPEB

Milanoski also discussed Cohasset's unpaid town employee healthcare liability, or OPEB (Other Post-Employment Benefits). Next fiscal year, the town's outstanding liability will be around $38 million, which is the same amount as the town's anticipated revenue for that year, said Milanoski.

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore also discussed OPEB during an update on his committee.

"We fall behind every year and the liability continues to be substantial," he said. Since Cohasset is unlikely to drastically increase its revenue anytime soon by putting in a shopping mall, Pescatore explained, the town will have to explore other options or hope for changes in the state legislature. In the meantime, Cohasset could evaluate how much the town pays toward an employees' health insurance and consider doing a different split. Currently, the town pays for 50 percent of municipal employees' health care and 85 percent for teachers.

Milanoski said that there is good news: the town's health insurance provider, MIIA, recently agreed to lower its planned increase from 7.5 percent to 0.5 percent. The town manager estimated that this could save the town $200,000 which could be invested in the OPEB trust fund, which was set up by last year's Town Meeting.

Debate

Some citizens were vehemently opposed to altering the Act.

Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street, said that the Act now "reads more like a job description than a governance document."

McMorris, a former selectman, also felt that the selectmen's roles, as newly defined by the Act, threaten other town boards and commissions by giving the selectmen too much oversight. She said that given what happened when the selectmen unexpectedly ousted three longstanding Conservation Commissioners two years ago, this was dangerous.

She also wondered why the Act did not address the notion of combining the water and sewer departments under the town manager's purview, which has been recommended by three independent reviews of the town's structure, said McMorris.

McMorris stated that the Act's "third, fatal flaw" was the wording allowing a range of candidates to apply for the town manager position, explaining that while opening the door to some, it excludes other types of candidates.

McMorris had a problem with the requirement for experience in public management or business administration, but not public administration; there is a huge difference between these, she explained. While public admin focuses on public service management, public management, she said, focuses on private sector management. She questioned whether the Governance Committee had made a mistake with this wording.

The former selectman encouraged the town to draft a town charter instead of revising the town manager act.

George McGoldrick, Jerusalem Road, addressed some of McMorris's concerns and said that some of these could be quantified in town bylaws, but did not need to go in the town manager act. In speaking with other towns and the state Dept. of Revenue (DOR), the Governance Committee learned that the town manager act should be the foundation of the town.

The Act is "like building a house," said McGoldrick. "You need the foundation and framing first... The bylaws are our furniture, fixtures and paint. We can change our bylaws ourselves."

The Act, however, must be approved by the state. The Governance board was advised to keep the town manager act "as clear and concise as possible," McGoldrick explained.

And while some people "fundamentally disagree on who can or can't be a town manager," McGoldrick pointed out that of Massachusetts municipalities with a town manager act, Cohasset was the only one the Governance Committee found that restricted town employees and volunteers from applying for the town manager job.

Sam Wakeman, Atlantic Avenue, said that when it comes to water and sewer, the Governance Committee still plans to take a look at town boards and commissions; the issue has not been ignored.

Agnes McCann, Doane Street, said that she has attended all but one Governance meeting since December and feels that there is nothing wrong with the Act the way it was. "You can't blame the town manager act; it actually works," she said.

McCann added the new version gives the old one a facelift: "This one contains almost all of the same provisions but reordered, renumbered, reorganized, and re-labeled." This, however, "is not an improvement," she said.

The problem plaguing the town, McCann continued, is not that the town manager act was no good; it was that people were not doing "what they're supposed to do under the act."

"This is a solution to a problem that doesn't exist," McCann said. "If the board of selectmen don't know how to use the tool they've got, don't blame the tool."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that she did not support the retooled Act. "I feel the governance committee has more work to do." She also did not like the town manager qualifications and was concerned about hiring someone who does have enough experience or understanding of municipal finance law.

Linda Mooney of the Advisory Committee argued that fewer people drafted the original Act than the group who revised it, and said that she supported the changes.

Kevin McCarthy, Fairoaks Lane, acknowledged that the Act isn't perfect, but argued that "no document is." However, it was time to update this one. "I think we should let the governance committee get on with their [additional] work."

Jack Creighton, Conservation Commission chair, agreed that the revision was "long overdue," especially due to the "very troubled recent history in our town" involving past town managers.

Creighton noted that the new draft of the act is "nonpartisan," drafted by Cohasset citizens from all walks of life. "It's a well-crafted revision and will serve the town well."

Governance Committee member Trish Morse told voters to think of the Act as the Bill of Rights and not vote to defeat an entire article just because they didn't like parts of it.

"We're not all going to agree on every provision in here," Morse said of the Act. However, "I think it would be irresponsible" to vote it down. "There's too much in here that's very valuable and needed at this time."

Town Meeting ultimately agreed with Morse and the other supporters of the revised town manager act. The changes will be submitted as a Home Rule Petition to the state legislature for a vote before the amendments are implemented.

Question of the week

For selectman candidates:

Given the constraints of Prop 2-1/2, how can the Town reconcile its needs to deliver services provided by employees (teachers, police, fire, public works, etc.,) when salaries and benefits are the largest line items in the budget and rise faster than 2-1/2 percent per year?

Karen Quigley

If I had the answer I wouldn't be running for selectman, I'd be Secretary of the Treasury, and if anyone does have the magic solution to balancing the cost of the services people want with the reality of taxes they can pay, would they please let the rest of the world know.

To be serious, it's a difficult question. There have been riots and recalls on the issue and there is no simple or painless solution. Priorities must be set and tough choices made. Contracts must be negotiated that are fair to the employee and the taxpayer, that the town can realistically meet, and which do not pit one group against another.

What's more important? Education? Elder Services? Maintaining our buildings and infrastructure? Public Safety? Individually, it depends on where you're at in life but as a community they are all equally important and expensive and must be funded.

In finding a solution, we need to recognize that for some, such as those living on a fixed income or struggling in this economy, taxes can be burdensome. The rise of private support groups like the CEF, Friends of the Library, and Friends of Elder Affairs have made an important difference but it's still the taxpayer footing the bill.

I don't have the answer. All I can promise is I will bring my experience, dedication, and commitment to the best interest of our town to the table. I ask for one of your two votes for selectman on May 11.

Russell Bonetti

Nothing threatens Cohasset's ability to stay within the bounds of Proposition 2-1/2 more than our $36 million unfunded pension liability.

This critical obligation, called Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) by financial managers, now grows at a full $2 million a year. Unless we both stop its growth rate, and bring the $36 million figure down, Cohasset's school and town services will soon be at risk.

At the current rate of growth, the Town's unfunded liability will double in less than 15 years. We cannot accept a future – one scheduled to hit even sooner than 15 years — in which we are required to lay off teachers, firefighters, police, or other town employees in order to meet our pension burden.

As selectman, I will set as my first priority a fair and honest fix for this escalating problem. We need to launch reforms at Town Meeting this fall. We need to transfer a higher rate of so-called free cash (unexpended revenues from the current year) into town accounts reserved for OPEB future payments. Any significant windfalls in free cash or unanticipated growth should be used the same way.

We need to look at what other communities are doing as we begin frank and fair discussions with our municipal employees. We need to look at the escalating salaries of our lead managers, to set good examples with our most expensive personnel.

While we can never stop finding greater efficiencies in services delivered by the Town, we must now tackle this very real fiscal problem.

Steve Gaumer

Our resources are limited by our residential tax base, not Proposition 2-1/2. Unfortunately, Cohasset has no way of blunting the increase through taxes on commercial property. Other towns such as Hingham have a robust commercial tax base that help keep homeowner real estate taxes low. This is a luxury we do not have.

Our operating budget has risen 52 percent in 10 years. Over that time, we've added few new positions, no new services and neither our population nor school enrollment has grown substantially. We're delivering the same services, for more money. Inflation is not to blame. Consumer prices have risen at only 2.5 percent annually; real, private sector wages have risen just 0.29 percent annually since 2000.

The idea that taxes increases are tied to increases in employee costs is misguided because it:

- Assumes that we are delivering optimum services currently, and further efficiency is impossible.
- Assumes that our pay rates are competitive with other employment opportunities.
- Assumes that we have negotiated contracts we can afford to pay.

I suggest we ask the following difficult questions:

- Are we delivering optimum services currently? Are further efficiencies possible?
- Is our cost of services in line with those of our peer towns for similar services?
- Can we negotiate contracts that are fair to the employees and affordable to the taxpayers?

There are no easy solutions. As your elected official I will do my best to communicate the facts to you and help build consensus around a way to proceed.

Leland Jenkins

Whoever gets elected May 11 will need to help lead the town through balancing very difficult tradeoffs.

As a fiscal conservative, I believe it is necessary to always ask questions that will stimulate discussion, which will lead to prudent and thoughtful management decisions. Instituting periodic assessments of town services can benefit our employees and residents. Only then can we have a chance to provide services at a tax rate affordable to all.

Our Acting Town Manager has been working to restructure town services to take full advantage of our tax dollars while working within existing union contracts to deliver enhanced services to the residents.

Presently we are on track to eliminate previously identified material weaknesses through better use of technology, improving financial systems, upgrading computer systems, instituting policies and procedures and analyzing processes used in running the town and the schools for improved efficiency. Through continuing corrective actions and working to control health care costs, we can achieve getting our town on a comparable basis with other communities for real estate tax expenses.

These efforts will take hard work and discipline. My experience as selectman, an Army officer, a civil engineer, and a successful small business owner provide me the background to help tackle the challenges. Having lived in Cohasset for 35 years and raising and educating my daughters in the Cohasset schools, have provided a good understanding of what citizens expect and want in their town. I seek your support to keep our town moving forward.

Next week's question:

We often hear of a "school vote" or "school voting block." Whether or not that is the case – what are you doing to attract the votes of parents of schoolchildren and how can you assure them that the quality of education in Cohasset will not suffer as the town deals with its fiscal realities?

Responses to the Question of the Week should be no more than 250 words and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.) Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com. We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like. Candidates both opposed and unopposed are invited to submit a formal announcement of their candidacy with a photograph. There is no word limit on the announcements but candidates are encouraged to be as concise as possible.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

HOW TO PREPARE FOR SUMMER CAMP!
By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Once final camp decisions have been made and registration logistics are well underway, parents and guardians of first-time campers may be unsure of how to prepare themselves and their children for upcoming summer camp experiences. The American Camp Association, New England offers the following pointers:

1. Pack efficiently — What gear will you need? Your camp offers the best advice—what campers really do need. If a packing list is provided by the camp, carefully follow it. Whether you're filling a daypack for day camp or a duffle, backpack or trunk for overnight camp, remember that more is not necessarily better. Over packing is the most common camp prep error families make. Over packing creates difficulty in finding essential items quickly —the swimsuit for free swim, for instance. Over packing increases the chances that possessions will get lost somewhere in camp. Over packing burdens the camper.

2. Pack together — If campers are to manage their belongings while at camp (for the day or for weeks at a time), they need to pack them! Camp experiences teach children valuable life lessons in how to keep track of and to take care of their belongings. If adults do the packing for and not with campers, children don't know what they have or where to find it.

3. Practice independence — Camp provides an opportunity for each child to benefit as an individual and as a member of a group, from time spent in a world designed exclusively for children. If also offers parents and children a chance to practice normal, healthy separation, for the day or for several days or weeks at a time. At camp, children develop autonomy and a stronger sense of self. They make new friends, build skills, and experience teamwork. And at the end of camp, parents report their children's increased sense of independence. Schedule some time away from home for the day or overnight with friends and family members.

4. Talk, talk, talk — It is only natural that as the first day of camp approaches, some children may experience uneasiness. Encourage your child to talk about these feelings. Let children know that you are confident in their ability to handle the independence that being a camper brings. Remind the child of other times they have been independent — sleepovers and time away from home with friends or family, etc.

5. Get real — It is important for children and parents to maintain realistic expectations. Camp is a microcosm of the real world, so just like life, there will be highs and lows. Parents should encourage realistic views of what camp will be like, discussing both the high points and the low points children may experience. Remind children that the most important thing is to relax and have fun at camp.

6. Prepare to move through homesickness with confidence — If homesickness hits, things will go more smoothly if there's a plan in place. Discuss beforehand what the camper might do when missing home. Empower the child to seek a counselor's help. Prepare yourself to support your child's ability to adjust to a new setting. Try to follow the camp's advice. Remember that for most children homesickness is a passing phase and growth opportunity. Working through it can be tremendously empowering! And your plan will be the first step.

7. Look forward to keeping camp memories alive — Campers love to reminisce. So set your child up for success by planning for what will happen with photos and camp memorabilia. Will there be a photo album? A special box for collecting camp memories? Get the rest of the family ready to hear camp stories and songs! Those can go on well into the winter and spring until it's time to return to camp.

Dominating presence

Boys roll during win streak, girls battle

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team has had a pretty solid stretch of games since they lost 11-6 to Marshfield, April 11.

In fact, the Skippers have been downright dominating, winning their next four by a combined 56-7 mark.

In their latest game, Cohasset downed Mashpee 17-0 in a South Shore League contest.

Senior goalie Evan Yeager recorded the shutout in net, and 10 different players scored for Cohasset.

"It was a good game," Cohasset coach James Beadoin said. "The scoring was spread around. We had 10 different scorers."

One game before that, the Skippers posted an 11-0 win over visiting Hamilton-Wenham.

Jack Conte notched the shutout in that game with 19 saves.

John Mills had three goals and three assists.

Mills has been a consistent scorer for Cohasset, along with Nick Tangherlini.

Cohasset improved to 6-2 after the Mashpee win.

They'll have their hands full today when they travel to Archbishop Williams.

Archbishop Williams checks in with a 6-1 mark. Their only loss was at undefeated Austin Prep (8-0).

Local college star honors city

At the April 19 University of Albany against UMBC lacrosse game in Albany New York, Cohasset's Sam Leahy (far left) and two other "Massachusetts" born LAX team members held this flag during the National Anthem to honor Boston as a result of the horrific terrorist events at the Boston Marathon and in Boston.

Albany won the game 16-10 and won the America East Conference with a 4-0 record in conference play. The team stands at 10-5 with one game left. Leahy is a sophomore defender at Albany and was a top lacrosse and football player at Cohasset.

POPPIN' OFF

Power of sports is strong

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

The past week has been an eye opener.

Usually, when I put together sports sections for the towns I cover, I try my best to stay positive and keep things upbeat and informative.

I have always felt that sports should be a happy world of its own where athletes and fans can hide from the real world.

Last Monday those worlds collided with the bombing at the Boston Marathon.

Before I go any further on this subject, I have to send my best thoughts to anyone and everyone affected by this idiotic, senseless and cowardly act by a pair of losers, who we sadly found out, were involved in sports.

That said, the worlds collided the moment of the attacks, at a sporting event viewed all over the world.

Then, the city of Boston and the rest of the U.S. showed how sports can bring people together.

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The playoffs are set for Sunday at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke for the South Coastal Hockey League.

The Sharks clinched the top-seed in the Legends Div. as they got goals from Hanover's Mike Murphy, Tim Cruz and Richard Petrosino both of Marshfield and Art Riccio had two assists in their 3-0 win over the Crusaders in a Legends Div. game.

Barry Kaiser and Rick Kelly of Hanover combined for the shutout in a game that honored the league's 25th anniversary as the two teams wore replica uniforms of the first year. The Sharks wore the uniforms of the Mantas and the Crusaders wore Bulls uniforms.

The Toros will play the Sharks in a 4:10 p.m. game after they stunned the Whalers 4-0.

Ray Degaust had a goal and two assists, Steve Colella of Duxbury scored two goals and Norwell's James Ward had a goal while Ken Menkello posted the shutout.

The Stingers and the Saints will meet in a 5:20 p.m. game as the two teams concluded the regular season against each other. Scott Kelly of Pembroke had a goal and an assist while Chris Poudrier and Steve Lemish also of Pembroke added a goal each for the Stingers.

Pembroke's John MacLellan scored the goal for the Saints.

The Bruins will be the top-seed in the Classics Div. after they played the second-seeded Rangers to a 2-2 tie. John Zimmer of Marshfield and Tom MacInnes scored for the Bruins while Pembroke's Bob Sideropoulos and Tom Smith of Marshfield scored for the Rangers.

The Bruins will play the Red Wings in the semifinals at 8:50 p.m. The Wings got a goal and an assist from Tom Pipenbrink, Scituate's Mike Evensen and Pat Burke added a goal each in their 8-3 loss to the Black Hawks.

Mike Murray of Norwell scored four goals while Drew Fitzgerald of Duxbury and Tony Rota had a goal and two assists each for the Black Hawks. Tim Fallon and Pat Mulkern of Pembroke had a goal apiece and Bob Deveraux had two assists.

The Rangers will play the Maple Leafs at 7:30 p.m.

The Leafs got two goals from Jeff Gauthier, Rockland's Marty DeCourcey had a goal and an assist and Dave Evans of Marshfield scored a goal in their 4-2 win over the Canadiens. Kirk Souza and Marshfield's John Hernon scored the goals for the Canadiens.

After Archbishop Williams, there's a league game on May 1, and then a tough non-league game with a very tough Hingham team, April 9.

The rest of the way, Cohasset will face Hanover, Hull, Westborough, Scituate and B.C. High.

On the girls side, Cohasset tied Hingham 9-9 last week, then lost a 15-8 decision to Scituate, Monday.

Things don't get much easier for the 2-2-1 girls.

The girls host Duxbury (5-2) today, then play Mashpee and the ever-tough Norwell girls before taking on 7-2 Medfield in a home game May 3.

The girls have a strong team with top talent including Hope Kissick, who will play at Florida next year, Kathryn Dunn and Kristin Alexander.

Changes in store for postseason?

By Tom Hinkley
The Patriot Ledger

The past five high school baseball seasons have been dominated by big Catholic schools. A Catholic school has taken four of the past five Division 1 South Sectional crowns, with Franklin's title in 2011 being the only outlier.

Xaverian earned wins in 2010 and 2012 with BC High winning in 2008 and 2009. Even in 2011 when a Catholic school wasn't crowned champion, Xaverian finished runner-up, and the 2009 and 2010 sectional finals were matchups between Catholic powers, with Catholic Memorial finishing second in both years.

BC High (2008, 2009) and Xaverian (2012) also have combined to win three of the last five Div. 1 state championships.

The recent string of dominance has made the MIAA baseball committee take a closer look at its postseason format, and the committee has taken a page out of the hockey playbook and has elected to create its own Super 8 tournament.

The first Super 8 tournament will be implemented after the 2014 regular season and will be a double-elimination format that is open to any MIAA-member team in the state. The Super 8 will have a two-year trial run before its fate is decided for the long haul.

The plan appears to have widespread support. Braintree coach Bill O'Connell is among those on board.

"I think it's a great idea," he said. "It's a great opportunity to showcase the best teams and the best players in the state. It will really showcase the best talent in the state and it will give the kids some great exposure."

For a solid public school program such as Braintree, O'Connell also sees the upside of not always having to compete with the Catholic school juggernauts year after year. "It really evens the playing field," O'Connell said. "It's great for the public schools and those mid-level teams."

Impressing a selection committee enough to earn a Super 8 bid might urge some schools to put together a more challenging schedule, but O'Connell doesn't see it that way.

"We'll still go out and play our schedule," he said. "We have some really good programs in our league and we'll go play the same teams. There will be years when we're good enough (for the Super 8), and years when we won't be. Our 2010 team that went 16-4 probably would have gotten a bid and I would have loved to have competed with that group. If we're good enough to get in, then we'll get in."

Marshfield head baseball coach Bill Battis is another supporter of the Super 8 format, but believes that the tournament could come with some negatives.

"It makes winning the Division 1 tournament less special," he said. "Part of me thinks it's great to get a more even playing field, but that competitive side of me would always want to go through the best. There are still so many other good programs in Division 1 that it would still be quite an accomplishment, but the competitive side would always wonder."

Bridgewater-Raynham coach John Kearney also sees a quick exit from the Super 8 tournament as somewhat of a letdown compared to a lengthy tournament run.

"The downside is that there is such good competition," he said. "It's an honor to be picked, but it also means you can go 0-2 even if you have a good team, and then you're left feeling sort of empty."

The Super 8 may have been created with the Catholic schools in mind, but the public schools see it as an opportunity to prove themselves. "That's what baseball is all about," Battis said. "It's always a tough matchup when you run into any of those schools, no question, but it's a great honor and that's why you play."

One thing the coaches are still uncertain about is the criteria for being chosen for the Super 8 tournament. Last year's Div. 1 champion was Xaverian, which finished the regular season with a 12-8 record and might have been overlooked for a Super 8 bid.

"We haven't heard how they'd go about choosing the teams," Battis said. "I imagine they'd do it like hockey does it and try to take everything into consideration, but it's not perfect."

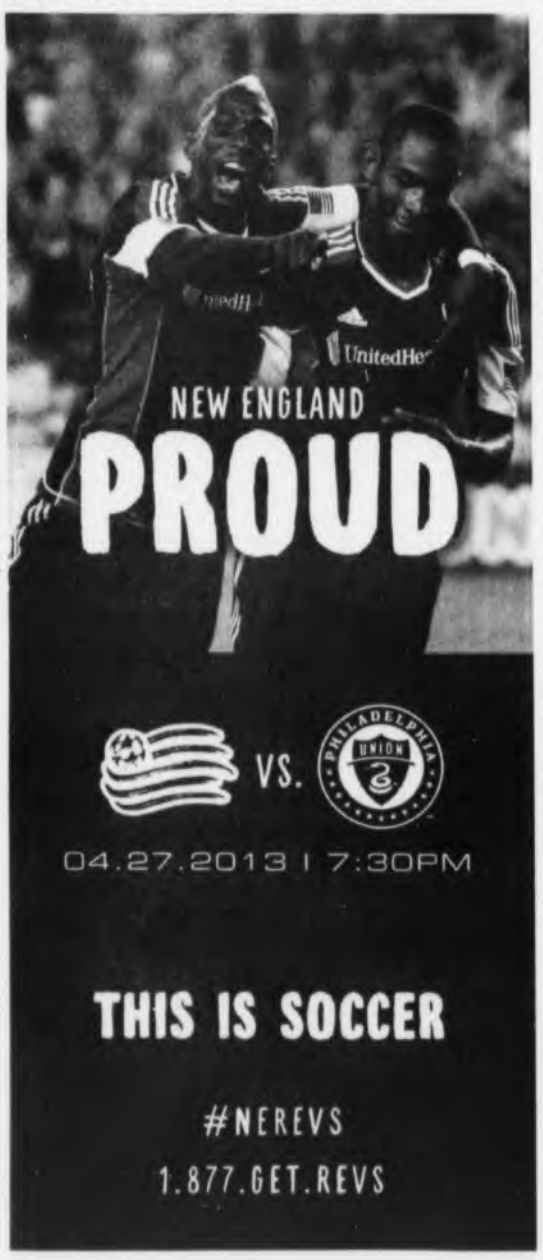
BASKETBALL

Celtics Cowens Camps opening in Hanover

The Boston Celtics and Dave Cowens will once again team up to offer New England children the highest quality and most comprehensive basketball camp in the region. The Celtics Cowens Camps Presented by Reebok will run for seven weeks and will feature three new locations this summer. For the first time, a camp will be held at Reebok World Headquarters in Canton, MA. The University Sports Complex in Hanover, MA and The RIM Sports Complex in Hampton, NH.

Along with the new locations, camps will once again be held at the Boston Celtics training facility in Waltham, MA. Camps will kick off on July 8 at Reebok in Canton, and will run through late August. The camp schedule is as follows:

July 8-12 (Reebok World Headquarters - Canton)
July 15-19 (Celtics Training Facility - Waltham)
July 22-26 (Celtics Training Facility - Waltham)
July 29-August 2 (University Sports Complex - Hanover)
August 5-9 (Celtics Training Facility - Waltham)
August 12-16 (Celtics Training Facility - Waltham)
August 19-23 (The RIM Sports Complex – Hampton, N.H.)



"Coming off a very successful year in 2012, we are looking forward to continuing our Celtics Cowens Camps," Dave Cowens, Celtics Legend and Basketball Hall of Fame member, said. "We once again plan to offer participating children best-in-class basketball instruction for any skill level, along with a focus on personal development."

The curriculum at the Celtics Cowens Camps will include low coach-to-player ratios, an equitable and competitive system of organized play, and daily emphasis on shooting, rebounding, ball handling, defensive and other fundamental skills.

Each camper is encouraged to develop his or her own individual skills while also focusing on team involvement. Camp staff, along with guest lecturers from the Celtics organization, will demonstrate the game's finer points, and the program will include a minimum of two games per day.

"The Celtics Cowens Camps presented by Reebok is a way for young boys and girls to come together to expand their skills both on and off the court," Celtics Senior Vice President Ted Dalton said. "These children will learn essential skills to enhance their basketball techniques as well as life skills such as teamwork, leadership and responsibility. Our management team,including Dave Cowens and Joe Amorosino, have over 50 years of camp and coaching experience, and they hire the best staff in New England. Children learn how to play basketball the 'Celtics Way' and have a great time."

For more information on the Celtics Cowens Camps presented by Reebok, including pricing and availability, please visit www.celtics.com/camps.

CSCR SUMMER INSTITUTE, 2013

A pathway to earning a Certificate of Environmental Stewardship

What's new about the Summer Institute? The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is teaming up with Cohasset Middle High School to offer students opportunities to earn a competency-based Certificate of Environmental Stewardship. The certificate recognizes students who are committed to environmental research and who can demonstrate STEM* competencies in 5 different community-based "watershed-to-ocean" research projects. Given that the Summer Institute program offers students opportunities to study ocean currents with NOAA scientists, evaluate eel grass and wetlands defining our estuaries, monitor water quality of the Gulf River, and document the effects of storm water running over and through the impervious surfaces of our built environment, earning the certificate is well within the reach of students who stay engaged in the program.

The capstone event requires students to present research findings to community stakeholders, and participate in an on-line mentor network. Earning the Certificate of Environmental Stewardship means that a student has successfully dedicated himself or herself to environmental research and study throughout much of his or her high school years. Certificate earners will distinguish themselves from their peers in ways valued by college admission officers and employers.

In addition to the research projects listed below, CSCR welcomes students of all ages to be involved in the CSCR student staff. Students with interests and skills in technology (web design, cloud computing, programming, etc), media and public relations (print and broadcast journalism, photography, etc), financial management, and even landscaping are needed. Students who aren't much interested in environmental research can find that CSCR is a place of opportunity for developing a range of skills and talents.

of solidarity.

The Red Sox, Bruins and Celtics were cheered by opponents and opposing fans alike.

Instead of staying away from stadiums, fans came out with more electricity and enthusiasm, partly, I feel, as a statement to past and future terrorists, backed up by a colorful comment by David Ortiz that in any other time, and many other cities would have had some blushing or complaining.

No Boston.

This city is tough.

High schools that I cover mostly had the week off, but they continued on as they should have.

Last week, I was at a Hanover lacrosse game the afternoon of the Marathon.

I was back there this Monday for a baseball game and realized that for the athletes, parents, coaches, this was still a place to forget the world around for a bit and focus on something good.

During the week, I watched the ceremonies at our professional arenas and realized that for that moment, win or lose, sports had the power of helping people heal together.

Today, on this page, you'll see a photo from Scituate's Brian Stewart that shows the solidarity of sports, as the Scituate track team posed in a life-size B for Boston during the Moment of Silence on Monday afternoon.

It was a stirring gesture.

Of course that may not last forever.

We will certainly see the stories of scandals and steroids come back, but for the week, sports felt like a haven of sorts.

I also learned about the power of social media, especially Twitter, where information, both true, and sometimes not, came to my phone and computer faster than I ever imagined.

People like Kevin Smith (yes Silent Bob) were tweeting out the latest updates.

The Red Sox' Will Middlebrooks and teammates were shooting out new photos and the latest tributes like the 617 jerseys. I felt informed, and part of something bigger and stronger, especially when the inspirational tweets from Middlebrooks and Shane Victorino came along.

These guys are a lot of fun to watch, or as I remembered yesterday, to listen to on the radio.

As I was stuck in the office yesterday, I had the 6-5 Wednesday afternoon win over Oakland on the radio, and it brought me back to the days when I was a little kid sneaking an AM radio under my pillow to listen to the Red Sox well after bedtime.

As I left and turned the ninth inning on in the car on my way home, I noticed I was transfixed, just waiting in the parking lot for that final strike from Andrew Bailey.

It was a moment to remember as I pumped the fist for what really was just one early season game.

On the other hand, last year, I don't remember doing that too often.

Last season the Red Sox just didn't have that extra pop, or from an outsider fan view, guys who really love to play baseball.

They have that intangible this season – at least to this point, and part of that feeling comes from my seeing the tweets from members of this team, especially Middlebrooks.

Our team at wickedlocal.com were also on top of all the information.

Watching everything unfurl gave me extra incentive to join in the movement and now I have started tweeting myself, with updates from sports, entertainment and otherwise.

I'll try to help with updates from games, especially when playoff time rolls around, and whenever the mood strikes.

Look for @scifisportsguy and enjoy.

I'll be there.

BStrong.

Row with CMI this summer!

Spring has sprung, summer is not far behind. It's time to think about rowing with the Cohasset Maritime Institute. Registration is now open for summer adult rowing that starts in three weeks. To register, search Cohasset Maritime Institute on Facebook or visit rowcmi.com.

CMI's Open House will take place from 9 to 11 a.m., on Saturday, May 4, at the CMI boathouse at 40 Parker Ave..

CMI is a nonprofit community organization open to all and has been teaching rowing skills to youth and adults for nearly 20 years. Every year CMI welcomes returning rowers and new rowers to the boathouse on Cohasset Harbor. Rowers sign up for the season, which runs from May 18 to Aug. 18.

If you are new to rowing or are uncertain about a summer-long commitment, we invite you to join our Learn To Row program. First instituted by CMI in 2011, LTR has proven to be very popular, introducing 15 to 20 adults to rowing in Cohasset each summer. You can participate in up to four sessions of rowing in the first two weekends of the season, learning the basics of sliding seat rowing (like collegiate rowing). The majority of LTRs typically extend their registration through the end of the season. The fee for LTR is $65, which can be applied to the full season fee.

Neither personal equipment nor prior rowing experience is required, only enthusiasm to master this ocean sport is needed. Instruction for LTR or new seasonal rowers includes on-shore and on the water rowing, with personalized instruction by experienced coaches. The full-season adult fee is $350.

CMI rows in a four-oared fiberglass composite boats specially designed for the waters off Cohasset. These unique, handcrafted boats hold four rowers plus a coxswain, with each rower on a sliding seat and using the same, powerful sweep stroke of competitive college and high school programs. Boats are stiff and sturdy but still lightweight, a seaworthy cousin to the fragile and sleek racing shells, and are well-suited to the sometimes choppy waters of Massachusetts Bay.

In addition to the joy of rowing in beautiful waters, rowing provides a complete body workout, with CMI's program accommodating a wide range of rowing abilities, strengths and intensities. Equal numbers of men and women row at CMI, with the average age of adult rowers in their 40s to 50's. We also have a separate, three-season program for youth entering eighth grade and up.

Adults typically row two times each week in crews of four rowers. Some crews have rowed together for years, while others meet and form crews through CMI. CMI offers rowing six days/week, with weekday early mornings, weekend mornings and evenings slots most popular for adults, midday (weekdays) rowing for youth. Depending on weather conditions, CMI boats may row from Cohasset Harbor to Minot's Lighthouse, along the shore past Sandy Beach to Doctor's Island, or occasionally to Scituate. When the tide is right, the boats are lucky enough to venture into the beautiful Gulph River. Some rowers choose to compete in races such as the Head of the Weir and the Snow Row in Hull, the Blackburn Challenge on Cape Ann and the CMI-hosted Minot's Light Roundabout at Sandy Beach.

Rowing is a lot of fun at CMI, a great way to get to know people, and wonderful opportunity to enjoy the beauty and the waters off Cohasset. Our numbers keep increasing at CMI and, as a result, CMI has ordered a fourth boat to accommodate the burgeoning demand for rowing and racing at CMI. More details on our Summer Splash event in June inaugurating our Row the Distance Capital Campaign will be announced soon.

For more information about CMI, visit rowcmi.com, search Cohasset Maritime Institute on Facebook, or email row.cmi@comcast.net. See you on the water.

The learn-to-row crew gets ready for a lesson.

James Earle and the new rowers return to dock.

Andrew Fewsmith and crew prepare to launch.

HOLLY HILL FARM

Farm to table dinner

Holly Hill Farm will offer the following events at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. Come explore the farm's resources, including the 140 acres of woods, fields, salt marsh and ponds. For more information, call 781-383-6565, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or email jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com.

Visiting chef Robin King from Restaurant Oro in Scituate will create a menu that includes locally sourced fish and meat and wines paired with each course.

Spring Asparagus & More – Holly Hill Farm will host the first farm to table dinner of 2013 from 6 to 9 p.m., on Saturday, May 11. This special event will offer guests a chance to visit the field where asparagus grows, discover its unique growing habits, learn tips for growing asparagus at home and then enjoy a dinner that incorporates local organic spring salad greens, leeks, asparagus and more in various recipes. Visiting chef Robin King from Restaurant Oro in Scituate will create a menu that includes locally sourced fish and meat and wines paired with each course. This fundraising dinner supports the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center based at Holly Hill Farm, and will ensure the continuation of educational programs at the historic family farm and in school gardens around the South Shore. Seating is limited so purchase tickets either by visiting the website, www.hollyhillfarm.org or by contacting Jon Belber at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com or calling 781-383-6565. Cost is $75 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $85 for non-members.

Keeping a Naturalist Sketchbook with artist Lynn Rizzotto – The Friends of Holly Hill Farm will offer an inspirational one-time drawing experience on Sunday, May 12, from 10 to 11:30 a.m., for several teams of one grandparent and one grandchild. Local artist, and lifelong keeper of a sketchbook, Rizzotto will guide a hands-on drawing and observational session at the farm. This is an opportunity for each grandparent/grandchild team to learn new ways to study and record nature. Proven ideas for locations to sketch, recommended art materials and resource materials will be discussed. Rizzotto, who is the director of the Children's Creativity Workshops, will share her own sketches, drawings and paintings that have been influenced by documenting nature in gardens, farms, forests and marketplaces in New England and during her travels. Enrollment is limited to 10 teams. The fee for each grandparent/grandchild team to take part is $20 for members of Friends of Holly Hill Farm; $30 for non-members. Grandchildren ages 6 through 10 are welcome. All art materials will be included. All fees will be donated to help support the Friends of Holly Hill Farm. Payment is due at time of pre-registration, and is required by April 30, 2013. Call the office at 781-383-6565, or email jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com to register.

Raised Beds: Design, build, plant, harvest at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset – Saturday, May 4, from 10 a.m. to noon. Come learn the benefits and joys of creating, building and planting a productive, organic raised growing bed. Attendees will go over plans, design ideas seedlings, sowing seed schedules and how to gain the most production from the growing season. Each participant will take away some early seedlings and plants, along with lots of ideas. Cost $12 FHHF members, $15 non-members.

Holly Hill Farm Plant Sale – May 18, 19, 25 and 26 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., each day. There will be organic plant starts for the home garden, with reliable favorites and some new varieties for home vegetable gardens. Organic soil amendments from Vermont Compost will be available for purchase as well as organic fertilizers and pest controls. The farm stand will be open with produce and eggs for sale. Members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center based at the farm, have a special opportunity to shop on Friday, May 17, from 4 to 6 p.m., ahead of the general public. Become a new member that afternoon and see what all the excitement is about. In addition to early admission to the plant sale, Friends of Holly Hill Farm members receive other benefits including discounts on all programs and workshops at the farm; free admission to the member's annual spring and fall events, Spreading Roots, the quarterly newsletter, a copy of the Annual Report, and the knowledge that membership supports an organization dedicated to using an organic farm to teach the value of sustainable agriculture, preservation of historic buildings, woodlands and open spaces.

After School Animal Club will take place from 4 to 5 p.m. Thursdays. Celebrate the return to spring as the animals in the barnyard regain their sprightly step, shed their winter coats and enjoy new company. Weekly chores will include feeding the animals, collecting chicken eggs and tucking all the animals into their shelters for the night. Join the club and make friends with the farms' animals.

GRETCHEN AND THE PICKPOCKETS

Battle of the bands: Smith needs your vote!

Norwell native Richie Smith and the band "Gretchen and the Pickpockets" have recently rocketed onto the music scene's radar after being chosen to compete in the Hard Rock Rising Battle of the Bands.

The young band's sultry, blues-tinged rock secured its first win in Round Two on March 7 of this year followed by an overwhelming win in Round Four on April 4.

The next step: 25 finalists will be chosen from across the globe by a fan vote which started April 22 and ends May 1. (Fans must have a Facebook page to vote. One vote per page.)

And, as a result, fans of Smith and his band have a request: On or before May 1, go to the band's Facebook page at www.facebook.com/gretchenandthepickpockets to find the link to cast a vote.

The band that gets the most votes will: travel to five countries around the world; receive a record contract; earn a $10,000 prize for the band; and receive $2,000 spending money per city.

Smith, 20, started playing guitar and drums in middle school. There, he became passionate about music and continued to study, compose, and produce music at Norwell High School under NHS Music Director John O'Briant, who inspired him to make it his career.

Smith is currently a student at the University of New Hampshire with a major in Music Education and Performance. He credits his success to the strong music program at Norwell High School and sincerely hopes funding will continue for music programs at all levels, not only in Norwell but across the nation.

Smith is the son of Frank and Joy Smith of Norwell, proprietors of Fleming's Lighting of Cohasset.

So remember: vote for Gretchen and the Pickpockets before May 1 and tell friends and family to do the same.

A CALL FOR PHOTOS: Send us your "Sign of Spring" shots

We're looking for your "Sign of Spring" photos, whether it's flowers blooming, birds returning to backyards, youth sports practices, golfing, or just doing some spring cleaning around the yard.
We'll post your signs of spring shots in photo galleries on your Wicked Local website and publish them in your weekly newspaper. We'll take your spring photo submissions through May 31.

HOW TO SUBMIT: Log on to your Wicked Local website, click on the "CALL FOR PHOTOS: Send us your "Sign of Spring" shots, and click the link that reads: Click to submit your Sign of Spring photos.

RUN-WALK TO HOME BASE

Ever dreamed of running across Home Base at Fenway Park? Do you love to run? Do you want to help support our troops?

WE HAVE THE CONTEST FOR YOU!

Tell us in 9 words or less why you'd run to support our troops and you'll automatically be entered for a chance to win a Registration Number for the Run-Walk to Home Base on Saturday, May 4.

Wicked Local is giving away Registration Numbers to lucky winners who will have the opportunity to run across home plate as part of this unforgettable fundraising event that helps provide services to local veterans returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Funds raised by the 2013 Run-Walk to Home Base will be used to support the Red Sox Foundation and Massachusetts General Hospital Home Base Program, whose mission is to help veterans obtain the care they need and deserve.

All entries must be received by Friday, April 26.

COHASSET EDUCATION FOUNDATION

Derby Day Gala: Juleps, Jockeys and Jazz!

Pull out one's hats and get ready for the Derby Day Gala. On Saturday night, May 4, the Cohasset Education Foundation will celebrate all things Kentucky Derby, from the festive hats to mint juleps and roses at the Cohasset Golf Club from 6:30 to 11:30 p.m.

This is the seventh annual spring event hosted by CEF and the first Derby Day celebration. The evening will kick off with a performance by the Cohasset High School Jazz ensemble and will also include virtual horse racing, light fare and a silent auction featuring Osgood and Deer Hill art projects. There will also be a selection of hats available for purchase.

This spring the CEF has received more than $150,000 in grant requests from teachers and administrators, including 21st century technology investments at Osgood, an Author in Residence program at Deer Hill, support for new and existing after-school clubs at the middle and high schools, and continued technology investments and expanded curriculum offerings at the high school. The Derby Day celebration is a perfect way to support and promote excellence in the Cohasset public schools in a fun, casual setting.

For more information and to purchase tickets, visit www.cohasseteducation.org.

One of the many art projects available for auction at the Derby Day Gala.

GIMME SHELTER

Felicia is frisky and fun

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Pretty little Felicia has had a very eventful few weeks for a young kitty. At one year old, Felicia is a small black and white tuxedo beauty with big, glowing, green eyes that are absolutely beautiful. Now she needs a family to bond with and make her way in the world.

This frisky feline just had her spay surgery, and then went through a move that brought her here to Hull Seaside wondering, what happened and where am I. Did it slow her down? No! For a cat who just recently had her surgery, Felicia is full of high energy and ready to play and chase toys before settling down for a little rest. Then she will start right up again. Wand toys, soft mice and crinkle balls will keep her entertained for long play periods and then, when she is ready to settle down, a quiet space to rest will help her to get cozy and relax.

Curious, spunky, and take charge are descriptions that fit this little girl. She is hoping to be accepted, spoiled and will want a lot of attention provided by gentle and loving owners who are ready to spend lots of time with her as she adapts to her new family. Being more a kitten herself, Felicia has some growing up to do and needs a patient and loving forever home where she will receive lots of love and understand that she needs you to make her world happy and safe.

Her flirtatious and affectionate side is endearing and when she wants to spend time with you she will let you know with purrs and a leap onto your lap. Since she is "all about Felicia" right now, it is on her terms and needs to be handled with feline diplomacy. Felicia is absolutely adorable and will grow into a great companion with lots of personality and spark. Get ready for entertainment, fun and surprises with this sassy girl.

Please come for a visit with Felicia at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. You may also contact Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902 for an appointment. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets.

Thank you to all who have donated bottles and cans to help in our effort to maintain a healthy shelter. We cannot do it without your support and it has been wonderful to see the generosity you extend to Hull Seaside every week. We can always use more help with collecting and sorting and if you have a few hours to spare please contact Nancy at 781-925-3638 for more information about volunteer opportunities.

This Sunday, April 28, is our Gimme Shelter fundraising event and we hope to see all of our readers, supporters, adopters, family and friends there. Please join us between 4-8 p.m. at the C-Note Music Club at 159 Nantasket Ave. in Hull. Tickets are $20 and can be purchased at the door, online, or at the shelter. Parking is complimentary directly across from the C-Note. There will entertainment and a hot and cold buffet including appetizers, salads, entrees and desserts.

Don't forget our spay and neuter day is on Monday, April 29, at the shelter. Please call for more information or to put your cat on the list. Please leave your pet's name, age and your name and number at 781-925-3121. You will be called back with confirmation. We are doing our best to help control the stray population and the Animal Rescue League provides this wonderful service right here in Hull.

EARTH DAY TEAMWORK

Girls lacrosse cleans up Bassing Beach

Twenty members of the Cohasset High School girls lacrosse team met at the Town docks on Government Island Town on Thursday, April 18th, to celebrate Earth Day by helping to clean up debris on Bassing Beach.

The girls who participated were Captains Kristin Alexander and Hope Kissick, and team members Olivia Arnold, Bennett Tierney, Caelin McDonald , Ally Leahy, Julia Stanganelli, Grace Lucier, Corey Golden, Madigan Oneill , Callahan Oneill , Kyle Burke, Paige Carrabes, Molly Cunning, Molly Fitzgerald, Mackenzie Axelson, Katie Gilman, Allie O'Callahan, and Isabel McCarthy.

This was the 6th annual Earth Day Cleanup organized and supervised by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, Inc. (CCT), owner of Bassing Beach. Bassing Beach was the CCT's first property, purchased in 1967 with contributions from hundreds of local residents. Members of the girls and boys lacrosse teams have participated in the Earth Day Cleanups every year since the first cleanup in 2008.

It was a beautiful spring day during the April school vacation day. The girls were ferried over to Bassing Beach by Cohasset Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons, who also helped the girls haul 20 bags of trash, debris, drink containers and washed up lobster traps back to the docks. DPW Superintendent Carl Sestito provided trash bags and arranged for the trash to be picked up at the docks.

The Board of the CCT would like to thank the girls lacrosse players for giving up time during their vacation week to help clean up one of Cohasset's most popular summer destinations.

Photos from the 2013 Earth Day Cleanup and from the past 5 Cleanups can be seen on the CCT's web site: cohassetconservationtrust.org, which also has information on all the CCT's properties and the history and mission of the CCT.

Fido walk is Saturday

The fourth annual Family Friends and Fido Walk at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham, will take place Saturday, April 27, with registration beginning at noon and the walk at 1 p.m.

This family and canine friendly day will include a dog-friendly animal presentation by South Shore Natural Science Center of Norwell, a canine demonstration by certified dog trainer and owner of The Dog Butler Terry Haskins, live music donated by the Risky Business Band, and free ice cream donated by the Sugar Shack Ice Cream Truck of Hanover. The event will include 1.3- and 5-mile walk options and will take place until 3 p.m. The entry fee is $25 per individual or $50 per family. All proceeds will go to the Cancer Support Community of MA South Shore that helps to provide free support education and hope to people with cancer and their loved ones.

"Last year we had a terrific turnout and it was a wonderful event enjoyed by people of every age," said Megan Bettencourt, executive director of the CSC MA South Shore. "Everyone is anxious to get outside and enjoy a great community event that brings support education and hope to our friends and neighbors who are impacted by cancer."

The Cancer Support Community-Mass South Shore is at 120 Longwater Drive, Norwell. Visit: cancersupportcommunityma.org or call 781-610-1490 for more information.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

The roads are the slickest when the rain first starts to fall, especially if it has not rained in a while. For the first 10-15 minutes, the rain combines with dirt, dust, oil and grease and rubber on the road to create a very slippery surface. Also, if the rain is extremely heavy, and it's difficult to see the centerline, consider pulling fully off the road and waiting a short time for the heavy rain to stop. This car slid off the road and rolled over during a rainstorm. COURTESY PHOTO

Rabbi celebrates 10 years in Hingham

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

This Saturday and Sunday, Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham will open its doors for a celebration. The celebration commemorates the ten-year anniversary of Rabbi Shira Joseph's leadership in Hingham and will include two concerts from Julie Silver, a nationally renowned Jewish singer and Boston-area native. Because Rabbi Joseph and her family are personally hosting the concerts, the concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 27th is free to congregation members and open to the public. The concert at 9:15 a.m. the next morning, Sunday, April 28th, is a family-oriented event free to anyone in the community.

The concert has been planned since last autumn, and the events after the recent Marathon have only affirmed Rabbi Joseph's desire to go ahead with the celebration. She made the comparison to marrying a couple or celebrating a child's bar or bat mitzvah after the death of someone close. "I'm always mindful that no one is untouched by tragedy," she said. "You have to say aloud the sad things, because if you don't, it's the elephant in the room. It permeates the moment. But you can be happy and celebrate for the blessings you have. Part of my role as rabbi is to help people know that they can still find joy, that you need to feel joy, or what's the alternative? You're crushed. That's why I came to serving, to create the community and the kind of space where people can come together to cope."

"Rabbi Joseph always has her eye towards engaging our members and building a strong community," said Michael Teller, Sha'aray Shalom's president. He added that bringing in an internationally renowned Jewish singer perfectly fit both goals. "We are all looking forward to celebrating the Rabbi's 10th anniversary with this wonderful musical tribute."

Dr. David Rudolph of Hingham, who served on the search committee for Rabbi Joseph 10 years ago, credited her sensitivity as making her so able to develop community from diverse populations. The temple's membership comes from over 20 towns along the South Shore, and about half of Sha'aray Shalom's families are interfaith.

"We were ourselves a very diverse committee, from a teenager who needed to get rides to the meetings, to the much older," Rudolph said. "We even had a non-Jew on the committee. We interviewed a half dozen candidates, and they were good candidates. Very strong. But they didn't fit. Rabbi Joseph had been a special needs teacher, which leant her a kind of sensitivity we thought would be best for our community. Everyone agreed on this choice."

Rabbi Joseph works hard at building connections between congregants and with the greater community. She encourages congregants to support each other. "I am just a small part, but I get to be the ringmaster sometimes," she said. "I love stirring the pot." She participates in the Hingham & Hull Religious Leaders Association, which puts together educational programs, interfaith worship services, and a forum to discuss interfaith issues, ethics, and local pastoral needs. She also speaks regularly at national Jewish symposia and conferences.

Rabbi Joseph was ordained a rabbi 18 years ago. The number 18 has a particular significance in Judaism, because the numbers that equate to the letters in "chai", which means life, add up to 18. The confluence of her 18th anniversary as a rabbi and her 10th anniversary at Sha'aray Shalom adds an extra dimension to the celebration.

"So I'm grateful all my family is coming in," Rabbi Joseph said. Two of her daughters, Shayna and Samantha, are local. The third, Lauren, who lives in Israel, is coming in, as is Rabbi Joseph's brother from California, her husband's family, and " ... friends I haven't seen in 30 years."

Reflecting over the last 10 years, Rabbi Joseph marked them in relation to the children she's seen grow, and that reflection reminded her of the rabbi she knew growing up. "He taught me so much, and then he set me to doing his bar and bat mitzvah training program when I was 14, because I knew cantillation." Cantillation is the chanting of religious texts. "I had 30 students to teach. He's passed, but he's still my rabbi. That's what I hope and pray for, that as I stay here, stand the test of time, that for them, I will be their rabbi."

Two concerts this weekend

This weekend, indulge in a friendly, dynamic multicultural experience as Congregation Sha'aray Shalom hosts singer Julie Silver. A Newton, Mass. native, Silver has performed all over the world to crowds both intimate and in the thousands — including singing the National Anthem at Fenway Park. Silver will give two concerts. The one on Saturday, April 27th at 8 p.m. is free to congregation members. Tickets are also available to the public. The concert Sunday morning, at 9:15, is geared to families. It's free and open to the public. Contact Congregation Sha'aray Shalom for more information: 781-749-8103 or shaaray.org. For more information on Julie Silver, go to juliesilver.com.

Sha'aray Shalom is located at 1112 Main Street, Hingham.

Horoscope

FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 6, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You've set a fast pace for yourself. But as you approach your goal, you might want to slow down a bit in order to take time to reassess your situation and make changes while you can.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Patience continues to be a virtue for the Divine Bovine. So as eager as you might be to get things moving, remember that time is on your side. Make good use of it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) There's a wee bit of uncertainty in the early part of the week. But things clear up as more facts come to light. Spend quality time this weekend with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An old friend's return could open new possibilities for both of you. But don't let yourself be rushed into anything. There could be some factors you haven't yet explored.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This week offers a challenge you're raring to take on. And while eager to get started, do so slowly so that you can focus those sharp Cat's Eyes on every detail.

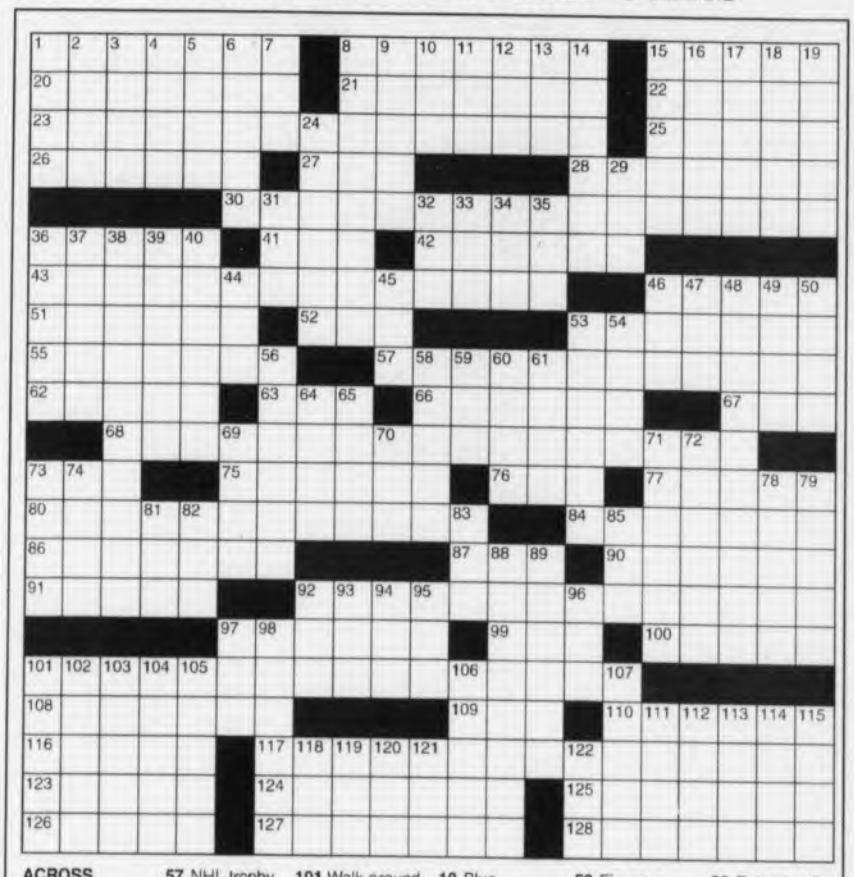
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Put your skepticism aside and listen to advice from colleagues who've been where you are now. What they say could be helpful as you get closer to a decision.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family matter might again require your reassuring touch. Handle it, as always, with kindness and fairness, even if some of your kin prove to be especially difficult.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ability to tackle even the most intricate details of a project is likely to impress some very important people. A relative shares news later this week.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The Archer's aim might be focused on the big picture this week, but don't overlook checking for those details you might have missed.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might feel awkward asking for assistance, but who would refuse the charming Goat's request? Do it, then go ahead and enjoy a musical weekend.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Pour some cold water on that simmering misunderstanding before it boils over. The sooner things settle, the sooner you can move ahead with your plans.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're in a highly productive period, which you feel can go on forever. But you could be courting exhaustion. Take time out to relax and restore your energies.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Subpoenas seek IDs of online posters

Selectmen, citizen to investigate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Right now, there is no indication that any employee was using any town employee computer to blog at all."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

Town officials recently issued a request to those making nasty comments on news stories that are posted online to come forward, but so far, none have revealed themselves. Selectmen said they would launch an investigation to obtain the identities of people posting comments online using pseudonyms if none came forward after 72 hours. That was more than two weeks ago on April 16, and none have given themselves up, said chairman Paul Carlson.

News websites, including the Cohasset Mariner's website "wickedlocalcohasset", allow commenting on stories posted online. Most who choose to comment use a screen name or pseudonym.

The board was scheduled to meet last night (Thursday, May 2) after the Mariner's weekly deadline to discuss asking Town Counsel to issue The Patriot Ledger a subpoena to uncover the IP (Internet Protocol) and email addresses of certain posters to see if Town Hall computers were being used.

Ronnie McMorris of Doane Street, a former long-time selectman, is also seeking the identity of several people who have posted comments on the

Hometown guy Gomez wins

Now faces Markey in race for US Senate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"I think it's left everyone speechless. It's certainly exciting for Cohasset and has created a buzz we haven't seen here in a long time."
David Farrag, Republican Town Committee

The next U.S. Senator from Massachusetts could be a Cohasset resident.

Cohasset's own Gabriel Gomez won the state Senate primary for the Republican party on Tuesday, April 30. He also won big in his hometown.

Gomez, a Boston businessman and former Navy SEAL, won 803 of 1,000 votes cast for Republican candidates. Gomez faced off against Michael Sullivan and Daniel Winslow. Sullivan won 157 votes while 39 votes were cast for Winslow.

Edward Markey was the Democratic choice for the state and Cohasset. Markey carried 440 votes in Cohasset while opponent Stephen Lynch won 325 votes.

Of the 5,839 eligible voters in Cohasset, 1,773 (30 percent) of voters turned out to cast their ballots Tuesday. Over 56 percent of registered Republicans voted while around 43 percent of Democrats went to the polls.

Gomez, 47, and Markey, 66, will face off in the June 25 special election to decide who will replace former longtime Massachusetts US Senator John Kerry (D), who resigned to become Secretary of State.

Ready for race

In his acceptance speech Tuesday night at the Red Lion Inn, Gomez, born in Los Angeles to Colombian immigrants, emphasized how he worked hard to achieve the American dream, his bipartisan stance, and his status as a Washington outsider with no elected experience.

"If you want someone who refuses to reach across the aisle...If you want a slick-talking politician, I'm not

PLATES UP TO DATE?

Remember to renew your registration

All motor vehicles that are authorized to travel on public ways in Massachusetts must be registered and display a license plate.

The most common type of license plate is a passenger plate. Passenger plates contain a mix of six letters and numbers and need to be renewed every two years. The renewal process can be accomplished on-line at: massrmv.com.

Passenger plates:

- White with red letters and numbers
- Have the month of expiration in the top left corner
- The year of expiration is denoted by the colored sticker in top right corner
- $50 to renew registration for two-years

Unregistered vehicles can be towed away by the police and the owner of the vehicle can receive a fine of $100.

3A study

Planners to hold forum

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Those who regularly traverse Route 3A might want to tune in to the upcoming Planning Board hearing on an upcoming study on the highway.

The Planning Board will hold a public forum on Wednesday, May 8 at 7:15 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium to introduce the study and its objectives and anticipated schedule.

"We need to get ahead of the Route 3A problem. It's time to stop talking about it and actually do something."
Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

The planners would like to solicit input from the public, businesses and other stakeholders regarding Route 3A safety, mobility and access issues, and potential solutions. All persons interested in learning about this study or providing input and comments are invited to attend.

Planning Board chair Stuart Ivimey said that, fundamentally, the stakeholders of 3A consists of the entire town.

"Everybody uses 3A," said Ivimey. "It's the central artery to Cohasset."

In March, the Planning Board, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, Police and Fire departments, Scituate Planning Board and Police Dept. representatives, MAPC representatives and the MassDOT held their first meeting with the Central Transportation Planning Staff (CTPS) to begin the study of Route 3A from the MBTA station in Cohasset to Henry Turner Bailey Road in Scituate.

According to the planning office, the objective is to identify safety, mobility, access Couple nearly falls for phone scam

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

An older couple that lives on Fairoaks Lane was the victim of a telephone scam that could have resulted in the emptying of their bank account, police said.

At about 1:45 p.m. on Thursday (April 25), an officer was dispatched to their home on a report of a telephone scam. Police said that morning the wife had received a call from a man claiming to be with a security company that was trying to block someone from making a fraudulent charge on the couple's bank account. He then requested her name, bank account number and bank routing number. She gave the information the man requested before realizing it was a scam. The couple immediately cancelled their bank account before any fraudulent charges were made and reported the matter.

Stolen

A 45-year-old Scituate woman reported to police on Sunday (April 28) that her Social Security card was stolen from a yellow business-type envelope from her car while she was attending services at St. Anthony's Church. She explained that the envelope was in the back seat and contained her Social Security card and birth certificate. She had left her car unlocked.

Two weeks before, the same woman reported that a broach and necklace were missing from her pocketbook while she was attending the 8 a.m. mass at St. Anthony's. She was not sure the last time she saw the jewelry and therefore, could not confirm it was stolen. She reported the missing jewelry to Scituate police.

Cohasset police advised her to put an alert on her Social Security number and date of birth with Experian, a credit report service, to prevent identity theft.

2-car MVA

Police responded to a 2-car crash in front of Dunkin Donuts on King Street (Route 3A) at 8:14 p.m. on Sunday (April 28). Police said a 2002 Pontiac sedan, operated by a 16-year-old Raynham boy, was headed south on King Street when he attempted to make a left into Dunkin Donuts. In doing so, the cut off a 2002 Mercedes Benz that was headed north and being operated by a 65-year-old Weymouth man. The cars nearly collided head-on, police said. Both vehicles were towed and there were no apparent injuries.

The boy was cited for failure to yield the right of way. And the other drive was issued a citation for unlicensed operation because his driver's license had expired, police said.

Served

On Monday (April 22) Police served a harassment prevention order from Stoughton District Court on a 40-year-old man who lives at Avalon. A harassment prevention order is dubbed "258E" as opposes to a restraining orders that is called a "209A."

Plow blade

A Cohasset man who is a local contractor reported to police on Tuesday (April 23) that a plow bade that would attach to a truck was missing from the location where he stores it off Route 3A. The incident is being investigated.

Minor MVA

Police responded to a minor motor vehicle accident in front of the Red Lion Inn on South Main Street last Tuesday (April 23) at around 10:52 a.m. The accident involved two cars, a 2004 Kia Sedona operated by a 78-year-old Cohasset woman and a 1996 Toyota Camry, operated by a 24-year-old Scituate woman.

Kid exchange

Police said the report of two "suspicious" vehicles in a parking lot off King Street (Route 3A) last Wednesday (April 24) at around 10:45 p.m. turned out to be an estranged couple exchanging their kids. Police said when kids are going between a divorced or separated mother and father, the "swap" usually occurs in a public place. Some couples conduct the exchange at the police station.

Guardrail

Police responded to a single-car accident at 1:20 a.m. on Thursday (April 25) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a the 51-year-old Cohasset man operating the 2007 Nissan Quest minivan northbound on Route 3A by Mendel Road was not paying attention and struck a guardrail. The vehicle went up onto the guardrail and got hung up, police said. Police had to call a heavy-duty wrecker with a crane to remove the vehicle. The driver was not injured but he was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes.

Metal detector

A report of two men with flashlights digging on Milliken Field off Bancroft Road at 1:26 a.m. on Thursday (April 25) turned out to be men with a metal detector looking for buried treasure, police said. The men did not have any criminal history and were sent on their way.

No parking

Police are looking into installing more signage on Bancroft Road near Milliken Field to alert motorists to the parking restrictions there. Police tagged two more cars last week that were parked illegally.

Cat on roof

Police and fire were unable to assist a Jerusalem Road caller reporting there was a cat on the roof at 7:48 p.m. on Friday (April 26). The caller dialed 9-1-1 to report the incident to the fire department. Police said police and fire do not retrieve cats from trees or roofs any more.

Gas can

A good Samaritan retrieved a gas can that was about half full and had washed up on Sandy Beach last week and brought it to the fire station.

FROM THE FIRESIDE

Permit fire got out of control

The main body of the brush fire was knocked in approximately 30 minutes. Members then spent the next three hours wetting down hot spots both on the ground and high up in the trees.

On Sunday, April 28, at 14:21 hours, Engine 2 (Captain Bilodeau and A/Lt. Hernan) Engine 3 (FF/Medic Dacey) and Squad 1 (FF/Medic Morrison) were dispatched to 61 Smith Place for an outside permit fire that had gotten out of control. On arrival at the scene units discovered a large brush fire approximately half an acre burning behind 61 Smith Place. Captain Bilodeau requested that a box alarm to be struck for the large brush fire and established command of the incident. Engine 2 crew members than stretched 300 hundred feet of 1 3/4-inch hose line into the woods to attack the fire, while Engine 3 and Squad 1 crew stretched 200 hundred feet of 4-inch hose to the hydrant at the end of Smith Place to establish a water supply for Engine 2.

Once the water supply was established to Engine 2, Engine 3 and Squad 1 crews then stretched 350 feet of 1-3/4 inch hose into the woods to assist Engine 2 in extinguishing the fire. Off duty members Captain Trask and Lt. Protulis responded back for the box alarm. Lt. Protulis reported to the scene, while Captain Trask reported to headquarters serving as a guide for Hull Engine 1 that was covering fire headquarters during the incident. The main body of the brush fire was knocked in approximately 30 minutes. Members then spent the next three hours wetting down hot spots both on the ground and high up in the trees. Call/FFs Mackay and Maynard also responded to the scene and assisted in extinguishing the fire.

On Monday April 22, at 20:14 hours, Engine 2 (Captain Belanger and FF/Medic Silva) and Engine 3 (A/Lt. Curley) were dispatched from headquarters to 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway for a fire alarm activation. While units were responding to the scene Cohasset Fire Alarm received a call from the resident in unit 210 at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway reporting a dryer fire. On arrival at the scene, members found a moderate smoke condition in the second floor hallway and all residents of the building had evacuated the building. Captain Belanger then established command of the incident and requested Box 3 for station coverage and requested Ladder 1 to the scene. Captain Trask, off duty, responded back to the station and then responded to the scene with Ladder 1.

The resident in unit 212 was able to extinguish the fire in the dryer prior to arrival of the fire department. Once Ladder 1 arrived on scene members began to ventilate the building with fans being placed in the north and south entrances of the building. The dryer was then removed from the building by fire department personnel. Ambulance 1 (FF/Medics Durette and Martin) arrived on scene after clearing South Shore Hospital from a previous incident and checked the second floor for any level of carbon monoxide with the department atmospheric monitor. All the smoke was ventilated from the building and no levels of carbon monoxide were detected on the second floor. Residents were then allowed back into the building and all units cleared the scene.

and other transportation related problems in the Rt. 3A corridor and to develop and evaluate potential solutions to the problems, including pedestrian, bicycle, trucks, and transit modes.

The study is being paid for by funds obtained from the Boston Region Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) via a grant application prepared by Clark Brewer on behalf of the Planning Board.

Ivimey explained why it was necessary to bring in the state. "We want the experts doing their evaluation with a completely open mind, with no preconceived ideas on what the problems are or where solutions lie," he said, adding that he hopes MassDOT will "do a thorough study, and let the data lead them to whatever conclusions" are best for the highway.

The Planning Board chair explained how the 3A corridor that runs through Cohasset has had its share of issues over the years.

"There has been an enormous amount of commercial and residential permitting and construction that's occurred there over the last six or eight years, and recognizing the traffic concerns on that road specifically, the number of accidents, the speed, the likelihood of congestion... Accidents are going to increase as 3A continues to develop," Ivimey concluded.

The reason for the study, the planner said, is to address the challenges that further development of 3A presents.

"We look at it as, 3A is a challenge right now, and has the potential of being a disaster," said Ivimey. "We're trying to get ahead of the problem before it becomes a disaster."

The planning board chair said he hopes for a good turnout at next week's hearing.

Ivimey said that the study is just the beginning, however. It will likely take years before any changes to be implemented.

"The study is going to lead to years' worth of work in dealing with the state, obtaining funding and grants," said Ivimey. "It's an item the planning board has been addressing since I've been on the board, back in 2004," he added. "We need to get ahead of the Route 3A problem. It's time to stop talking about it and actually do something."

Ivimey praised his fellow board member, Brewer, for working to obtain the grant to kickstart the study.

"He did a terrific job preparing the application, which required a significant follow-up," Ivimey said. "He was the prime mover, putting together the package, submitting the application and lobbying for it."

Brewer also had support from State Rep. Garrett Bradley and Senator Robert Hedlund.

The planning board chair said he hopes for a good turnout at next week's hearing.

"We believe in the importance of citizen input and believe the recognition of the problems and solutions don't necessarily lie in an engineer's office, but in people who utilize these roads every day," said Ivimey. "We're very much hoping we get a large turnout because it is so important we get on top of this problem now before 3A is completely not workable... We want to be solving that problem."

SUBPOENA

wickedlocalcohasset website. Both the Mariner and Ledger are owned by GateHouse Media.

The Cohasset Mariner was served with two subpoenas last week from the Boston law firm Thornton & Naumes LLP seeking all information related to the registration and or identification for readers using the following screen names: "Cohasset007," "Horse_the_Face," "dellaflooze," "LightofMinot," "semperfi26, "RayLewisisabadman," "PFFM2804," "iwasalousyselectman," and "frozenturkeyforall."

McMorris and her husband, David, who is an attorney with Thornton & Naumes, spoke up at the April 16 selectmen meeting urging the board to unearth these online posters' identities and to try to stop the online gossip from happening.

"Ferret them out, hold them accountable, and send the message that we will not tolerate the intimidation in this town," Ronnie McMorris said of the online posters.

The board agreed to look into it, with selectman Fred Koed urging the board to vote on launching an investigation after 72 hours if no one came forward.

At that same meeting David McMorris described the online commenters as "anonymous cowards" for spreading rumors and lies.

The subpoenas to the Cohasset Mariner also reference a civil suit filed on behalf of Ronnie McMorris in Quincy District Court against "Cohasset007" and "John Doe defendants" seeking $25,000 for libel, damage to reputation and emotional distress.

Paul Carlson, the selectmen chairman, said in a telephone interview this week that the selectmen's goal is to find out whether any of the online commenters are town employees who have posted online comments on town computers during work time.

Carlson, the selectmen chairman, said in a telephone interview this week that the selectmen's goal is to find out whether any of the online commenters are town employees who have posted online comments on town computers during work time.

Carlson said that his focus is on those who abuse town computers and work time to log online and write their "vicious remarks." The point of a subpoena is to merely "get the information we need to find out if the posting was made from a town computer and if so, who."

And if the commenters are blogging from home, it's a whole different story.

"I think people are pretty much free to be as loud and obnoxious on the Internet as any other place," Carlson said. "I don't feel people should do it on town computers, on town time. In the privacy of the home, I wouldn't touch it. If it's not on a town computer, it's not reasonable to conclude it's a town employee."

The selectmen chair added that he prefers to limit the investigation to town computers. "I just think it's wrong to go beyond that, in my opinion."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who issued the computer usage policy shortly after he was appointed town manager a year ago, said that so far there is no concrete evidence to suggest that someone has been blogging or posting comments from Town Hall.

"Right now, there is no indication that any employee was using any town employee computer to blog at all," said Milanoski. "Anything beyond that is pure speculation by people, and we're trying to deal with the facts here."

When asked what disciplinary action, if any, would be taken if it turns out a town employee was blogging on a town computer, Milanoski said that was a legal question for Town Counsel to determine. "There are First Amendment rights people have."

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said that his firm Deutsch Williams was asked by the selectmen to draft a subpoena to The Patriot Ledger asking for the IP addresses of certain online posters in order to determine whether the posts were made on town computers.

However, the firm is asking that no subpoena be issued "unless or until the board of selectmen votes to issue the specific subpoena as prepared." As of press time yesterday, the selectmen have not discussed what action will be taken if in fact an employee posts on town computers.

"The board has not made any plans as to what, if anything, the board intends to do with any information pertaining to the Town of Cohasset's employees that might come to light," said DeRensis. "Such plans have to depend on the outcome of the investigation, and is a fact specific question for another day when there are specific facts and circumstances to consider."

In other words, at the moment, "there are too many unknowns," DeRensis explained. "We can't give a legal determination on what can be done until we know what the facts are."

Algae plagues the pond

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce dons waders to check out the algae in Meetinghouse Pond on Tuesday. STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

It's not easy being green — just take a look at the Meetinghouse Pond on the town common.

The pond – also known as the "Frog Pond" and the "Duck Pond" – is covered in algae blooms once again this spring. Last summer, the pond sprouted quite a bit of algae and had to be skimmed several times; its pumps were also cleaned out.

The Department of Public Works (DPW) had the pond looking pristine in time for last June's South Shore Arts Festival, but the problem quickly came back. This year is apparently no different, as DPW workers were seen clearing out the pond this week.

Director of Project Management and Planning Brian Joyce was spotted wearing waders and jumping in the pond along with DPW workers. He said the crew was installing a new piping system to try to slow the algae growth.

Joyce said Tuesday that the latest algae problem started a few weeks ago, once the weather started warming up. The DPW raked the pond to remove some of the algae last week, but it quickly came back.

"With no rain, no wind and nice weather, it just bloomed," Joyce said of the algae.

Installing new pipes would help circulate the water, Joyce explained; stagnant water encourages algae growth. He also discussed adding algae-eating fish to the pond, something that officials discussed doing last year.

Students from Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research worked with Board of Health Agent Felix Zemel last year to mitigate the algae problem, testing the pond's pH and coming up with possible solutions for the algae issue.

"With no rain, no wind and nice weather, it just bloomed."
Brian Joyce, Director of Project Management and Planning

When they tested the pond last summer, CSCR students found an abnormally high pH of 10 (seven is considered normal) and also explored the possibility of lime leaching into the water from the concrete sides that were added to the pond when it was reconstructed in 2011.

Joyce said that he has already spoken with CSCR director Jack Buckley about having the students monitor the pond again.

"This is an ongoing biology experiment," said Joyce.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Plant sale is May 18

Plant lovers take notice. The hustle and bustle at the parking lot of the Historical Society will peak between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on May 18, when the Community Garden Club of Cohasset holds its plant sale. In case of rain, the sale will take place inside the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St.

The perennials and shrubs on offer are from the gardens of club members and friends, which make the plants tough, climate hardy and suitable for our soil, wind, and temperature extremes. In addition, there will be a variety of annuals, herbs, and vegetable seedlings that club members have expertly started from seed. Most of these are organic!

The proceeds from the plant sale will help support the many community projects to which the club is committed. These include maintaining the grounds at the Light keeper's Cottage, at Constitution Park and at the Pratt Building. In addition, the club provides monthly garden therapy at Golden Living Senior Residence, a monthly junior gardener program for students at Deer Hill School, and scholarships for deserving high school seniors.

Cut up your credit cards!
Pay them off with a Debt Consolidation Loan FIXED RATES AS LOW AS 4.99%* APR

Despite making your monthly payments, your credit card balances never seem to go down... Sound familiar???

Pay off higher rate credit cards and loans you may have at other financial institutions with a debt consolidation loan at rates as low as 4.99% APR* for up to 36 months and 5.99% APR* for 48 months! And since the rate is fixed, you can rest assured knowing you won't be receiving any letters from us notifying you of a rate increase.

Find out how much you can save and how you can pay your debt off quicker. Visit your nearest Crescent branch or call 508-559-5401. An account executive can even take your application over the phone! Or try our handy loan calculator and apply at www.crescentcredit.org.

*APR (Annual Percentage Rate) effective 04/01/2013, subject to credit approval and based on automatic payments from a Crescent Credit Union checking account. Minimum loan amount is $1,000. Maximum loan amount is $20,000. Without automatic payments rate is 0.25% higher. For 12 monthly payments at 4.99% APR the repayment amount would be $85.60 per $1,000 borrowed. For 48 monthly payments at 5.99% APR the repayment amount would be $23.48 per $1,000 borrowed. Rate and loan amount may vary depending on credit score. Other rates and terms available. Offer may be withdrawn at any time. Membership eligibility requirements apply. Anyone who lives or works in Plymouth, Bristol, Norfolk or Barnstable counties can join Crescent Credit Union. A $5 deposit to a Crescent Credit Union checking or savings account will establish membership.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings!

Hey there Cohasset, well, it is true and safe to say that April Showers did bring May flowers, what a beautiful week we just had. It feels so nice to have the sun, the warmth and, big stretches of dry weather like we have had. There are a few downsides to this great weather unfortunately that I should mention and they are fire risk, mosquitoes and sun safety. I know that the Cohasset Fire Department did a great job last weekend chasing and controlling fire in the woods off Smith Place. Kudos to the job they did but we all need to be mindful of how dry everything is and use trash cans etc. Sunscreen and bug spray are both absolute musts as well!

Sailing club

Registration for this year's Cohasset Sailing Club memberships, lessons and dock space is Saturday, May 11thfrom 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Sunday, May 12th from 10 a.m. to Noon at the clubhouse. Membership is open to all Cohasset residents. Download and bring your application to the club on registration weekend. Applications will only be accepted after registration weekend with a $50 late fee. First-year students must have completed fourth grade or be 10 years old by Labor Day 2013. Please see our website (cohassetsailingclub.org) for program descriptions, information on adult lessons and the new 5th year student Navigator class, the registration form and any questions you may have. The club is looking forward to a great summer of sailing!

Inly raffle

As part of their 40th Anniversary Celebration, Inly School is currently selling raffle tickets for the sold-out Saturday, July 27, Taylor Swift concert at Gillette Stadium (Section 236, Row 22, Seats 26-29) and an Aerosmith autographed guitar. Raffle tickets are $50 each and enter participants to win one item of their choosing. The drawing will take place, May 11 at Inly's 40th Anniversary Gala & Auction. Any winners who are not in attendance will be notified. Proceeds benefit Inly School's academic, arts and experiential learning programs. For more information, please visit: inlyschool.org

GW University

What a great bit of news to share about a super-talented young man. In addition to performing in several university music and theater productions over the past year, Sam Game has done staged readings at the Millennium Stage/Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the Shakespeare Theatre, and at Arena Stage as part of the Eugene O'Neill Festival in Washington DC. Last summer he served as the Business Intern at Studio Theatre; this summer he will be performing with the GW University Singers on a concert tour in South Africa.

Sam is an Economics major, Theater Arts minor and Presidential Scholar of the Arts at George Washington University.

Academic All American!

Robert Nahill's application for Academic All American has been accepted by the National Interscholastic Swimming Coaches Association of America Inc. As an exemplary student, Robert can take pride in this accomplishment.

More than 334,384 students are involved in aquatics at the high school level in more than 15,824 boys' and girls' programs in the nation. Approximately 2 percent of these students are recognized as high school All American's in swimming, diving, water polo and academics.

On stage!

For the 6th consecutive year, the Cohasset Youth Theatre and the Deer Hill PSO have offered an after-school musical theater program for students in grades 3, 4 and 5. This year the kids have spent nine weeks rehearsing two to three afternoons a week to create the wonderful cast of characters that make up the heartwarming Disney classic, "The Aristocats." Almost 60 students will take the stage next week to perform the story of Duchess and her three kittens. This furry quartet unintentionally takes a harrowing journey through the French countryside, and, in their effort to find their way back to Paris to their beloved human, Madame, they learn that different isn't bad, it's just different, and friendships are formed in the most unusual places.

The show takes place at the Deer Hill School Gymnasium Theater on Wednesday, May 8 and Thursday, May 9 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $5 each. Children under 4 are free. All proceeds go to the Deer Hill PSO to fund teacher grants and curriculum enrichment programs within the Deer Hill School community. For questions please contact Lisa Pratt at lisa.pratt@comcast.net. Please bring your family to support these wonderful kids and Deer Hill School all at the same time!

Candidates

On Monday, May 6th at 9:30 am, during Cohasset Café at the Lightkeepers, candidates for Selectman will discuss their views on elder issues, priorities for the Town, and the direction they feel Elder Affairs should be taking, short and long term. Questions will be submitted to candidates ahead of time. Each will be given a chance to offer in-depth and thoughtful answers that exemplify their method of leadership. All are welcome. As always during Cohasset Café, light refreshments will be served.

Mother's Day

On Wednesday, May 8, the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs will be sponsoring a Mother's Day Luncheon at 3 North Main St. The festivities start at 11 a.m. with the vocal renditions of Dwayne Sullivan, followed by a lunch provided by Mr. Dooley's. Join us to celebrate the special mothers in our lives. Please call 781-383-9112 no later than Monday May 6 to make your reservation.

Relay

The American Cancer Society Relay For Life is set for Friday, June 28 – Saturday June 29 at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. There are many new and exciting activities planned for the event this year, but are looking for more teams to sign up and get involved! The event is also seeking volunteers – walkers, cancer survivors, caregivers, community leaders, anyone wanting to make a difference – to organize and recruit fundraising teams, garner community support, coordinate logistics, seek refreshments and prizes, plan entertainment and lend a hand.

Please contact: Rebecca Ybarra at (508) 897-4343 or Rebecca.ybarra@cancer.org or committee member Jacqui Vitello at (781) 383-2668 or pjvit@aol.com. For more event specific information, please visit us atwww.relayforlife.org/CohassetMA. You can also pick up a team captain packet or more information at Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum at 100 Sohier St.

Baseball

The Baseball Players in the National & American Leagues, the American League and the Junior League will hold a CHS Spring Tune-Up Baseball camp on Wednesday, May 8th, which is an early released day. The event will be from 2-4:30 p.m.with registration being held at 2 pm and camp/training starting promptly at 2:30. [As space is limited, if you would like to reserve a spot, please email – k.doonan@comcast.net with the name and the age of the child who will be attending. This camp program will run weather permitting at The Barnes Baseball Complex and the cost is $25 per child.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Best-selling Boston author coming to town

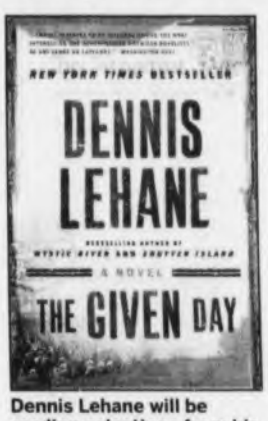
Dennis Lehane guest of Author Talks/Cohasset Reads

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Boston born and bred Dennis Lehane sits on the Boston Public Library Board of Trustees. It's no wonder, then, that the multiple best-selling author of ten novels, including "Mystic River," "Shutter Island" and "Gone, Baby, Gone" (those three have also become feature films) is a big library supporter.

"He is a huge library advocate, and he is very generous with his time and talents by speaking at libraries," said Jackie Rafferty, Director of the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library.

Cohasset's library is hosting Lehane as part of its Sunday AuthorTalks series and the town-wide "Cohasset Reads Together" program. The event takes place on Sunday, May 5 at the Cohasset High School auditorium (143 Pond Street). Lehane will be reading from his book, "The Given Day."



This is the first time the Author Talks and "Cohasset Reads" events have overlapped, said Rafferty.

"This event is a two for one. We're just thrilled that Dennis Lehane agreed to come and speak. He's such a popular author and 'The Given Day' is a town-wide read. It's perfect for a community reading program," Rafferty said.

Sunday's event starts at 4 p.m. and lasts until 7. The reading is followed by a wine and cheese reception and book signing at the Cohasset Historical Society. Admission is free, but tickets are required to get in. There were 500 tickets issued for the event and all have "sold out." Rafferty expects that at least 400 people will attend.

It may seem unusual that an event with such a well-known author could be offered for free. Lehane has even agreed to speak free of charge. The event is sponsored by Dean & Hamilton Real Estate and the Cook Estate; the wine and cheese is provided by A Taste of Wine & Spirit. Rafferty said that the Library Board of Trustees is grateful to the sponsors.

Cohasset's Buttonwood Books will also be on hand to sell Lehane's books during the event. Rafferty said that the authors' books are always sold during an author talks event.

This event closes out the library's Author Talks season. The new season starts in September and goes through May.

Rafferty said that the event's program committee is already in the process of planning the next season.

Life at CHS

May is packed with 'finals'

WHITNEY MALONE

Making up for these stressful two weeks, band and chorus members will go on the annual Music Trip (the last for us seniors!).

Can you believe it's May already? It's even harder to believe that this month will include me and my classmates' final days at CHS, as well as many other "lasts" as we transition into a new phase of our lives.

Within the next two weeks, beginning Monday until Friday the 17th, we seniors will take our last high school AP exams, just as many juniors and some sophomores experience "exam-week" stress for the first time. Fortunately, students are excused from classes in the afternoon if they have taken an AP exam that morning!

Making up for these stressful two weeks, band and chorus members will go on the annual Music Trip (the last for us seniors!) that Friday the 17th, where we'll spend the afternoon in Boston for a backstage tour of the Shubert and Wang Theaters, followed by a Blue Man Group performance that night!

Toward the end of May, we seniors will also attend our last CHS Arts Night on May 23rd, before our last day of classes that Friday the 24th (also Prom night). Every year at Arts Night, student artwork is displayed throughout the senior lounge and the Concert and Jazz Bands and Chorus Ensembles perform, with a small awards ceremony for the seniors ending the night.

This week, the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) assessed CHS for accreditation, which included interviewing a student panel on Sunday, and shadowing students and sitting-in on classes Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. As a member of the student panel, which included 10 students 6th-12th grade, it was somewhat nerve-wracking sitting on stage, speaking into a microphone in front of nearly 20 strangers, but it was even more interesting to see the NEASC members' fascination with our small, close-knit middle-high school. We students shared our perspective on CHS, highlighting most the ability to participate in various sports teams and clubs and the close relationships we have with teachers and each other on account of our relatively small school size. Like the other students, as well as our teachers, I was happy to take time out of my Sunday afternoon to represent my classmates and show our CHS pride! As we count down our final days, the idea of graduating and moving on from CHS grows more bittersweet. Fortunately, we have made countless memories throughout the past four years, and certainly have more to come within the next four weeks!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Sharing a message of hope

Play based on book by Hingham authors

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

Courage comes in many forms. For some, it's born of circumstances, or one's convictions. For others, it comes from being able to show those circumstances and convictions — vividly and truthfully — so that even more people can learn what courage means, and take from that a message of hope. That's the challenge the young actors from The Academy of the Company Theater of Norwell will take up when they perform "The Hiding Place" this week and next.

Based on the best-selling book by the same name, written by Hingham residents John and Elizabeth Sherrill, "The Hiding Place" tells the story of Corrie ten Boom and her family. The ten Booms hid Jews in their small house in Haarlem, the Netherlands, while the Nazis occupied that country. According to the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, the family belonged to the Dutch Reformed Church, which had taught them to believe that all people are equal before God. Several members of the ten Boom family also belonged to the Dutch resistance. Ten Boom cited her faith and her family's faith as their reason for helping Jews hide from the Nazis, and as what kept her going after her eventual arrest and imprisonment in the notorious Ravensbrück concentration camp. Corrie survived. Her sister Betsie did not, nor did her father Casper. Other members of her family also lost their lives. In 1967, the Yad Vashem Remembrance Authority recognized ten Boom as one of the "Righteous Among the Nations".

The performances on May 10th and 11th will be the formal East Coast premiere of this play. The theater has added some material with permission from the playwright.

Putting on this play has made the students come face to face with ugliness. One scene calls for a student actor to drag another down the stairs by her hair, and, according to The Company Theater Co-Artistic Director and Founder Zoe Bradford, " ... he had to learn how to deal with that."

Three of the student leads remarked that when they learned about the Holocaust in school, it didn't feel real to them. They said some teachers also downplayed the uncomfortable subject. Doing the play, however, has made their schoolwork come alive, become personal.

Catherine Andersen, 18, who goes to Hanover High School and plays Betsie, said that a demonstration of numbers hit hard. They counted the people in the room during rehearsal, she said, " ... and did the math. For each one of us in this room, 200,000 people died."

For Colie Smigliani, 18, who also goes to Hanover High and plays Corrie, meeting the Sherrills made the experience real and vivid in a way that reading the play hadn't. "Being able to talk to them, to know they knew Corrie, it made it all so professional."

Tony Beal, 18, who attends Hingham High and plays Casper, agreed. "They're amazing. When you're in the same space with them, it's just so filled with clean energy."

The Sherrills had brought items that ten Boom owned and bequeathed to them. Among these were a teapot and a star of David that had been sewn on a man's clothes.

Andersen said, "Betsie spent the family food money on a leaky teapot, and they brought the teapot. It was so amazing to hold that."

Beal agreed. "The teapot was so cool."

The Sherrills visited the troupe as part of the rehearsals. They also made a video of Elizabeth Sherrill recounting how she and her husband wrote the book, knowing Corrie ten Boom, and of their visit to the rehearsal. Many students posted comments about the visit later on Facebook, all positive, all awed by the experience. The short video will air after all performances to spark some discussion among the audience.

All performances includes not only those open to the public, but also several middle school groups, including those from Rockland, Bridgewater, and Marshfield. "Under our artistic mission is an educational component," Bradford said. "The kids will live it, that message, that story, those characters. That's a lesson they'll take with them the rest of their lives. It's a great experience for students to do, and for other students to see students doing it."

Book author Elizabeth Sherrill shares Corrie ten Boom's own teapot, a notable artifact from the story of Corrie ten Boom, with the cast of The Hiding Place at The Company Theatre.

Meanwhile, to get even more ready for this performance, Bradford has arranged for Rabbi Shira Joseph of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham to talk to the student actors. "She's very supportive of this project," Bradford said.

Bradford believes that the educational component to the teen academy encompasses more than history. "Any time you can create public awareness and change someone's life, well, that's a ministry, isn't it? That's a good thing. I hope we find other projects that will shine out to them."

The Academy of the Company Theater of Norwell involves about 200 students, and puts on two productions a year. Ages range from under ten to college. "Anyone can be involved, no matter their level of theater experience, so long as they're a student," Bradford said. She said the teen academy took off about six years ago when they divided the program between the younger ages and the teenagers.

"The Hiding Place" is not the first play the Academy has performed that explores controversial, delicate subject matter. Two years ago teen actors also took on "The Laramie Project", which examined the death of Matthew Sheppard.

But "The Hiding Place" seems personal to Bradford because she came to the play through meeting the Sherrills, the book's authors. She met them three years ago at St. John's Episcopal Church in Hingham, shortly after they'd moved here. "We exchanged stories," Bradford said. "They have amazing stories. They'd be here for the premiere, but they had already made plans to travel in Europe." The Sherrills are both in their upper eighties.

"We might not have taken the video just a few weeks into rehearsal," said Michelle McGrath, the theater's publicist, "if we hadn't known that they'd be gone, and now it's become integral to the teaching component of this show."

However the play has come to be produced here, and whatever the educational impact on the audiences who view it, the young actors are taking meaningful lessons away from it. "Because these are real people [we're playing], you have to be honest," Smigliani said. "So much of what you hear about World War II is dark and gloom. We didn't want to it to be like that, but to give a message of hope."

Her colleague Andersen agreed. "The Holocaust is the background. This story is about how this family tried to do something about it."

You can find more information about times and ticketing, as well as a link to the video of the Sherrills attending the students' rehearsal, at: companytheatre.com/academy.html.

METCO students tackle 'Tenacity Challenge'

Cohasset High School students participated in the second annual METCO Tenacity Challenge, an academic competition, held at Bedford High School on Saturday, April 6.

This was Cohasset's first year participating, and its team placed ninth out of 21 teams. Students competed in math and science bowls, a poetry competition and more. The team was led by Aleisa Gittens-Carle and Michelle Fonfield, along with teacher-coaches Cynthia Gordon (history), Kate McAlarney (math), and Dr. Ann Thomae (science).

A group of students presented to the School Committee this week and said that they learned about teamwork and accomplishing goals.

Middle School history teacher Gordon said that she was impressed that the students put in so much time preparing for this competition.

"They did all of this after school hours, on their own time," said Gordon. "We're very proud of their efforts."

Cohasset saves on health care costs

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"This is a great example of what the town was able to negotiate and get significant savings."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

Cohasset will realize savings on its town health care costs starting next fiscal year.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced this week that he managed to negotiate an increase of only a half-percent for premium renewal saving the Town over a quarter of a million dollars in Fiscal Year 2014, which starts on July 1, 2013.

"It's great news," Milanoski said. "We did a great job for the town. This is a great example of what the town was able to negotiate and get significant savings."

In late March, Cohasset's health care provider notified the town that there would be a 7.5 percent increase in the town's premium renewals for FY14. Milanoski said that for a family HMO plan, that would have resulted in a total annual cost of $22,160 per plan.

The town manager analyzed the town's claims, premiums and loss ratios and determined this rate increase was not justified. While finalizing budget details for the Annual Town Meeting, Milanoski invited quotes from other providers and explored all options to reduce cost to Cohasset taxpayers and employees. After analysis of several alternatives, Milanoski negotiated a 0.5 percent increase with the town's current health care provider, plus some minor increases in prescriptions medications.

Milanoski told the April 22 Town Meeting that he was trying to negotiate a lower increase with the health care provider, and he was able to accomplish that goal.

The town manager said that the town unions were helpful, quick to respond, and supportive of the health care package he negotiated.

The net result is a savings of $1,444 per family HMO plan in FY14. Cohasset currently participates at 69 percent of a family plan and 89 percent of an individual plan.

Milanoski stated, "These savings are in part the result of implementing private sector practices into the town government to provide more efficient and cost effective management of the Town without reducing services."

The cost savings will be put toward the Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) Trust Fund for transfer at the next annual Town Meeting, Milanoski added. The May 2012 Annual Town Meeting created an OPEB trust fund to start chipping away at the town's unfunded liability for retired town employee health care and pension costs, which is climbing to $38 million. This amount is equal to the town's anticipated revenue in FY15.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Lacrosse team bus accident

On the night of Tuesday, April 30, the Cohasset High School girl's varsity lacrosse team was in a single bus accident during their return trip from Mashpee. Four students received minor injuries in the incident, said Superintendent Barbara Cataldo.

The bus was taken out of commission and will be repaired. All of the girls were back on the field the following day playing in a home game.

Cataldo said that the school will "do diligence as we piece together the facts of the accident and make any necessary changes in our policies and procedures moving forward."

Last day of school voted

Thursday, June 27 will be the last day of school for the district, per the School Committee's vote. The last day of school for kindergarten is Friday, June 21.

Top marks for Cataldo

The School Committee evaluated Superintendent Barbara Cataldo during their Wednesday, May 1 meeting. In most categories, including communication, curriculum, and community engagement, the four members present scored Cataldo as exemplary. Board members said that they were pleased with the Cataldo's overall performance 18 months into her role as superintendent (Cataldo came on board in July 2011).

School Committee chair Jeanne Astino compiled the documents the committee members filled out to evaluate Cataldo. The summary will be presented at their next meeting.

Cradles to Crayons

Local non-profit Cradles to Crayons is thrilled to be working with Cohasset for a fun-filled, community-building day of service in the parking lot of the Cohasset Family Health Center located at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway on Sunday, May 5, from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. In the event of rain, the location will be moved to the Cohasset Sports Complex located at 34 Crocker Lane. People are invited to volunteer and are encouraged to bring new and like-new donations with them to the event.

Volunteers are still needed for this sorting event where collected donations will be checked for quality, sized, and organized. Vendors, including Nona's Homemade Ice Cream and Del's Lemonade, will be generously donating a portion of their profits to Cradles to Crayons.

A sign of times

Technology can be both a blessing and a curse.

The same devices that make it possible for children to easily access information in an instant for that research paper can also get them into some serious trouble.

The recent "sexting" incident at Bridgewater Middle School illustrates the point. No criminal charges were filed in the matter in which a 14-year-old girl voluntarily texted an "inappropriate" photo of herself to another student who then forwarded the image to other students. The students were disciplined for their actions but the incident has raised a host of questions and concerns for parents who may not have considered this kind of trouble.

Many parents today equip their children as young as 10 years old with cell phones so they can keep in touch, let their parents know when to pick them up or call for help in case of an emergency. However, most mobile phones sold today are not simply phones. The majority comes with cameras as well as data and texting plans.

What can spell trouble is the combination of camera phones and unlimited texting with the questionable judgment and impulsive tendencies of a typical middle schooler.

Instances of sexting and cyber bullying through social networking sites are making the news nationwide. While in many ways children are not fundamentally different today than they were years ago, the instant access they have to obtain and transfer information to others is vastly different and can be embarrassing at best, or dangerous at worst.

What seems like just a short time ago – we did not have mobile phones or digital cameras. Unless you had a Polaroid that would spit out a photo on the spot, any photos you took were on a roll of film that needed to be developed. Once the photos were developed, the only way to share would be by US Mail or hand delivery, allowing the sender plenty of time to rethink whether the photo should be torn up or saved.

Along with providing our children with the most up-to-date mobile devices – serious, ongoing discussions must ensue about the appropriate use of those devices and the consequences of being too quick to press "send." Children need to know that actions have consequences. What might seem like innocent fun can turn into a negative situation all too quickly. Parents must do their best to supervise their children's behavior when they use their computer, iPad or cell phone.

Uplifting words about spring

Louise Smullen writes a monthly column for the Cohasset Mariner: Senior Scene. But it seems like just a few years ago (OK, perhaps 30) that she was the leader of my daughter's Girl Scout troop here in Cohasset. The gentle, charming, folk wisdom and humor she shared with those girls then (and their helper Moms) continues. In case readers missed Louise's most recent column, here is an excerpt:

"On my way back home from church on Sunday, I noticed that the Bradford pear trees in the village had burst into bloom. Enjoy them, for their season is all too short. Then there is also my favorite hedge of forsythia on North Main Street, which I have enjoyed seeing every year since 1947. In spite of the terrible things that have happened both close to home and in the wider world, may we enjoy the budding of new life around us."

Still sharing, still teaching. With a modicum of poetic words you have uplifted us all. Thanks Louise.

Marie McCarthy,
Old Pasture Road

Heartfelt thanks for caring community

We live in a good and caring community, and I know first hand that is true. My deepest thanks to those who set up meal delivery schedules, saw to our transportation needs and so many other thoughtful deeds after I returned from a hospitalization with my right arm fully encased in a cast, and dealing with numerous cuts and bruises – all due to a bad fall. These wonderful "volunteers" provided my brother, Tom, and me with delicious home-cooked meals, cheerful visits, and kind words of encouragement. We were also cheered by the daily mail that brought so many good wishes for recovery. A special thanks to two concerned people who called 911 right after my fall and to our EMT personnel for their quick response. This is how I know we live in a good and caring community.

Update on First Parish Meetinghouse

Dear Cohasset friends and neighbors:

You must be wondering what is going on at the First Parish Meeting House. The restoration project now seems endless and one side of the building is covered in a very ugly green tarp. Not a pretty site when we round the bend on North Main Street and see that lovely, iconic building on the Common. Well, here is an update.

The window replacement partially underwritten by Community Preservation funds is nearly complete.

The painting of the exterior is also finished but in working on the clock tower portion of the building, the painters discovered significant rot in the interior beams. This deterioration is serious enough that it requires immediate attention before we can replace the siding and finish the painting.

We have engineers' drawings in hand and are going out to bid for this work. Our small congregation feels an enormous responsibility to honor and preserve the Meeting House. We have spent a lot of money over the last year to meet that responsibility. We are also very grateful to the townspeople for recognizing that the Meeting House is an historical treasure and worthy of public support.

We want that tarp gone, as we know you do. We are working hard to make that happen and welcome your ideas.

COMMENTARY

Assault weapons vs. children's safety

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

I want play-dates and birthday parties and math night at school. I want a society free from gun violence. Free from assault weapons.

Recently my husband and I celebrated our daughter's sixth birthday. A happy day. A party full of friends. Happiness and friends are exactly want you want for your child, as they often come together.

Yet a side of me was sadder that ever. And the same was for my husband. We kept thinking of the parents who this year won't celebrate their child's birthday. We thought of Newtown.

Twenty children and six educators were killed in five minutes with an assault weapon. Right the kind of arm that the Congress didn't include in the plan to reduce gun violence. Some congressmen are not sure that banning military weapons will reduce gun violence. Well, this massacre wouldn't have happened with a handgun. Every policeman can explain you why.

The solution suggested by the Congress to the problem of mass-shooting is universal background check. It's like giving a cup of water to hydrate the body of someone dying of pneumonia. "Here have some water." Yet what the patient needs are specific medicaments.

Universal background check is essential. It's the minimum of what we can aspire to have, given that we live in a civilized society and not in a country at war.

Even Sylvester Stallone said that no one needs an assault weapon to hunt or protect his family. (He used more colorful words than mine to express himself.)

The weapon used to kill the Newtown Angels should be banned legally and morally. If the Congress doesn't act now, I ask you: when?

How can we keep on living as if nothing happened?

I can't.

That's why I write about gun control. Writing smoothes my pain. Knowing that someone will read my words and will agree with me on this makes me feel less lonely.

Big newspapers don't talk a lot about gun control. The editor of an important parenting magazine just told me "enough with article on gun violence." I agree: enough. Yet as long as gun violence will be part of our daily life, we have the moral duty to write and publish articles on this topic.

Then there are community papers like the Cohasset Mariner and Hingham Journal who are never tired of keeping our attention focused on what matters. To them I am so grateful.

I moved to Cohasset six months ago and I have been living in the US for six years. I am Italian, as some of your ancestors were. Maybe your grandma was from my hometown.

Today I'll write to the Congress. Again. Even if, like your grandma, I am not American. I'll write, as I love this country. I love children. I want happiness for them. For all of them. I want play-dates and birthday parties and math night at school. I want a society free from gun violence. Free from assault weapons.

I'll write as this problem is not just about American laws. It is about humanity. It is about who we are. The Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius wrote in his memoir, "The measure of a man is the worth of the things he cares about."

Well, If we don't care about our children's safety and future, we are very very little persons. Minuscule, worthless beings. Bugs with i-phones and computers and credit cards.

The Congress needs to hear your voice. Your voice counts. Congress is now back at work. Daffodils are in bloom. In the language of flowers, they mean rebirth.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

As parents, we all experience moments with our children that we say will stick with us forever. Some of those moments are exhilarating and some are heartbreaking.

It seems that as I sit down to write these articles, I do so wearing a variety of different hats. Sometimes it seems as if I am wearing the hat of an editorialist, other times a social commentator, and yes I've even tried on the humorist hat; although I am not sure if that one fits so well. For this article, I've grabbed yet another hat, in fact my favorite, hat but not one that I thought I'd be wearing while writing; it's my Dad hat.

As parents, we all experience moments with our children that we say will stick with us forever. Some of those moments are exhilarating and some are heartbreaking. While some will truly stay with us forever, some drift away as the years go by. Last Sunday I had one of those moments that left me teary eyed with pride.

All we want in life is what's best for our children. But let's face it, there's a fine line between letting them run free exploring life, and wanting to be there to protect them when we think it's needed. I think many would agree, one of the more gut-wrenching moments as a parent is watching your child learn the hard reality of youth sports while confined to the sidelines. Well try that, knowing that your child has just spent the better part of the last six months learning how to walk again.

Last October in a fluke accident our 12-year-old, Andrew, broke his right femur in four places. And while there are very few things worse than riding in an ambulance with your child screaming at you "Help me, please help me" with not a thing you can do; it only takes 30 minutes at Children's Hospital to realize "eh, it's only a broken leg; at least we'll be coming home." After five days at Children's we left with Andrew's leg held together with a plate and a bunch of screws. As intimidating as this was, it was made even worse by the fact that he was on Oxycodone and Valium for the pain. For the record, if you needed a reason why not to do drugs, spend time watching a 12-year-old struggle on Oxycodone, it's not pretty.

A broken leg cannot be compared with battling cancer, nor is it on par with some of the horrific injuries that some endured two weeks ago at the marathon, but that doesn't mean that it cannot totally disrupt the life of a child. The last six months have been at best a grind for Andrew. While other kids were out sledding or playing hoops, Andrew was at physical therapy trying to bend his leg again, and then eventually walk. The recovery has been filled with heart breaking moments, but to his credit Andrew has never quit. With help from so many including: The doctors at Children's, the team at Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy, John Loupos at Jade Forest, Andy at Sport Specific Fitness, the staff at his school, and many others, Andrew is now at the point where he can walk. But he still has a long way to go – which brings us to last Sunday.

Over the winter, without knowing whether or not Andrew would even be able to walk correctly, Alan Vater drafted him to be on his Little League team. Hindered by his leg, Andrew has been limited in what he can do, but he's grinding it out. On Sunday, as fate would have it, Andrew found himself at the plate at the bottom of the last inning with the bases loaded, the score tied, two outs and two quick strikes against him. If this were "The Natural," the music would have cued, the next pitch would have connected with the bat and would have soared out over the fences. But that wasn't the case. Instead, he swung at the next pitch and hit a slow roller onto the grass along the third base line. Both the runner on third and the third baseman broke in and Andrew ran/hobbled toward first. The runner crossed home, and now the only question was would Andrew have enough speed to beat a throw to first base. What seemed like an hour and twenty minutes to yours truly, ended with Andrew's foot hitting first base – Safe! They'd won the game, and for an instant the six long months of work paid off for a 12-year-old boy.

Neil Armstrong's 1969 step onto the surface of the moon was the result of years of hard work put in by so many, but the stepping out of the lunar module was the courageous act of one. "That's one small step for man; one giant leap for mankind." As I watched Andrew run the best he could to beat the throw, I couldn't but help think of Armstrong's words.

Thanks for reading, I love being his Dad.

One last note: Congratulations to Gabriel Gomez for his victory on Tuesday. Gabriel was also at Sunday's game cheering on his son.

IN GOOD FAITH

Theology on Tap

THE REV. TIM SCHENCK

We'll grab a pint, listen to one another's stories, and talk about a topic of interest.

Men are lonely creatures. At least suburban men who work, commute, and have families. No self-respecting man would articulate this publicly since it sounds either whiny or weak but it's true. We used to pride ourselves on our close friendships be it the "glory days" of high school or the keg-stand fraternity days of yore.

But that was before the big "R" of responsibility took over our lives. Work, marriage, children, pets, the yard. They're all wonderful things — mostly. Over time, almost imperceptibly, however, they crowd out our male friendships and suddenly many of us find ourselves left with a bunch of acquaintances but little depth in our relationships.

From the male perspective, women just seem to be better at nurturing adult friendships. They meet friends for coffee, they volunteer together, they have work friends, they join book groups (or as I like to call them, wine drinking parties). My own wife certainly checks all these boxes and she's happier for it.

Yes, this is a gross generalization but there does seem to be some truth here. A lot of men simply don't have close friendships. Sure, we have buddies from our college days with whom we share fond memories, some printable, some not. But they generally live all over the country and, while there might be an annual golf outing or fishing trip, that's hardly sustainable for the other 362 days of the year.

We nod to people on the commuter train and we're on a first name basis with Jeff from Accounting. But the guard's always up, the protective emotional armor is always donned. We work hard not to show weakness or vulnerability which is why we wear power suits and deflect intimacy with a quip or by sticking to safe topics like sports or carburetors.

But what about our humanity? Where do men go to talk about the things at the depths of our souls? Events like the bombing at the Boston Marathon bring our vulnerability to the fore and yet we have few outlets to process our emotions. So they get buried and fester until our hearts become fossilized or unhealthy behaviors emerge.

At St. John's we're trying to remedy this by introducing a men's group. Now, this isn't your typical church men's group where a bunch of guys get together in the nether regions of the church to gorge themselves on pancakes, give each other hugs, and tell themselves that Jesus was really a man's man — someone to shoot pool with or hang out in the bleachers at Fenway.

We're calling this venture Theology on Tap. We won't meet at church but in the upstairs room at the Liberty Grille in Hingham. We'll grab a pint, listen to one another's stories, and talk about a topic of interest. God's just as present when a bunch of people gather in his name at a bar as at church on a Sunday morning (just don't tell anyone).

This won't solve all the problems of the world but hopefully it will chip away at the hardness of our hearts that has built up through the years. Hopefully, over time, it will provide an outlet for friendship and some conversations that get below the surface of everyday life.

Perhaps you'll join us on Thursday, May 23rd at 8 pm for our first session. And if not, we can always set up a time to go out for some good old-fashioned hunting and gathering.

FOR THE RECORD

Been down this road before

GREGORY MATHIS

For a couple of years I wrote a column titled Sole to Soul, which chronicled my experience and perspective on local road races.

Before being bitten by the news bug, I was a sports reporter, then a sports editor.

Sports sparked my interest in journalism at an early age as I immersed myself in the sports sections of the Boston daily newspapers and read every inch of copy weekly in Sports Illustrated.

By the time I entered seventh grade, I knew what I wanted to do.

One of the highlights of this early stage of my career was writing a sports column titled Seventh Inning Stretch. I tried to emulate my childhood sports writing idol Leigh Montville in how I tackled each column, taking an idea, turning it upside down and shaking it around a little before coming up with a different take on a particular topic.

In addition to Seventh Inning Stretch, I decided to incorporate another sporting passion into my writing – running. For a couple of years I wrote a column titled Sole to Soul, which chronicled my experience and perspective on local road races.

The column originated at a time when charity road races were just becoming fashionable. I ran in many "first" annual races, and tried to detail what made each of them unique. And there was a lot of uniqueness. From strawberry shortcake (Plympton) to readings from James Joyce (Dedham), each experience was fun and exciting. I was thrilled to have the opportunity to combine my love of running and writing.

Sole to Soul brought me to road races in practically every town on the South Shore and Cape Cod. I was much younger, so it was common for me to run a 10K every other week. I'm no longer capable of keeping up with that pace, but with the warmer weather finally here, I'm looking to run more than one race a year.

Looking back on those days, here's a list of my five favorite races.

5. Clancy-Darling, Pembroke – I ran this once with my daughter on Father's Day. It was a great way to spend the day and I was thrilled I had introduced her to running.

4. SIDS, Hingham – This was a memorable race because I came in third for my age group – 20-29. First and only time that has happened. I also won a bicycle in the raffle, so it really was a lucky day.

3. Run to the Rock, Plymouth – I ran the 10K in the augural race 19 years ago. It was originally a fundraiser for the North Plymouth Neighborhood Watch group, and is now a benefit for the Plymouth Boys & Girls Club. It's also the last race I've run as I participated in last September's race.

2. James Joyce Ramble, Dedham – A great race, not only for its literary appeal, but a good time with a lot of runners and a great after-race experience.

1. Falmouth Road Race – Where else can recreational athletes compete in the same events as world class athletes? Falmouth, and all the major marathons attract some of the best runners from around the world. And there we are running in the same race, albeit well behind the leaders.

What are your favorite road races and why? Send me an email or go onto my For The Record Blog and comment.

Markey, Gomez win primary

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

A special election will be held June 25 for voters to decide if Markey or Gomez will replace Kerry, who held the seat since 1985. Currently filling the position is interim U.S. Sen. William "Mo" Cowan.

Tuesday's primary election for the U.S. Senate was a study in contrasts as Democrats chose a 36-year congressman running on his record and GOP voters backed a political novice promising to be a new breed of Republican.

U.S. Rep. Ed Markey, D-5th, secured about 57 percent of the vote, a decisive margin over his rival, Rep. Stephen Lynch, D-8th.

Republican Gabriel Gomez, a former Navy SEAL and private equity investor from Cohasset, trounced his opponents with just over 50 percent of his party's vote.

Following a distant second was Michael Sullivan, a former federal prosecutor, with about 36 percent of the vote. State Rep. Dan Winslow, R-Norfolk, trailed with 13 percent.

In his victory speech, Gomez, whose only previous election experience is an unsuccessful run for selectman in his town, said he is no slick-talking politician and invoked his upbringing by Colombian immigrant parents.

He talked about term limits and the national debt, but he also tried to strike an independent tone, saying if voters want a rigid partisan, "I'm not your guy."

"If you're looking for someone who will reach across the aisle, please join me," he said.

In his speech, Markey praised Lynch as a "warrior for working families."

Markey touted his experience, from pressing to screen airline cargo for bombs to rewriting telecom regulations, and said he has a track record of bipartisanship. He vowed to fight for "common sense gun laws" and to protect Social Security and Medicare.

The congressman said he would try to pass a constitutional amendment barring unlimited campaign expenditures by corporations, unions and advocacy groups, and he called on Gomez to sign a pledge asking out-of-state groups not to spend money in the race.

Markey also recalled his past, noting his father was a milkman.

"Every day he got up to deliver the goods, and in the United States Senate, I am going to deliver results," he said.

Lynch addressed cheering supporters at a post-election party at Moseley's On the Charles in Dedham.

"Because of you, we almost did it, and no one gave us a shot at this," Lynch said in a hoarse voice. "We thought the people of Mass. should have a say."

Markey's win came as little surprise – several polls in the lead-up to the election pegged him as the frontrunner.

Carrying Kerry's endorsement and support from other members of the Democratic establishment, Markey also raised $4.8 million, a little more than twice as much as Lynch, in the first three months of the year, according to the Federal Election Commission.

The Republican field was harder to predict, though a Suffolk Poll a day before the primary showed Gomez in the lead. He raised more than both his opponents combined and outspent them by a wide margin.

Sullivan thanked his disappointed supporters at a campaign party in Abington.

"We made it tough for him, but unfortunately, we just didn't get enough votes," he said.

Turnout was low in many polling places.

This is the fourth time in five years that Bay State voters have had to make decisions on U.S. Senate candidates. After a primary in 2009, voters went on to elect Republican Scott Brown over Democrat Martha Coakley in a 2010 special Senate election. Last year, voters sent Brown packing and elected Democrat Elizabeth Warren to a full six-year term.

Compared to those lively contests, the primary race got off to a quiet start this past winter. In debates, Markey and Lynch largely focused on domestic issues and their backgrounds.

Candidates suspended their campaigns after the April 15 bombing at the Boston Marathon killed three people and wounded more than 260 others. The races picked up again a week later with candidates squaring off on security and terrorism.

A special election will be held June 25 for voters to decide if Markey or Gomez will replace Kerry, who held the seat since 1985. Currently filling the position is interim U.S. Sen. William "Mo" Cowan.

GOMEZ

your guy," said Gomez. "I'm an independent voice and a new kind of Republican."

Gomez said that he is running to change the status quo in Washington and ensure that others also have the chance to achieve the American dream, too.

"I'm concerned that if we stay on the same path right now, my kids and your kids may not have the same chance I had," he said. "Each generation should pass off a better country than when they started."

Gomez noted that back in 1976, when he was playing Little League baseball, his opponent, Markey, was elected to Congress.

"Albert Einstein said the definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over, expecting the same result," said Gomez. "Congress is full of politicians... Washington has had enough. Send the same person down there, you're going to get the same result."

In conclusion, the candidate from Cohasset said that he will bring the following mentality to the Senate position, if elected: "I will approach the job with a military man's discipline, father's sensitivity, and a business man's experience."

Cohasset abuzz

The town has been buzzing since Tuesday night, when a celebratory party for Gomez was held at the Red Lion Inn.

Ray Kasperowicz, chair of the Cohasset Republican Committee, said Wednesday that he was surprised by Gomez's victory.

"I would have never predicted that this was even possible a few months ago, but he pulled it off," Kasperowicz said of Gomez. "It's great."

Kasperowicz said that he thinks Gomez is the first Cohasset resident in town history to win a state-wide primary. He also thinks that Gomez has an "excellent shot" at winning the seat.

"He's got a good resume and conducted a very successful campaign to beat two seasoned veterans," said Kasperowicz. "I think it'll be interesting to see what kind of voters he pulls out... He may attract voters who are just looking for somebody different so he fits that bill, and he's got a young, attractive family, and that's all good."

The Republican committee chair also said that his committee has Gomez's back. "We're in his corner and are there to help out."

David Farrag of the town Republican committee was also shocked by, but happy with, Gomez's win, and what it could mean for Cohasset.

"It's surreal that it's happening, but it is," said Farrag. "I think it's left everyone speechless. It's certainly exciting for Cohasset and has created a buzz we haven't seen here in a long time."

As exciting as it's been watching Gomez ascend the political ladder from Boston businessman to Senate candidate to GOP winner of the primary, Farrag predicted that things are about to get crazier. And for Gomez, the pressure is on.

"It's going to be a wild ride," Farrag said. "The primary and general elections are totally different. The lights are going to get hotter, there's going to be national attention, [the race] is going to be one on one... All of that attention funnels to the two [opponents], so that's going to be interesting to see."

Farrag predicts a "tough race" against Markey, but believes "it's certainly winnable" for Gomez.

"He's got some great staff and he's run a professional campaign," Farrag said. "What's missing in the [election] story is that he won it just like a Navy pilot would, in the air and on the air, having the commercials go from one end of the state to the other, telling biographically who he was."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, a Gomez supporter, said that he took Tuesday as a vacation day.

"I'm a strong supporter of Gabriel Gomez," Milanoski said. "He's got a lot of good ideas we need to listen to. Gabe has four kids in the community, he's been a baseball coach for many years, and many people know and respect him. He's earned everything he's done in life and is a good role model for many people."

Milanoski also commented on the buzz Gomez's victory creates. "I think it'll bring a lot of positive attention to Cohasset," he said.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Najmi running for Housing Authority

"I worked for many years in a New York state museum. New York required children to take courses in local history, helping them to develop a hands-on sense of place and purpose in their communities. Growing up in Cohasset in the 1950s, we had a natural sense of place. We were free to roam. Townspeople knew us and our families. Everyone seemed to have a home, however small, and few people – young or old – seemed to leave merely because they no longer had a place to stay. The best part of growing up in a small town was feeling that cohesion and sense of belonging.

"I want to continue serving on the Cohasset Housing Authority Board because I believe that in a new century, old values matter. Everyone still needs a place. I will work creatively to maintain good accessible housing for our growing elderly population and any others who need it."

—Virginia Laugelli Najmi, resident of senior housing at 60 Elm Street.

LETTER

PSO Playground Committee extends its thanks

The PSO Playground Renovation Committee is pleased to report that our April 5th basketball fundraiser was a great success, raising nearly $17,000 towards the planned renovation of the playground at Deer Hill School this summer. We'd like to thank all who attended, the players, the volunteers and the following individuals for their special contributions. Emcee Phil Mahoney; Lily Sestito & JJ's Dairy Hut; Susan Franklin and Del's Lemonade; Colin Bell and Don Roine; Athletic Director Ron Ford and custodian Bob Tuscher.

Additional thanks to our generous silent auction and raffle donors, who include: A Taste of Wine & Spirits, Darilynn's, Willow Salon, Ashley Caulfield, Balance Studio, Paperscapes, South Shore Athletic Club, Linda Bolster, Cohasset Sports Complex, Mathnasium, Good Sport, The Music Circus, Strecker Eye Care, Jake's Seafood, Wahlburgers, Feng Shui, Your Nutritional Best, Mike Stevens, John Nash, Hoadley Martinez Architects, Cohasset Collision, Open Doors Yoga Studio, Ted Carr, Cohasset Swim Center, The Cohasset Drama Club, Kennedy's Country Gardens, Herzog Design, Dahlia's Salon, Fresh Feast, Cohasset Tennis Club, Cohasset Candy Company, Atlantic Bagel, Mangia Neapolitan Pizzeria, Laura Reed, Buttonwood Books & Toys, and Kevin Dykas.

We would also like to thank the residents and town offices of Cohasset, and especially the Community Preservation Committee, for voting in support of funding our project at Town Meeting.

Thank you again, Cohasset, for your generosity of support and spirit!

— Franchesca Arnold for The PSO Deer Hill Playground Renovation Committee

Question of the week

For Selectman candidates:

We often hear of a "school vote" or "school voting block." Whether or not that is the case – what are you doing to attract the votes of parents of schoolchildren and how can you assure them that the quality of education in Cohasset will not suffer as the town deals with its fiscal realities?

Russell Bonetti

I hope to be the Selectman for everyone in town, not for just a perceived "school vote". We build Cohasset as a strong community when all of our departments – schools, public safety, and municipal services are second to none.

Cohasset schools deliver educational excellence that is at one of the highest levels in the state. This is one of the key reasons our average property values held their own though the recent recession far better than in most other communities. To keep delivering this excellence, we must continue to find ways to maximize the resources we have. Cohasset is fortunate to have groups like the PSO and the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF). Both go to extraordinary lengths to help our schools continue performing at high levels.

As Chair of the Community Preservation Committee, I was proud to work with the Deer Hill Playground Committee to help rehabilitate the playground, making it ADA compliant in the process.

Having a technology officer shared by the Town and the schools both keeps our schools on the cutting edge of technology, and also delivers efficiencies across school and town budgets.

As selectman, I will work with the schools to help find even greater scale efficiencies via regional purchasing. I will work with our School Committee to find consensus on all the issues we face.

With one of your two votes for selectman on May 11, I can help restore that consensus and mutual respect among all the Town's boards and committees. I'd appreciate your support.

Steve Gaumer

As the father of three, all who have attended Cohasset schools, I share the concerns of parents of school age children, chief among them that our schools effectively carry out their mission of educating our kids.

By Massachusetts state law, the responsibility for the management of the school district rests with the elected members of the School Committee and the Superintendent. By law, the School Committee and the Superintendent present a total budget recommendation to the Annual Town Meeting, for approval by the voters. In theory, the Selectmen have no influence over how the school budget is put together.

In reality, the Selectmen and the Town Manager work with the Superintendent and the School Board to set the annual budget. The Town contributes 61 percent of local receipts to the school district budget in addition to the costs of health and retirement benefits, administration and capital expenditure. This arrangement allows the School Committee to administer their budget to support their core, education mission.

I believe the proper role of Selectmen is to provide consistent, predictable fiscal leadership, so that the school committee and administration can effectively carry out their core mission. The Selectmen can further enhance the educational experience through a thoughtful capital plan that maintains the building facilities and infrastructure. As chairman of the Capital Budget Committee, I have actively promoted this approach, including funding for computers, buses, recreational facilities and building maintenance. With your vote on May 11, I will pledge to continue my record of fiscal stewardship.

Lee Jenkins

I am a supporter of the Cohasset Schools. Moving here when my oldest was one, I spent many years as a parent of school children raising two daughters in the Cohasset system. With a great Cohasset education in hand my daughters received engineering degrees from Northwestern, Stanford and my alma mater Tufts.

I am proponent of excellence in education and an active supporter of CEF. As a Tufts Alumni Admissions Interviewer, I am familiar with current trends in education and in contact with many school families.

Throughout the years there have always been challenges for dollars and attempts to pit one group against another instead of working together for solutions.

As an elected official it is important to keep abreast on issues that will impact all segments of the town. When I cast the only NO vote for the 10 percent Avalon expansion, I did so the schools would not be adversely affected.

Continued excellence requires financial responsibility and vigilance. We had a wake up call at the 2005 Town Meeting with the School Budget Investigation Report. Since then finances have straightened out utilizing the monthly reporting by-law I sponsored. With the strong financial management I helped implement and the cooperation between town and Schools management we are on the road to seeing our town remain one of the top 25 Coastal Towns to live in the US with our schools in the top 10.

I ask for your support on May 11 to continue the progress made to date.

Karen Quigley

Public education is a cornerstone of our nation and it has always been Cohasset's goal to provide a first-rate education for our children. Cohasset has highly ranked schools because our commitment to them continues to be a top priority. Our investment in our teachers and facilities is good for families, for property values, for us all. That is why the 'school block' in Cohasset has traditionally been multigenerational.

I am committed to working with the school committee and the superintendent to maintain that excellence, as well as to maintaining the facilities, so taxpayers may be assured their investment in both is protected.

Good leadership is essential in order to balance this goal with our present fiscal constraints. As a selectman, I worked to include the school committee in the budget planning discussions to begin to bridge the divide between the 'town side' and the 'school side' of the budget. By creating this collaboration, all the groups of the town were able to learn from one another and work in partnership. As your selectman, I will continue this cooperation and make sure we maintain and build upon current successes to ensure our school system remains one of the best in Massachusetts.

This election is critical to changing the direction of our town and restoring a more respectful and reasonable community where diverse groups work together for what's best for all. I will work to lead us in that direction. Please give me one of your two votes on May 11.

Candidate profiles next week

This was the final week for Question of the Week. We thank the candidates for participating and believe it served an important public service. Next week, the Mariner will feature profiles of the four candidates for selectman with their photographs. Each selectman candidate will be emailed a questionnaire to fill out.

During the course of the campaign, candidates were also invited to submit a formal announcement with their photograph. Steve Gaumer's formal announcement and photo were submitted for the Friday, April 5 edition and ran that week. The other candidates submitted their announcements this week and they appear on page 23.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

Girls start season with eight consecutive wins

By William Wassersug

For fans, players and coaches alike, you couldn't ask for anything better than what the Cohasset girls tennis team has accomplished into about the halfway mark of the season.

Through their first eight matches, the team was 8-0 and winning in different ways.

"It hasn't been an easy road," coach GiGi Meehan said. "We opened with Hingham and handed them their only loss."

One of the more anticipated matchups was Hingham's No. 1 Emma Alderman against Cohasset No. 1 Emma Davis.

Davis notched the win in that one.

"It was a good match," Meehan said. "We looked forward to that matchup. There are a lot of matches where there isn't much competition. It's hard for Emma D. to be challenged. Emma Alderman could help that."

Davis won the match and Cohasset took the match.

"It was goof for Emma," Meehan said. "She was preparing to go play in the Easter Bowl, focus on her schoolwork, team tennis, confirmation and driver ed. She was able to double up with good competition with everything happening."

On the bigger scale, Meehan has 21 girls on the team this season.

The Cohasset High School girl's lacrosse team had a full slate of games over the past week and started off last Friday with a very tough game against one of the best teams in the state, Duxbury.

The Skippers scored the first goal of the game with Kathryn Dunn feeding Kristin Alexander but it was all Duxbury for the rest of the first half as they took a 14-2 lead into the break. The Skippers battled hard the rest of the way but could not make up the huge gap and lost 16-6.

Next up was a long road trip to Mashpee on Tuesday and the team fared much better, winning easily 15-2.

It's been a bit of a mixed bag for the Cohasset baseball team over the past week.

The Skippers have been playing decently, but have made just enough mistakes to put a hold on any chance of an easy road to the playoffs or a league title.

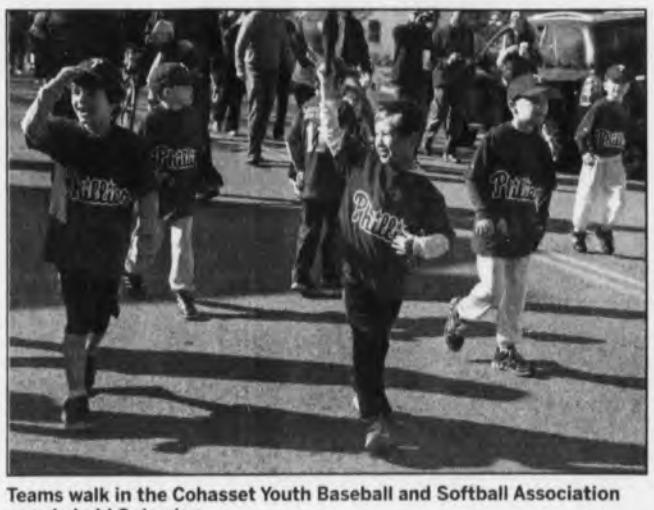
After a tough 6-5 loss to East Bridgewater on Tuesday, Cohasset fell to 5-6 and had coach Pete Afanasiw a little confused.

"We're making physical mistakes," he said. "We're having balls off gloves, throwing balls away, just not making plays. Today we gave up four unearned runs. Guys are scoring who shouldn't be on base. You can't do that against quality teams."

That said, Afanasiw is looking at the bigger picture.

"Our goal is making the tournament. We're 5-6 and have nine more shots to get five wins," he said. "Once we get in the tournament, anything can happen."

In the East Bridgewater loss, Terence Doonan allowed just two earned runs against one of the best lineups in the South Shore League.



"We have quality players," he said. "We're just not getting the defense or hitting the real quality pitching on a consistent basis. The effort is there. We work hard in practice. We just have to battle it out.

DAY CAMP OR OVERNIGHT CAMP?
QUESTIONS TO FRAME YOUR FAMILY'S SUMMER CAMP SEARCH

By Lucy Norvell, Director of Public Information, American Camp Association, New England

Which is better: day camp or overnight camp? This excellent and frequently asked question doesn't have a simple answer. It has a few. Here they are:

Yes! It depends. The answer varies, outlined below.

Many children attend both day and overnight camp in the same summer (often one each summer, one after the other). Some families find that a combination of day and overnight camp experiences is optimal.

The question to ask is, "What is best for your child this summer?"

What IS day camp? Day camps typically serve children ages 3-15 during the daytime. The length of the camp day can vary, but day, school day, and extended day are the most common. Sometimes camps provide transportation to day camp and sometimes families provide it. Day camps can be found in a variety of locations ranging from private land to school campuses, from reservations to the grounds centers or nonprofit organizations. And, what IS overnight camp? Overnight Camps (also referred to as Resident or Sleep Away Camps) usually serve children ages 6+.* Campers stay away from home for the length of the session.

Day camps serve the youngest of campers as well as many children/campers who might not feel comfortable separating from parents overnight. Campers typically come at the end of the day to rest and refresh! Day camp can be a great introduction to the world of summer camp. But day camp is not just for new campers; experienced campers of all ages find challenging and interesting programming in day camp settings. Families typically choose day camps that are close to home, to work, or somewhere in between. Location drives a day camp search in a big way. That's way it's easy to search by cities/towns around a zip code and by state in the ACA's new Find A Camp Tool online.

Overnight campers should be ready to be away overnight. While a successful night or two away from home prior to going to overnight camp is recommended, children need not have been away from home for several nights – just one or two will do! Overnight campers range in age too – from six or seven at the youngest to eighteen at the oldest. Living, learning, playing, and experiencing life together 24/7 is very popular with children of all ages. Being away from their families for the length of the session while on a resident camp adventure creates a sense of independence that's highly beneficial – and which prepares children and teens well for college and life beyond.

Day or Overnight is an important question to ask at the very beginning of a camp search. Some children do attend both types of camp in the same summer, but typically families identify the day camp and the overnight camp in separate searches. It's easy to use the online Find A Camp tool for each type of camp search you conduct for each prospective camper in the family. A great beginning point for your camp search is the Find A Camp tool. The first question they will ask you is Day or Overnight?

Bruins to face Rangers in Classics final

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Classics Div. semifinals were classic games in the South Coastal Hockey League.

The Bruins, who lost 3-2 to the Red Wings in the Fall Championship game, gained a measure of revenge.

Marshfield's John Zimmer picked up the rebound of Mike Martin's shot on the power play with 7:34 left, and the Bruins went on to win 1-0 in the Classics Div. semifinals win over the Red Wings. Pembroke's Jim Stone stopped 21 shots for the shutout.

The Red Wings were the last Classics team to pitch a shutout as Rick Welch pitched a 3-0 shutout over the Maple Leafs in the Winter 2012 semifinals.

The Bruins will play the Rangers in the Winter Championship.

The Rangers' Lou Sideropoulos scored with 1:04 left to pull out a 3-2 win over the Maple Leafs.

Bob Donahoe and Jeff Uva scored the other goals for the Rangers.

Dave Evans of Marshfield had a goal and an assist and Rockland's Marty DeCourcey scored a goal for the Leafs, who led the game 1-0 and 2-1. Marshfield's Chris Harrington had two assists for the Leafs.

The Legends Div. Winter Championship will feature the third and fourth seeded teams as the Stingers will face the Toros.

The fourth-seeded Toros got two goals from Paul Brinkman while Pembroke's Peter Cleary and Dennis Yates had a goal each in their 4-2 win over the top-seeded Sharks.

Mike Zucarelli and Richard Petrosino of Marshfield both scored a goal and Art Riccio had two assists for the Sharks.

The Stingers lost to the Saints in the Legends Div. Fall championship, but they got three goals and an assist from Scott Kelly of Pembroke in their 7-1 win.

Mark Halil of Hingham scored two goals, Chris Poudrier and Paul Smyth added a goal and an assist each for the Stingers. Scituate's Alan Smith had two assist in the game for the Stingers, while John Currie scored the goal for the Saints.

Girls fifth grade keeps winning

The Cohasset girls' 5th grade lacrosse team continued their winning streak with a well fought battle at Marshfield on Sunday.

Their hard work in the pre-season is finally paying off.

Head Coach Marcella Hoehn was delighted,

"They really came to play today-they were moving the ball well around the field and every single player made an impact on the game." Assistant Coach Joe Donovan added, "If they keep this level of improvement up, they could easily be in contention for the league championship in June." The girls return to action on Saturday with a double header facing powerhouses Duxbury and Norwell.

Madigan O'Neill scored her first ever hat trick with some very well placed shots.

Kathryn Dunn and Hope Kissick each scored two goals with Ally Leahy, Paige Carrabes, Corey Golden and Caelin McDonald each adding single markers.

Leahy and Carrabes also picked up two assists each and fellow Freshman Molly Cunning scored her first career point with a great assist on Leahy's goal.

The defense was not challenged often but turned away almost every Mashpee bid, led by strong defense from Caty Gilman and Kyle Burke. Goalies Kylie Coffman (4 saves) and Taylor Frederick (2 saves) split time in the cage and helped even the Skippers record at 3-3-1.

The team did not fare so well on Wednesday against South Shore League rival Norwell. The game was tight for the first 15 minutes as the defense of Molly and Megan Fitzgerald continually thwarted the Norwell attack. Unfortunately the Skippers could not get anything going on offense and trailed 7-1 at the half.

At the start of the second half, Ally Leahy forced a turnover from the Norwell goalie and blasted home a high shot to make it 7-2 but that was the final highlight for Cohasset as Norwell dominated the rest of the game and won 14-3.

The Skippers face another tough opponent on Friday, as defending Division 2 Champs Medfield come to Alumni Field.

milestone.

"Today marks the day everyone has been in a match," Meehan said.

After Emma Davis, the team has relied on Emma Smith at No. 2

"Emma has been lights out," Meehan said. "She's taken her game to a whole new level. She's worked hard on her fitness. The whole team has worked hard on fitness. We have team runs now. We go four miles. In March when you're bundled up in layers, it doesn't seem like a big thing. In the third set in the middle of June in the heat, it can be a big advantage. Everyone seems to embrace the team runs."

When they went into that first meet against Hingham, Cohasset met the challenge.

"We returned a lot of strong players," Meehan said. "And we have a lot of younger girls ready to fill some shoes."

The team is led by captains Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford, both talented seniors.

As a pair they play doubles.

Doubles has been an interesting venue this season.

"We're working on a dynamic style of doubles," Meehan said. Early in the season it isn't as much about results as it is about learning.

Another captain is senior Sara Corry.

She plays with Gabrielle Lemoine.

"Against Hingham, they went down early 1-6," Meehan said. "Then they came back with the deciding point."

After Hingham, there were South Shore Conference showdowns with Carver and Abington.

"Carver was difficult," Meehan said. "We knew they'd be a worthy rival. We anticipated a close match."

Cohasset won 3-2, with big wins from Smith and Davis. Bri Crough also stepped up big in that match as well.

"Bri lost 4-6, 4-6, but we loved what we saw from her," Meehan said. "She had stepped up before taking over goal for the soccer team. She's a team player."

In the Carver meet, Lemoine and Corry won a big one at doubles to push Cohasset over the top."

Other positions in the lineup aren't as set.

"We have a constantly changing lineup," Meehan said. "We played Mashpee and freshman Caroline Van Etten won at second singles. Ryan Spicer also won. She's a freshman. Junior Caroline Evans has played well all across the board. We've also played Calley Hart. She's played well."

Sophomores Emily Livingstone and Clara Baumgarten, have been in the mix, as has junior Carly Kinscherf, who is working at a comeback after battling a stress fracture.

"Carly has been battling," Meehan said.

Tuesday, against East Bridgewater, Giselle Hart had the big win, 6-1, 6-3notching the victory that gave the team the win.

"We knew it would come down to her point," Meehan said. "It was huge for her. Giselle is a senior and she's very competitive."

For Cohasset it can be anyone getting the big points.

"At Mashpee, senior Charlotte Barszewski won at third singles," Meehan said. "It was 6-4, 6-0. She did a great job."

Meehan said she has a good feeling about this team.

"I'm cautiously optimistic," Meehan said of the season. "I feel good about the dynamic. It comes from the top and it has been outststanding. Our leadership has been great on and off the court. They make the young girls feel welcome without feeling bossy. Across the board this team is committed. Everyone wants to get in and be competitive. We have a good league and non-league schedule. It helps us to play different people. A lot of our girls could be starters on other places."

Cohasset will have some big tests soon with a match against defending state champion Hopkinton, May 9 (at home) and Scituate, two of the top teams in the state.

Meehan, who always has the top goal of making it a positive experience for all.

"It's been a really nice year so far," she said. "I'm very pleased. I hope the weather holds."

ROUNDUP

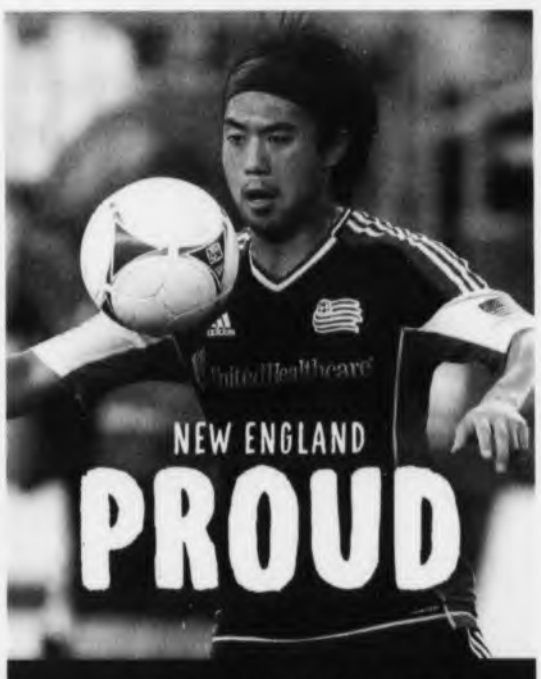
If we can get those 10 wins, anything can happen. I think they'll feel good about themselves and get some confidence. We have the key components. Wev just need to execute."

On the lacrosse field, the Cohasset boys have been outstanding.

In their most recent action, they beat Archbishop Williams 19-6 on Friday.



In the win, John Mills scored five goals and added three assists. Will Golden had five goals and an assist.

The win improved the boys to 7-2 and they are currently ranked No. 1 in Division 3.

In another recent game, Cohasset beat Norwell 16-4.

Mills had three goals and three assists and Nick Tangherlini added a pair of goals and four assists.

GIMME SHELTER

Beautiful inside and out

She is absolutely beautiful. Don't you agree? This week's feature cat is Sylvie and one look at her pretty face and wonderful green eyes, is sure to cast a spell on one loving family. Her days and nights have been very busy, as Sylvie is just finishing nurturing her last litter. The kids are fine and going to their new homes so it is Mom's time now. With Mother's Day on the way, she deserves a special gift, a forever home, and what a great surprise that would be for her.

At only two and a half, she is a playful and loving feline who loves to cuddle up with her foster family. Her soft gray fur is long and luxurious with a pretty white bib and white-gloved feet. Really, she is irresistible. Long white whiskers and tufts of white at her ears are little highlights that complete her looks.

Sylvie has just had her spay procedure and it would be wonderful if she could be adopted directly from her foster home. This is a time for her to relax and enjoy love and attention that she deserves. Since she was loved dearly, we are hoping for a forever home where she will be the princess and enjoy lounging in the sun, gentle petting and, in a little while, lots of fun activities with her new owners.

If you have a place in your family and home for this sweet girl, she can be seen by appointment. You may contact Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes, please visit: hsar.org and click on Available Pets. There are many cats in the shelter who are anxious for a chance to go back to a forever home and enjoy the warmth and care of loving owners again.

Her soft gray fur is long and luxurious with a pretty white bib and white-gloved feet. Really, she is irresistible.

All of us at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue are so appreciative of the many merchants and businesses, and individuals who donated gifts and services as well as those who provided wonderful silent auction items for our Gimme Shelter Benefit last Sunday. It was a great time for all who attended and we are thankful to the C-Note for providing our venue and the band, Cat Basket, who donated their time performing and entertaining all who attended. Catered by Schooner's, everyone was well fed and of course, our volunteers provided sweets and desserts for everyone to enjoy.

It was a fabulous evening, especially for the many winners of the raffles! Most of all, this fundraiser will help the cats and kittens in our care and for that, we are truly grateful. Our supporters were there for us and we are thankful for the generosity and help that all of you provide which helps to keep our shelter running.

Kittens are continuing to arrive as we enter the Spring season, but there are many other young and adult cats who would be wonderful companions and best buddies for the right family! Please consider adopting a rescue cat.

Paula J Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Make a habit of scanning several cars ahead. Usually the driver of the car farther ahead may hit the brakes because they saw something happening that you can't see. By scanning 2-3 cars ahead, and not just watching the brakes lights directly in front of you, you give yourself more time to react. This car was rear-ended by a driver who was not watching farther down the road. COURTESY PHOTO

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

2013 Registration is May 11-12

The Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) will hold its annual registration on Saturday, May 11 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Sunday May 12 from 10 a.m. to noon at the clubhouse on Government Island. Basic membership is open to all Cohasset residents, and entitles sailors who have passed the helmsman test to use the fleet during free sailing hours. Founded in 1960 in order to ensure that all the town's children would have an affordable opportunity to learn and practice sailing, the CSC offers instructional programs for children and teens/adults; it also sponsors a racing team and a family (adult/child) and an adult racing series. The Junior classes will run from Monday, July 1 through Friday, Aug. 16 and the adult classes will go from Saturday, June 29 through Saturday, Aug. 17.

The Junior program serves the 10 to 16-year-old age group. To enroll, students must have completed the fourth grade or turn 10 by Labor Day 2012. Classes meet three times a week for two to three hours at a time over a 10-week period, and combine classroom teaching with ample time on the water. The CSC does its best to coordinate the Junior sailing schedules with the town's swimming program.

The Junior program has a four-step, four-year sequential structure: there are at least two to three groups for the first-year Sailor and second-year Mate levels, as these tend to be the most heavily enrolled sequences. Beginning students start with seamanship basics, and progressively acquire more advanced sailing skills.

A unique feature of the CSC's Junior program is the dual peer group and solo learning opportunities. The classes revolve around peer-group instruction in the 14.2 foot Capris, usually one instructor plus three or four kids. Students are taught by high school or college students, most of whom are town residents and veterans of the Junior program. By the end of their first season, many students will pass the helmsman test, which means they will be able to take out a Capri or the kid-friendly BICs, and sail alone or with a companion. Upon completing the fourth-year Captain-level training, students may join the Racing team and hone their competitive skills. This year we are introducing the Navigator, a new sequence for those students who are looking for an alternative to the Racing team. The Navigator will welcome those who have finished the Junior program or who are 13 years old and new to the CSC. Besides more exposure to sailing, students will get advanced instruction in seamanship, coastal navigation, plus boat maintenance and repair. Novice teenage sailors may also join the more accelerated adult classes held on Saturday mornings; this program geared to get students to pass the helmsman test as soon as possible.

Founded in 1960 in order to ensure that all the town's children would have an affordable opportunity to learn and practice sailing, the CSC offers instructional programs for children and teens/adults. COURTESY PHOTO

Over the last couple years record numbers have joined the CSC. At the conclusion of this sailing season, the CSC plans to begin construction on its new clubhouse, which should be completed in time for the 2014 season. The combined membership application and class registration document is available at www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which also contains more detailed information about the club, the classes, and the project for the new sailing center.

Membership applications and program registrations be made turned in person during registration weekend. A $50 late fee will apply to mail-in applications submitted after next weekend

Candidate Formal Announcements

Editor's note: During the course of the campaign, candidates were invited to submit formal announcements of their candidacies with their photographs. Steve Gaumer did so early in the campaign and his announcement ran on Friday, April 5. The other three candidates submitted formal announcements this week. Next week the Mariner will feature profiles of all four candidates with their photographs.

Russell Bonetti

I am proud of my service on various committees that have made a lasting impact on Cohasset. I have worked on volunteer town boards for over 20 of the 28 years I have lived here.

As a member and Chair of the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), I am proud to have played a part in projects that will have long-term impacts on our community.

My work on CPC includes the Deer Hill Playground project, the successful effort to preserve the windows of the First Parish Meetinghouse on the Common, and projects that save historical documents of the Historical Society, Pratt Library, and Town Clerk.

The project of which I am most proud is the CPC grant to the Sailing Club. That effort insures the facility will serve children and adults well into the future.

As member and Chair of the Hagerty Committee, I helped develop Mariner's Landing at the Harbor's edge on Parker Avenue. The Landing hosts two great community organizations, the Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) and the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR). I also served on the Government Island and Harbor Health Committees.

While I do not shy away from controversial issues, I always listen to all sides of an issue. I work to build consensus between and among town boards. I regularly attend Town Meeting, and as a Selectman will always honor the votes of Town Meeting.

Our open democratic form of government, rooted in Town Meeting, is indeed our greatest historical legacy. It is worth preserving. As your Selectman I will weigh the advice of our town committees and not interfere in their decision making. I will be your independent voice.

I would welcome the opportunity to serve you as your Selectman. I would appreciate 1 of your 2 votes on Saturday, May 11th.

Leland Jenkins

Throughout my years in Cohasset as a private citizen, Advisory Board member and Selectman, I have proposed and implemented common sense improvements to town operations. One being the bylaw mandating completed union contracts presented to the Advisory Board 30 days before a Town Meeting. Another, the bylaw requiring income and expenses of all departments and Enterprise Funds be done on a Monthly and Quarterly basis. Through these and other initiatives, I have diligently worked toward financial accountability and transparency.

As a local small business owner I understand that fiscal responsibility begins with policies and procedures that ensure the financial health of the town and that in turn will provide the transparency in government the taxpayers demand.

As a 35-year resident and a parent who raised and educated two daughters from K-12 in the Cohasset Schools, I realize the challenges unrestrained taxes can place on young families and seniors.

I am a candidate for Selectman running to safeguard the progress we have made and to initiate a plan for future improvements that will continue the ultimate goal of financial health. We have begun monthly financial reviews, reorganization and consolidation of departments. We are implementing and updating policies and procedures. These important areas were disregarded by the last three town managers. As Selectman during these past two years of transition, I took the lead asking for financial accountability and timely management reporting. For the first time in seven years, the town received a positive yearly audit report. We no longer are ignoring the red flags that previous audits disclosed.

My plans for the next three years using, my engineering economics training and business background, is to ensure superior services provided to all our citizens at a tax rate that is affordable to taxpayers of all ages. We can no longer afford 10% tax increases every 3+ years. Cohasset families want their town in the 'Top Ten' in education not in real estate taxes.

I am asking for your support and vote on May 11

Karen Quigley. COURTESY PHOTO

Karen Quigley

I am Karen Quigley, I live on Clay Spring Road and I am running for Selectman.

I entered town government through the environmental door, sitting on the Open Space Committee, the Water Resource Protection Committee and chairing the Harbor Health Committee. Presently I sit on the board of the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

My desire to serve the town led to my previous term as a selectman. My ongoing interest and concern for the best interests of our community have led me to run again.

I plan to continue the financial reforms begun while I was a selectman. The highly touted budget planning process is a product of the Budget Planning Group, a collaborative board I initiated to determine the best use of our resources. This good work must continue and I look forward to once again contributing to this effort. I am gratified that my support for a forensic audit in the wake of the financial crisis was the genesis for the financial reform that has begun restoring our sound fiscal standing today.

The changed tenor in town hall greatly concerns me. The past two years have been dominated by turmoil, divisiveness, rancor and a lack of professionalism resulting in unnecessary litigation and legal expense and placing the town in jeopardy. That is unacceptable and must change.

We need experienced, professional management to guide us and, if elected, I will move to immediately advertise for a new town manager and support the open, inclusive police chief search.

I was honored to serve as a Selectman. I enjoyed working in town government, striving to deliver excellent services while maintaining an environment of respect toward all residents and employees. I hope I made a difference. I look forward to the opportunity to do so again.

I ask for one of your two votes for selectman on May 11. Thank you.

Homeopathy and biofeedback: Alternative treatment for children

Stress comes at us from a vast number of sources each day: social pressures, emotional disturbances, trauma and injury. Biofeedback allows one to get to the heart of which stressors are most reactive for you.

Cohasset SEPAC will host Diane Scott with Quantum Homeopathics. Ms. Scott will speak on homeopathy and biofeedback for the health and healing of pediatric autoimmune neuropsychiatric disorders associated with streptococcal infections (PANDAS), attention deficit-hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and autism spectrum disorders (ASD). Her presentation will be held at Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, May 7, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Homeopathy is the leading alternative medicine in Europe, and is becoming a popular health care choice in the US. An increasing number of people now turn to Homeopathy as a safe, effective, and gentle holistic system of medicine suitable for all ages, from babyhood to old age. It treats the whole person, on the mental, emotional and physical level, rather than treating the disease alone.

Diane will also speak on Quantum Biofeedback. Biofeedback is a safe non-invasive technique that identifies stress in the body and teaches the patient to induce relaxation. It helps the child develop strategies to control anxiety and stress before other symptoms have a chance to develop. Diane's intention is to guide and educate her clients to make better choices and lifestyle changes that improve their health and wellness by creating a customized personal health plan. Stress comes at us from a vast number of sources each day: social pressures, emotional disturbances, trauma and injury. Biofeedback allows one to get to the heart of which stressors are most reactive for you.

Diane Scott is a certified classical homeopath and biofeedback specialist. She has been an integrative holistic practitioner for the past 14 years combining the gentle healing art of homeopathy with state of the art quantum biofeedback technology. Diane Scott received her bachelor of sciense degrees (in both microbiology and medical technology) as well as her BTech (Homeopathy) from the University of the Witwatersrand in South Africa. She completed both the professional course as well as the two-year post graduate clinical course at Teleosis School of Homeopathy, she is a board certified with both the Council for Homeopath Certification (CHC) as well as the National Board of Neuropathy and Biofeedback. Diane serves on the committee of Examination Reviewers of the Council for Homeopathic Certification, which is the national organization that certifies health professionals in classical homeopathy. Diane is affiliated with the National Center for Homeopathy and has founded two NCH affiliated Study Groups in Princeton and Hingham. (quantumhomeopathics.com)

In addition to early admission to the plant sale, Friends of Holly Hill Farm members receive other benefits including discounts on all programs and workshops at the farm, free admission to the member's annual spring and fall events, Spreading Roots, the quarterly newsletter, a copy of the Annual Report, and the knowledge that membership supports an organization dedicated to using an organic farm to teach the value of sustainable agriculture, preservation of historic buildings, woodlands and open spaces.

Board of Health passes Nuisance Regulation

At its meeting on April 9, Cohasset Board of Health held a public hearing and discussion of the proposed Cohasset Board of Health Nuisance Regulation, which was subsequently promulgated through a unanimous vote in favor of the regulation. The purpose of the regulation is "to prevent all nuisances, sources of filth and causes of sickness that may be injurious to the health, safety or welfare of the inhabitants of the Town of Cohasset," the authority for which is granted to Boards of Health by MGL Chapter 111, Sections 31 and 122-125.

The regulation, which will be effective May 1, is comprised of the administrative requirements for application and enforcement of the regulation, and is followed by two appendices that list definitions and examples of nuisances (as well as exclusions from the regulation).

Copies of the regulation are available at the Cohasset Board of Health office in both hard copy and electronic formats. Additionally, a hard copy is available for viewing at the Cohasset Town Clerk's office during normal business hours.

For more information, call the Board of Health staff at 781-383-4116, ext. 119, or email boh@cohassetma.org.

Bryan included in Financial Times Top 400

Douglas Bryan, senior vice president of Morgan Stanley Wealth Management in Boston, was recognized as one of the Top 400 Financial Advisors in the country by the Financial Times newspaper. The Financial Times, now in its 125th year, marks this as the first annual list of its kind.

The FT 400 advisors come from 37 states and Washington, D.C., and the financial advisors represent 16 different broker-dealer firms, including the four largest. The average advisor on the list has 26 years of experience in the industry and manages $1.3 billion.

A minimum standard for qualifying advisors was set at $250 million in assets under management and 10 years of experience. Qualified advisors were then scored on six attributes: AUM, AUM growth rate, compliance record, experience, industry certifications and online accessibility. Verified assets were provided by the broker-dealer firms.

"It is an honor to be recognized by such a prestigious publication and to be included with so many of the country's top advisors," Bryan said.

Bryan resides in Cohasset with his wife, Leslie, and two children. The Bryan family is involved in several local charities and a scholarship fund for inner-city children in Newark, N.J.

The full list of 400 advisors is published on FT.com.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 13, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Taking advice isn't always easy for self-assured Rams and Ewes who think they know what's best. But it wouldn't hurt to listen to what close colleagues have to say.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You know how to balance life's practical aspects with the poetic. This gives you a special edge this week in both your professional endeavors and your personal life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Focus on keeping a balance between your home-related activities and your workplace responsibilities. Be mindful of both without obsessing over one or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change in plans is likely as you discover more facts about a possible commitment. Continue to ask questions and, if you're not sure about the answers, demand proof.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be careful not to let that Leonine pride keep you from seeking wise, experienced counsel before making an important decision. A family member once again seeks your help.

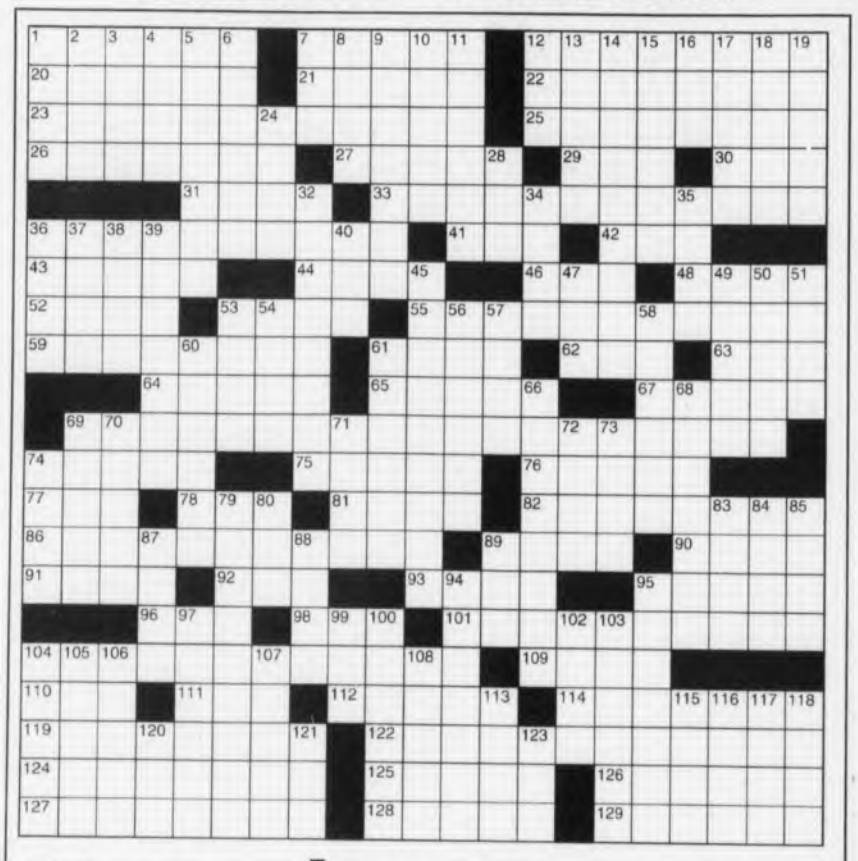
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That surge of Virgo energy drives you to take on more work assignments. Be careful you don't overdo it, or you might find yourself overdone: i.e., burned out.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your decision to be upfront with colleagues on a touchy matter causes some consternation at first. But in the end, your honesty wins their trust and admiration.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) As in the past, someone again wants to share a secret with you, knowing it will be safe. But do you really want to be this person's confidante? Think about it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As one of nature's straight shooters, you seek to correct misconceptions about a project. Do so, of course, but without giving away too much too soon.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative pursuits continue to be strong in the gifted Goat's aspect. New friendships can come from sharing these experiences with like-minded art aficionados.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolve lingering grumblings over your way of doing things by keeping your mind open to suggestions while continuing to show how your plans will work.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The perceptive Piscean might find that changing course in midstream isn't as workable as it would seem. Explore this option carefully before making a decision.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to share your love of life's good things brings joy to many, including, of course, yourself.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

RIGHT OF WAY

SHARING OUR CHANGING STREETS

Why bikes?

May is National Bike Month, sponsored by the League of American Bicyclists. Also coming up May 11-19 is Bay State Bike Week – a celebration of pedal power presented by the Massachusetts Bicycle Coalition, or MassBike, in partnership with the state Department of Transportation.

RIGHT WAY

With all that focus on bikes, Wicked Local, GateHouse Media newspapers and WGBH News are working together to examine the role of bicycles on our streets in eastern Massachusetts, along with drivers and pedestrians. We're also telling your stories about sharing the road, what's working well and what our state and communities can do better.

Board will not issue subpoena

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Online bloggers, posters and "trollers" may continue their Internet activities unabashed, as far as Cohasset officials are concerned. The Board of Selectmen this week admitted that they have no ability to control who can log onto local news sites and participate in comment threads, due to freedom of speech issues.

Chief among the board's concerns was whether any of these online commenters are town employees, and whether they are trolling news websites on town-owned computers.

"It's clear we don't have standing on that particular issue," said selectman Fred Koed.

The selectmen have ceased their planned investigation of online commenters who have posted on news stories on the Cohasset Mariner and Patriot Ledger news websites, after briefly entertaining the Four running for two selectman seats

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Who will be the two selectmen elected (or reelected) Saturday? Four candidates are locked in a race for two seats and tomorrow, Cohasset voters will decide what the next Board of Selectmen looks like.

The annual Town Election is Saturday, May 11. Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall.

Cohasset has 5,814 registered voters; around 100 had requested absentee ballots by press time.

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said that she estimates a 35 to 40 percent turnout of voters on Saturday. Her estimate is "based on the number of candidates for Selectmen, the number of absentees, the weather and events this Saturday," she said. "This will be a busy weekend for families with First Holy Communion, college graduations and

BEECHWOOD CHURCH

Creativity, community, and coffee

Ground Level launches open mic night

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Calling all artists, singers, and musicians: there's a new place in town to express your creativity in a laid-back, café setting.

Beechwood Congregational Church debuted its new coffeehouse, Ground Level, with an unofficial launch on May 3. The official launch night is slated for Friday, June 7, starting at 7 p.m.

The monthly event provides an opportunity to showcase local talent, complete with open mic, a featured band concert, and a space for artists to display and discuss their artwork. The event is housed in the church's basement, and is the only "open mic" venue in Cohasset.

Ground Level is an initiative of Beechwood's youth pastor, Amanda Thompson, a Cohasset High School alum and Gordon College graduate. Thompson's goal is to provide the community with a positive, creative atmosphere to share and enjoy live music and local art.

"We want it to be edifying," Thompson said of Ground Level. "We want people who feel that they're not heard."

The mission is to invite people into a creative, authentic community housed in the ground level of the church. Beechwood pastor Matt Dorn said that the event serves as a way to give back to the community while also rejuvenating the church, which is marking its 150th year.

Still time to participate

The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 118, will post hundreds of US Flags in a poignant display honoring local veterans. The Field of Honor recognizes the veterans who have so valiantly served our country to protect and preserve our freedom.

For the seventh straight year, the flags will fly from the lawn facing the Veterans Memorial which itself will be encircled by the flags of the 50 states. Residents of Cohasset and the surrounding area will experience this inspiring display of flags from May 18 to June 1. The Healing Field dedication will be at 1 pm. on Saturday, May 25.

$25 individual flags may be sponsored in memory of family or friends honored. Checks should be made payable to the Sons of the American Legion with a note on the memo line of the check indicating Field of Honor. Sponsored flags can be retained as mementos of this year's Field of Honor which can be then be displayed from home or business Visit: healingfiled.org/cohasset13 or contact the American Legion Post at telephone 781-383-9657. Volunteers to install the flags should contact Tom Wigmore at the Legion number.

86-year-old hangs up on phone call scam

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

He followed up by telling her that she needed to go to CVS and purchase a $500 gift card and then call him back with the card number.

A quick thinking octogenarian realized a scam when she heard it and notified the police last Saturday. Police said the woman reported that a man claiming to be from Federal Express called to tell her she had won $1 million for being "the best paying customer." He followed up by telling her that she needed to go to CVS and purchase a $500 gift card and then call him back with the card number.

The woman told police she realized immediately that it was a scam, she told the caller "no" and hung up on him. She wanted to let police know in order to alert others who may fall victim to the scam.

Police "googled" the number and learned there have been numerous complaints about scams related to that phone number.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said the resident "did the right thing." Police encourage residents to notify them immediately if when they receive calls like this. Often these scammers prey on the elderly.

Jet ski

On Sunday (May 5), police spoke with a 62-year-old business owner on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) about suspicious activity on his property. The man said while he was working on the second floor the night before, he saw two men looking at his jet ski which is behind the property and not visible from the road. It appeared to him that one of the men was holding or lifting the jet ski while the other was looking under it.

He went to confront the men, who drove out of the parking lot in a light-colored Nisan and headed south on Route 3A. The businessman provided police with a license plate that came back to a Scituate address. Detectives are following up, police said.

Hit and run

After a call from Taunton police on Monday (April 29), Cohasset police went to an address in the Avalon complex looking for a vehicle that had possibly been involved in a hit and run accident in Taunton. The plate came back to an Avalon address, police said. The vehicle was not at the address. Taunton police later called back to report they had located the car.

Property line

Police told a Norfolk Road resident reporting a property-line dispute last week that it was a civil matter and best referred to the building department.

Repossessed

Police went to a construction site off Beechwood Street last Tuesday (April 30) at about 9:30 p.m. after receiving a report that construction vehicles were running and had their lights on. It turned out the company that had leased the vehicles was repossessing them and had the correct paperwork, police said.

Towed

Police had the 2000 Land Rover, owned by a 36-year-old Colorado woman, towed on Wednesday (May 5) following a traffic stop on King Street. The Land Rover was not registered, police said.

Alarm, light

At 7:19 p.m. on Wednesday (May 5), police responded to a report about an audible alarm and blinking light by Meetinghouse Pond. The alarm is apparently new and related to the pumping system in the pond, police said.

Parking issue

Police again tagged cars over the past week that were illegally parked on Bancroft Way by Milliken Field. Police have contacted the DPW about getting more signage in the area.

Towed

Police had a Ford Taurus towed from Parkingway by the Recreation Center that was parked in the middle of the travel lane last Saturday (May 4) around 11:50 a.m. A 52-year-old Weymouth man owns the car.

Handicap spot

Police tagged a car that was parked in a handicap spot by the Paul Pratt Library on Saturday afternoon (May 4). The fine for illegally parking in a handicap spot is $100.

Bunnies injured

Police received a report on Saturday (May 4) about wild bunnies being attacked by dogs. The rabbits were not domesticated. If they were, the dog owners would have been held responsible, police said.

Missing plate

On Sunday afternoon (May 5), a 54-year-old Cohasset man went the police station to report the license plate on his trailer was missing. He explained he had towed his boat from his residence to the Parker Avenue boat ramp and when he returned home, noticed the plate was missing. He retraced his route but could not locate the place. Police entered the missing plate into the NCIC (National Crime Information Center) database.

ALL TRAFFIC STOPPED FOR 15 MINUTES

Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) had to be shut down in both directions for about 15 minutes last week following a two-car accident at 3A and Pond Street.
COURTESY PHOTO

Accident shuts down 3A

On Thursday (May 2) at about 2:40 pm, Cohasset police responded to the intersection of Route 3A and Pond Street for a reported bad accident, with a person trapped in the vehicle and the vehicle on fire.

Arriving officers determined that there was nobody trapped and the smoke inside the car was from the airbag deployment. Route 3A had to be closed in both directions for about 15 minutes while paramedics attended to the 36-year-old female driver of a 2010 Dodge Caravan, who was later transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries. The 36-year-old is from Scituate.

The second vehicle, which is a 2003 Mitsubishi Montero, was being driven by a 16-year-old girl from Hull. The teen had just obtained her driver's license a week ago. The 16-year-old was cited for failure to yield to on coming traffic and operating an unregistered vehicle. Both cars had to be towed.

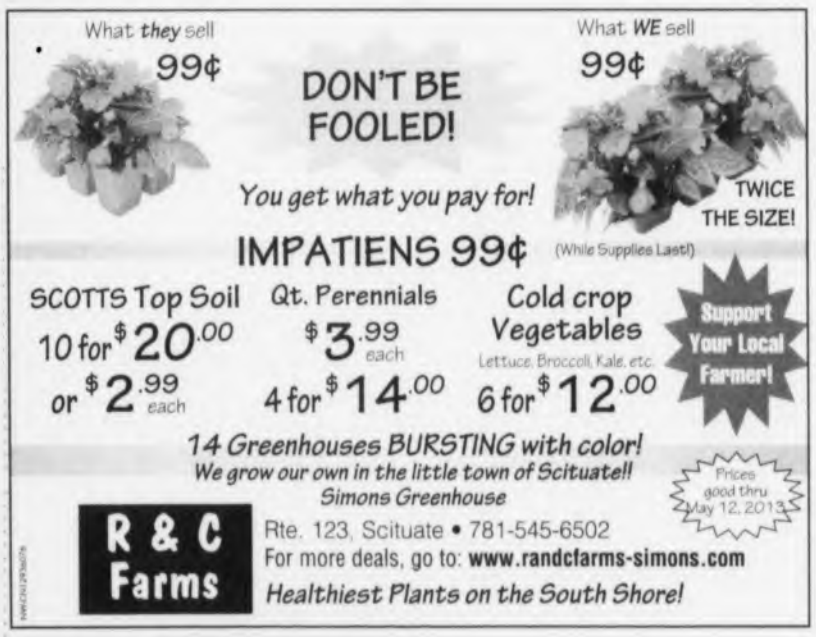
The cause of the accident was driver inattention, police said.

UPDATE

OPEB committee charge announced

The Board of Selectmen voted to approve a charge for a new committee to address the town's unfunded liability for Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB). Massachusetts formed an OPEB Commission to address statewide concerns; Cohasset's selectmen decided that the town needed its own study group.

Cohasset's committee is charged with studying the town's options for funding OPEB and the related financial and personnel issues, along with communicating its findings to the public. The committee will also give status reports to the selectmen, town manager, finance director, advisory committee, school committee, and town employees.



The committee is charged with issuing draft recommendations by Nov. 15, 2013, and also creating a collection of documents for public study to be housed at the town library and posted on the town website.

The OPEB study committee consists of three members of the public with relevant expertise and one town employee. In April the selectmen appointed the following three members to the committee: Carl Forsythe, John Chapman, and Timothy Davis. The selectmen will also appoint a selectman as a non-voting liaison, and ask that the advisory and school committees appoint a non-voting liaison as well.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that it's good to have a broad group looking into OPEB issues, and welcomed town employees to apply.

Records request turns up little

Selectman Gjesteby fears email hacked

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There is no smoking gun in a series of emails uncovered from selectmen Martha Gjesteby's email account.

Eleven emails from Gjesteby's town account were reviewed this week following a Public Records Request made by Chris Allen, Pleasant Street. Allen requested the information in an April 25 email to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Allen said he wanted to review the emails because he had heard at the April 22 Town Meeting that Gjesteby had sent confidential information to former selectman Ronnie McMorris (an incident that led to an ethics complaint, filed by the other four selectmen in January) and wanted to see any email correspondence sent to and from Gjesteby and McMorris.

The request also asked for any emails between Gjesteby and TinyTown Gazette editor Tanna Kasperowicz, former selectman and current selectman candidate Karen Quigley, former selectman Ronnie McMorris, and former Town Manager Michael Coughlin.

Allen said in his email to Milanoski that he wanted to know what communications were going on between the elected official and former officials. He wrote that as a citizen, he had a right to know. Allen could not be reached for comment.

Milanoski then forwarded the request to Chief Technology Officer (CTO) Rob Bonnell asking him to estimate the time and cost for supplying the requested information. Bonnell got back to Milanoski a few days later with his estimate.

Bonnell found only 11 emails to and from Gjesteby, McMorris and Kasperowicz. Most of the emails were sent from Kasperowicz; the sole email Gjesteby sent was the one to McMorris on Dec. 8, 2012, that led to the ethics review. Information in this email was redacted before it was released. Allen was told it would cost $126.68 to search for, segregate and copy the 11 emails. Milanoski sent the bill to Allen on May 1 and asked if he would like to proceed. Since Allen said yes, Milanoski said that he then contacted Gjesteby.

Gjesteby was alarmed by the request and investigation into her email account, which she learned about when Milanoski called her on May 1. The selectman has said publicly that she rarely sends emails from her account and prefers to call people. Since she received her town email account last August (when Bonnell was hired and set up new town email accounts), Gjesteby has said that she often has trouble logging into it and receiving the same emails her fellow selectmen do; she has complained of this glitch at several past selectmen meetings.

Gjseteby said that she had a computer technician come to her house and work on her computer on April 19 because she was having issues with her email account. The technician said that her account had been hacked — someone was logging into her email and sending SPAM messages to her contacts. He suggested that Gjesteby change her password.

Puzzled

The selectman was puzzled as to how and why someone would hack into her account and send emails to her contacts, but even more distraught when Milanoski told her that Bonnell would be looking into her emails. Gjesteby was further perturbed that Milanoski informed her of this days after Allen made his request.

Gjesteby said in a written statement, which she read during the May 7 selectmen's meeting, that she felt Milanoski had conducted himself improperly when it came to directing the CTO to go through her emails without notifying her first, or having the selectmen vote on the matter.

"This type of behavior is unprecedented in my memory, having served Cohasset in elected office since the 1980s," Gjesteby stated. "It is a breach of our democratic form of government to have an appointed official surveil [sic] elected officials' email without authority or notice."

Milanoski said he was simply following the process for obtaining public records using a form approved by the Supervisor of Public Records at the Secretary of State's office. The town manager also said that he personally did not troll through Gjesteby's email account.

"I don't have access to [officials'] email," he said, adding that Bonnell does not look at town email addresses, either, unless a request comes in: "The only thing the CTO will review is a bonafide public records request."

Milanoski also told the selectmen that Gjesteby had threatened him for conducting the email search, saying that it would affect her review of her performance and that he had gone "down a peg" in her eyes.

"This is highly inappropriate for an official to abuse her power to influence the release of public records," said Milanoski. "I was doing my job and I stand behind that."

Gjesteby countered that she did not attack or accost Milanoski, and said that the issue was his problem with her and not the other way around.

"You had this search going on... Was I doing something bad? I don't know," said Gjesteby. "It's your problem... I don't understand why you're doing this kind of thing."

The selectman further stated that she has encountered difficulty since she was elected to the board last May. "I've been under the gun," she said. "I feel we're equally elected and should be given equal information... I try to do my best for the town of Cohasset. I'm a worker here. I look into situations, and that's it."

Protocol

Selectman Fred Koed was concerned about the protocol that Milanoski used to inform Gjesteby of the email search. "I'm not clear — if this happened to any selectman, we wouldn't be informed for five or six days? I've been a selectman for 14 years, and this is the first time I've seen it done this way."

Milanoski said that he was awaiting Bonnell's cost estimate before alerting Gjesteby, so he could relay the estimate to Allen and find out whether he still wanted to pursue the search. He said that this is always how he responds to public records requests.

"I went to Martha when I actually had some tangible information to deal with," said Milanoski.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she would like to have a formal process in place to "get rid of the discomfort" such a matter can stir up between the town manager and an official.

"It's like everything else — it's not so much what you're doing, it's how you're doing it," Kennedy said, adding that there was a better way to handle these situations "instead of having everyone feel uncertain."

Gjesteby said to Milanoski, "Imagine how shocked I was when I got your call."

The town manager said he agreed there was a "lack of written policy or procedure" for this situation, which "should be articulated." However, Milanoski also said that the same process is always followed for every public records request, and it adheres to state requirements.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that this was a serious issue and should be on a future agenda. Since Tuesday night was Carlson's last selectmen meeting, Kennedy, who is vice-chair, said that she will make sure it will be discussed "on a very soon agenda."

Hackers strike town website

Selectman Martha Gjesteby isn't the only recent victim of online hacking. The town website was hijacked early Monday morning by what appeared to be Algerian hackers. The homepage colors were changed to black and red with a message about Algeria.

Russ Bonetti, Selectman candidate and Community Preservation Committee chair, was the first to flag the issue and call Town Hall. Tracey Connors-Kelly, assistant to the town manager, then alerted Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell. Despite his being away from Cohasset on grand jury duty, Bonnell was able to fix the problem remotely.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski commented on Bonnell's quick fix. "Once it was identified there was an issue, he quickly secured and resolved the problem."

The CTO said that this hacking problem is nothing new — Cohasset's site has been hacked into before by people from other countries.

"The old website is built off an old unsupported content management system that has some small vulnerabilities," Bonnell explained. "The vulnerability is not dangerous, just a pain that the front page can be changed. This is a known issue and can for the most part be stopped at the firewall level."

The CTO said that he is working on a new backend for the website that "does not have any of these vulnerabilities."

Of his ability to resolve issues like this, even while on jury duty, Bonnell said, "I work 24/7 for the Town of Cohasset. I have systems in place to warn me of any attacks on all town systems. I received the messages, excused myself from duty, connected to the respective town systems and resolved the issue in under five minutes by blocking the offending IP address from any of our networks."

idea of issuing a subpoena to uncover the posters' identities.

This decision came after the selectmen canceled a meeting posted for Thursday, May 2 during which the sole agenda item was a discussion on issuing a subpoena. Town Counsel Paul DeRensis urged the board to delay the discussion because his firm, Deutsch Williams, did not think it could prepare a subpoena at that time.

A Cohasset citizen issued a subpoena to the Mariner two weeks ago seeking the email and Internet Protocol (IP) addresses of several online posters. Ronnie McMorris, a former selectman, appealed to the selectmen to do the same during their April 16 meeting. The board voted that night to issue an ultimatum to the online posters, giving them 72 hours to identify themselves before launching an investigation.

Chief among the board's concerns was whether any of these online commenters are town employees, and whether they are trolling news websites on town-owned computers.

No posters came forward, and the board did not take any action. During their Tuesday, May 7 meeting, the selectmen decided to wait and see what is uncovered from McMorris's case. The board also voted to confer with Town Counsel on whether it has the legal standing to issue a subpoena.

While stating that town employees should not expect any privacy when using town computers, the selectmen expressed concern over the time and effort it would take Cohasset's Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell to inspect all of the town computers.

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson said that according to Bonnell, "it would take two weeks of full-time work" to go through all of the computers.

Some audience members thought the board should proceed with the search anyway.

Agnes McCann of Doane Street said that the selectmen should find out whether town employees are using town computers improperly. She suggested the board hire an independent professional to investigate the computers, rather than taking up Bonnell's time.

Susan Kent of Old Coach Road said that employees who abuse town computers would likely straighten up if they knew their computers could be searched at any time.

"If people know it's possible someone is monitoring their work email... it would deter people from even trying it; do it from home, then," Kent said of making inappropriate comments online. "Why should a Cohasset computer be used to perpetrate crime?"

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that there is no proof that any of these online commenters are in fact town employees, nor that they use town computers to write their posts.

Kent said she thought the town should rule out that possibility. "Why not scrub it and move forward?"

Selectmen vice-chairwoman Diane Kennedy said that McMorris' private action will determine whether the offending comments were made from town computers, and that she would rather revise the town's computer usage policy than dig through everyone's computers. Both the town and schools have their own policies, but Milanoski said that the separate policies could be retooled into one document as a single policy for municipal employees to follow.

What are bloggers/posters/trollers?

- A blogger publishes original content, i.e. articles, on a personal website or blog.
- A poster writes comments on website content, such as news articles or blogs.
- A troller is a poster who writes inappropriate comments that have little or nothing to do with the content of the particular article or blog; they seek to stir up negativity.

What is an IP address?

The Internet Protocol (IP) is the method or protocol by which data is sent from one computer to another on the Internet. Each computer (known as a host) on the Internet has at least one IP address that uniquely identifies it from all other computers on the Internet.

UPDATE

Solar panels

The Alternative Energy Committee is currently in negotiations with a solar energy bidder. The AEC hopes to finalize a contract soon and make a recommendation to the Board of Selectmen. Solar panels could soon be on the way for the town; the solar vendor bid to construct solar arrays on the Middle-High School roof and town landfill.

AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell, along with School Committee chair Jeanne Astino, who is on the school board's alternative energy subcommittee, presented a status update to the selectmen Tuesday night.

The AEC issued a request for proposals for a solar power bidder in December 2012 and received three bids by the Jan. 30, 2013 deadline. All three vendors bid on both the landfill and school roof. An evaluation committee selected the bidder that is currently in negotiations with the town.

Bodell said that she hopes the AEC will be back before the selectmen in the next few weeks. Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Lloyd and Evelyn Prescott celebrate 65 years

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Mothers Day

Hello Cohasset and how is everyone this week? I want to start by wishing every Mom, Gramma, Great-Gramma, Nanny and any other person who is in that very special role of "Mom or Mommy-Like" role, a very special and wonderful Happy Mothers Day!

Anniversary

Happy Anniversary wishes are being sent out to a wonderful couple from family and friends from all around. Lloyd William Prescott and Evelyn (Benzoni) Prescott celebrated their 65th Wedding Anniversary at a party given by their four daughters: Lynne Kozlowski of Norwood; Dana Prescott and her husband Don Carroll of Gubbio, Italy; Terry Marshall and her husband Joe of Plymouth; and Joan Busk and her husband Joe of Cohasset. Also in attendance were their grandchildren and great grandchildren, and friends and family from across the country.

Lloyd was raised in Mt. Pleasant Michigan and Evelyn in Astoria, Long Island, New York. They met at a gathering at King's Point Merchant Marine Academy where Lloyd was a cadet and Evelyn was attending Hunter College for Women in New York City.

They married on April 24, 1948 at the Little Church Around the Corner in Manhattan and had a small reception on Staten Island. They moved to Cohasset 55 years ago and raised their family there.

Movie night

Get ready for a movie...The next feature presented by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee (CDTC) will be "The One Percent." This documentary focuses on the growing wealth gap in the U.S. as seen through the eyes of filmmaker, Jamie Johnson, the 27-year-old heir to the Johnson and Johnson pharmaceutical fortune. In this film he explores the political, moral and emotional rationale that enables the so-called one percent to control nearly half the entire wealth of the U.S. The film includes interviews with Nicole Buffet, Bill Gates, Robert Reich and Ralph Nader among others. Please join in this movie night in the meeting room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road at 7 pm on May 15th for an insightful look at this growing problem. Movies are free; refreshments are served.

Yard sale

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its annual yard sale on Friday, May 17 and Saturday, May 18 from 8 to noon at the home of Donna McGee, 23 Hill St. The proceeds from this yard sale, held each year for the past 11 years, go to fund the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship is awarded to a civic-minded, Cohasset, graduating senior in good academic standing. Household items such as linens, sports equipment, small furniture, baby furnishings in good condition are appreciated!

Please call Donna at 781-383-9114 to request a pick up, or you may leave items on the porch at 23 Hill St.

Note cards

As we get closer and closer to the CHS 2013 Graduation day, gifts for the graduates are starting to arrive and of course, thank you notes are something we, as parents would like our children to send and not just ONLINE! Paperscapes has designed a great set of note cards with the Skippers logo on the front and blank inside and comes in a set of 8 for $10. The proceeds from the sales if these cards benefit the upcoming annual Red Carpet and after prom safe party for graduating seniors. Please go to Paperscapes in downtown Cohasset or contact Mal McCunney at malmccunney@comcast.net

Buy-a-brick

A big playground renovation is in the future for the Deer Hill School and all the children who attend and play there but the community's help is needed! The Buy-A-Brick program, in which your personalized brick will be placed in a donor pathway, is still ongoing through June 1. Bricks start at $150 and include three lines of text or more. Those who would like to purchase a brick may obtain the necessary forms at the Osgood and Deer Hill School offices or by contacting either Franchesca Arnold at franchesca@cohasset.net or at 383-2548 or Michelle Loughlin at mloughlin521@hotmail.com or at 383-8308. Don't miss out on your chance to be forever remembered at the playground.

In balance

Congratulations to the Balance Studio as they want the community to know about some exciting things happening in the space downtown! This past Monday, May 6th kicked off the NEW schedule with 30 new classes in Yoga/Barre and Pilates in their newly expanded space. Also, happening tomorrow on May 11th, a Restorative Yoga Practice with Acupuncture with Gail Colton and Caroline Barry takes place from 1:30-3:30 pm at the studio. Last, on Sunday, May 12 (Mothers Day,) Kellie Lynch will lead a wonderful Mothers Day Yoga practice for Moms/daughters/sons at Sandy Beach at 9:30 and ALL are welcome! This is a complimentary practice sponsored by Ivivva Athletics and Balance Studio. For more details and to sign up for any program, go to: balancestudiocohasset.com

Membership is open to all Cohasset residents. Download and bring your application to the club on registration weekend. Applications will only be accepted after registration weekend with a $50 late fee. First year students must have completed fourth grade or be 10 years old by Labor Day 2013. Please visit: cohassetsailingclub.org for program descriptions, information on adult lessons and the new 5th year student Navigator class, the registration form and any questions you may have. The Club is looking forward to a great summer of sailing!

Brown Bag

On Monday, May 13, at 12 p.m. Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3North Main St. will present the movie, "I am David," a spiritual voyage of discovery about a young man who escapes a Communist concentration camp and travels into the free world for the first time. Bring your own lunch. Cohasset Elder Affairs will provide soft drinks and popcorn. For transportation, call 781-383-9112.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

A lot of lovin' to share

PAULA J FATERSIK

Sweet, full of personality, a star amongst his peers, Bailey is going to make one family or person the perfect pet for a lifetime. COURTESY PHOTO

If you have a heart as big as his, then this is a chance to have a new family member who will bring you smiles and joy every day.

Once in a while, the perfect young man comes walking through the door! Or maybe, scales the wall to find his perfect match. Our Bailey is that young guy. A lovestruck Romeo whose aim is to love you, cuddle, and show you feline affection that is impossible to resist.

This endearing one-year-old has fur that is midnight black and shiny, golden eyes that look at you lovingly and expectantly and just a tiny touch of white accent on his chest. Sweet, full of personality, a star amongst his peers, he is going to make one family or person the perfect pet for a lifetime.

Bailey is quite new to the shelter, and it would be great for him to find his forever home quickly as he has so much to bring to his forever owners. Still a youngster, there is so much playtime and fun that he wants to be part of, followed by cuddling up against your chest, nuzzling your neck and purring away. He is really the perfect package. If you have a heart as big as his, then this is a chance to have a new family member who will bring you smiles and joy every day.

Please come to see Bailey soon at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday 2-3 p.m. You may contact Judy, our adoption coordinator at 781-534-4902 for an appointment, or leave a message at out office line, 781-925-3121. To see more of our wonderful cats and kittens who are waiting for loving homes, please visit our website, HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. Also, check out Hull Seaside Animal Rescue on Facebook for updates and features of our cats.

Just as sure as Spring arrives, so do the kittens and pregnant moms. This is a very busy time for the shelter and we can use all the help we can get providing healthy foods, both wet and dry, for our babies and moms. Sometimes kittens are rejected and need to be bottle fed as well. As we operate on donations, any supplies that we receive are greatly appreciated. We are trying to give these kittens and cats a chance at a great life with forever families.

The Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin will be visiting again this month on Tuesday, the 28th. If you have a cat or kitten that is ready to be altered, please call Casey at 781-925-3121, or leave us a message with your cat's name, age sex and your contact information. This is the time to have your cat spayed or neutered to prevent unwanted or helpless offspring.

A huge thank you to again to all of our supporters who helped with our Gimme Shelter fundraiser. Your generous spirit has been a great help for the shelter. We continue to thank the loyal donators of bottles and cans which help us to make the rent each month. You make all the difference for us and the kittens and cats in our care.

This is also a time when we are reaching out to people who are interested in becoming volunteers at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. It is a labor of love and the purrs and meows and expectant looks you receive when you arrive in a room here is heartwarming. If you have two hours a week to commit to helping with the care of our cats and the facility, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638 for more information.

To all of the Moms out there, Happy Mother's Day! Enjoy your weekend. We will be celebrating our beautiful feline moms as well.

Paula J. Fatersik is a board member and volunteer at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue

LIFE AT CHS

Bittersweet time for seniors

This year, as a Senior Service project, the entire Class of 2013 has volunteered to clean and assemble the Music Circus during these weeks in preparation for our Graduation ceremony that Saturday.

WHITNEY MALONE

One week of AP exams down, only one to go! This coming week will be especially busy for sophomore CHS students who are required to take the 10th Grade Mathematics MCAS Monday and Tuesday, their last MCAS test for the rest of their high school careers!

This week, the Class of 2013 received our calendar of events leading up to graduation on June 8th. Seniors will be dismissed from our last day of school on the 24th at 10:40, and will spend our two weeks of freedom (still under the guardianship of CHS) fulfilling various obligations, including a senior cookout and field day, a yearbook signing, Awards Night on June 6th, and Graduation rehearsal on June 7th. This year, as a Senior Service project, the entire Class of 2013 has volunteered to clean and assemble the Music Circus during these weeks in preparation for our Graduation ceremony that Saturday, breaking the tradition of leaving the job to those students who owe the school community service hours.

Next week, the Costa Rica students are gathering at the school Monday night for a celebration with friends and family to present our research and share our pictures and memories from our amazing, unique ecology trip. The party begins at 6 p.m. and is open-invitation, so anyone is welcome to come and learn about Costa Rica through our experiences in the Ecology Project International program!

Next Friday, many students will be excused from classes because of various field trips occurring that day, including the Band and Chorus Trip into Boston, as well as Mr. Buckley's Law class trip to Plymouth Country Correctional Facility and an AP Biology trip to the Harvard Museum of Natural History to see The Glass Flowers exhibition!

As we count down the days to the end of the school year, in the moment, the weeks seem to be drawn out, filled with various tests and exams, as well as exciting activities and class trips; however, looking back, these final weeks also seem to fly by and feel the shortest. It's unbelievable that I have only two more weeks of high school, and two more Life at CHS articles left. Documenting and sharing my final year at CHS through this column has been an amazing experience that has improved both my ability and confidence in writing. Although it is bittersweet, I am excited for the special junior CHS student who will adopt this column at the end of May and will hopefully gain just as much from the experience!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High School. Her column runs monthly during the school year.

DON'T MISS THIS

Historical Society and western medicine

Cohasset Historical Society will conclude its spring lecture series with the beginning of a six-part series on the History of Scientific Medicine, which will be continued in the fall. The program will be a video presentation by professor Sherwin Nuland from the Yale School of Medicine. The exploration will begin with Hippocrates and the Origins of Western Medicine.

All are invited on Wednesday, May 15, in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m., and light refreshments will be served.

MUSIC

"This church has provided to the community for years," said Dorn. "We want to do things so folks in the neighborhood can stroll down to a café for a cup of coffee and hear some music. People are longing to do things that are not expensive, that are local and interesting. We invite people toward this authentic, creative community."

Dorn praised the youth pastor's efforts in bringing the coffeehouse about.

"Mandii is uniquely gifted, both with the desire to help youth and young adults, and her creative spirit," Dorn said of Thompson. "This café is the outflow of that... being able to tap into her creativity and do something for young folks. When she first started talking about [starting a coffeehouse], as a church we were all for it."

While the current outreach is focused primarily on teens and young adults, Dorn sees the coffeehouse catering to all ages.

"I think it's going to be magnetic," Dorn said. "I have a feeling it's really going to be something that meets a need for the community."

While the coffeehouse takes place in a church basement, Thompson makes it clear that it is not for church members only. Ground Level is open to the public, and anyone and everyone is welcome to attend and participate. The admission is free, although donations are appreciated (see sidebar).

There is a sign-up and screening process for those who would like to participate in the open mic or contribute their artwork. Thompson would like to review the art piece or set list and song lyrics ahead of the event to ensure the work is appropriate for all ages. The Ground Level staff reserves the right to ask participants to modify or withhold a submission if it's not up to standard.

The standard? "If you could perform it for your mother or five-year-old niece, it's OK," she said with a laugh. Thompson also explains that the censorship is akin to performing the "radio edit" of a song.

The submission guide, or "ground rules," is listed on the Ground Level Facebook page. If you would like to participate or have any questions, email Ground_Level@ymail.com.

For more on Ground Level, visit: facebook.com/groundlevelcohasset. Beechwood Congregational Church is located at 51 Church Street, Cohasset. If you have any questions, call 781-383-0808.

BRIEFLY

Concert at Parish House

The Lexington Symphony Chamber Players, an ensemble made up of professional members of the Lexington Symphony, will present works by Jongen, Françaix and Lexington composer Pamela Marshall – who will also speak at the concert. A small reception will follow. The concert will take place at 3 p.m., on Sunday, May 19, in the Parish House of First Parish Cohasset at 23 North Main St.. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

The concert will be followed by a small reception where people are invited to meet the performers and composer.

Founded in 1995 by conductor Hisao Watanabe and a group of professional musicians and supporters, the Lexington Symphony maintains a grass-roots community spirit while producing high-quality performances that attract an ever-growing audience from Lexington and surrounds. The orchestra presents six concerts each year led by conductor Jonathan McPhee.

The orchestra also has numerous outreach programs, one of which is the Lexington Symphony Chamber Players. First Parish is proud welcome Lexington Symphony members Danielle Boudrot (flute), Elizabeth Whitfield (violin), Lisa Kempskie (viola), Jane Sheena (cello), and Barbara Poeschl-Edrich (harp), in a program that explores the various combinations and timbres of these five instruments. The program will consist of pieces by Jean Francaix, Joseph Jongen and Pamela Marshall, who is a Lexington-based composer. Marshall, who studied at Eastman and Yale, was also a fellow at the MacDowell Colony. She has been commissioned by Carson Cooman, the Assabet Valley Mastersingers, Unitarian choirs in Massachusetts and Minnesota, the Fisher Foundation, and others. Marshall will be present at the concert to introduce her piece.

The concert will be followed by a small reception where people are invited to meet the performers and composer.

Local band plays House of Blues

Cohasset's Howie Altholtz is a lawyer and a rocker. Altholtz and his band, howieHowie, performed to a packed House of Blues in Boston on Thursday, May 2.

The concert was part of the 26th annual Beyond Shelter event to raise money for the Friends of Boston Homeless and the One Fund for the Boston marathon victims. Other musical acts included Jackie Berkley, No Relation, and the Berklee Bob Marley Ensemble.

Members of the ensemble joined howieHowie onstage.

"They had a girls chorus of women backup singers. I arranged for several of them to join me on 'Knockin' on Heaven's Door,' which was dedicated to the marathon, Sandy Hook, and victims of violence," said Altholtz.

The band was also joined by Cohasset resident Jim Richardson on harmonica. This was the first time Altholtz and his band played this event, he said.

"I've been playing music for 40 years," said Altholtz. "I've been on every side of the music business, from playing to producing to writing and media and entertainment law. I like the energy around it all."

Altholtz said that the event was packed, with around 900 in attendance.

"We had a really hot 40 minute set," he added, saying that howieHowie covered some popular rock tunes and also played some originals.

The event was captured on film and is airing on Cohasset's 143tv (see sidebar for times).

"It was a very fun night with a good cause," said Altholtz.

When he's not rocking out, Altholtz works as Chief Marketing Officer at Ruberto, Israel and Weiner in Boston. His work history also includes running his own law practice for several years, working as in-house counsel for Napster, and 10 years in Woodstock, New York as a songwriter, performer and producer, working with several famous musicians, including projects with Aerosmith's Steven Tyler.

Cable casting times:

- Tuesday: at 6 p.m.
- Wednesday: 10 a.m.
- Thursday: 1p.m. and 7 p.m.
- Saturday: 11 a.m.
- Sunday: 11a.m. and 7:30 p.m.
- Monday: 7p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

COHASSET GARDEN CLUB

Flower Show is May 15

The Cohasset Garden Club will present a flower show titled "Light the Land" at the Nantasket Beach Resort, 45 Hull Shore Drive, Hull. The public is invited to attend from 2 to 5 p.m. Tuesday, May 14 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, May 15. Admission is free. Floral design, photography, horticulture and conservation projects from all over New England will be exhibited.

Floral design classes will interpret such themes as Nantucket lightships, the Statue of Liberty and our own Minot Ledge Light. Photography classes will explore the most important element of light in every photograph.

Horticulture entries will feature flowering plants and shrubs in bloom in mid-May, as well as propagation and growing in containers.

"Light the Land" is being offered by The Cohasset Garden Club as part of a regional conference of The Garden Club of America that brings together delegates from 19 clubs around New England, as well as national officers and guests.

Plant sale is May 18

Plant lovers take notice. The hustle and bustle at the parking lot of the Historical Society will peak between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on May 18, when the Community Garden Club of Cohasset holds its plant sale. In case of rain, the sale will take place inside the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street.

The perennials and shrubs on offer are from the gardens of club members and friends, which make the plants tough, climate hardy and suitable for our soil, wind, and temperature extremes. In addition, there will be a variety of annuals, herbs, and vegetable seedlings that club members have expertly started from seed. Most of these are organic!

Gardening expertise is not necessary. Experienced garden club members will be on hand to help with selection, to answer questions, and give advice.

The proceeds from the plant sale will help support the many community projects to which the club is committed. These include maintaining the grounds at the Light keeper's Cottage, at Constitution Park and at the Pratt Building. In addition, the club provides monthly garden therapy at Golden Living Senior Residence, a monthly junior gardener program for students at Deer Hill School, and scholarships for deserving high school seniors.

OUR VIEW

Town emails are public records

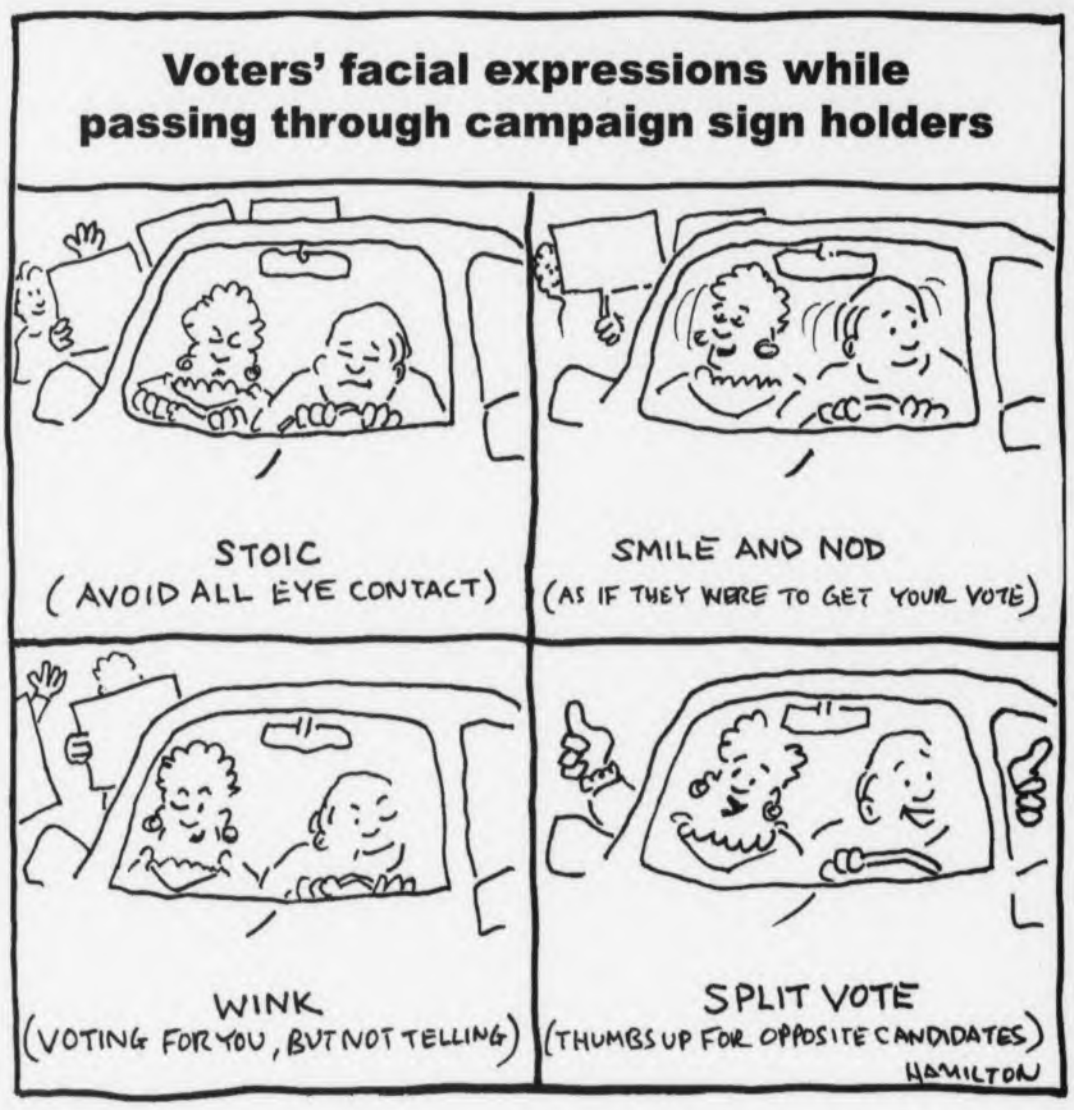
Simply put: emails sent or received by town officials conducting town business are public records. This certainly includes all emails – unless they pertain to litigation or certain personnel matters — generated on the new town email accounts set up for our town officials.

Setting up the town email accounts was an important step, in our view, towards more transparency and openness. By providing officials – including members of elected or appointed boards or committees – with town email accounts, town business won't get mixed up with an official's personal email account.

While the flap over Selectman Martha Gjesteby's town email account ended up being a tempest in a teapot – the underlying story here is that emails are public records when the town account is used. Emails on private accounts are also public records if the official is using that account to discuss town business or send or receive town-related documents.

The access issue of who can read emails in town officials' accounts is really a moot point – as the emails are public records, with limited exceptions. The emails would have to be provided through a public records request, as was the case with Gjesteby's emails. We also question the wisdom of sending any litigation or personnel matter via email.

We ask the selectmen to routinely provide copies of their email correspondence by including them in the weekly correspondence packet available in the selectmen's office. That would eliminate much of the need for expensive and time-consuming searches. In the interest of transparency – we ask the new board to please do this!



We also implore the new Board of Selectmen to set up a workshop with a representative from the public records division of the Secretary of State's Office to come down to Cohasset and educate employees, officials and the public about the public records law especially as it pertains to emails. It would be an important service.

It might also be a good time for a tutorial on the Open Meeting Law. A few years back a representative from the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office gave a very informative workshop at Town Hall. The Open Meeting Law is now under the Attorney General's Office and some of the filing methods have changed – so a new seminar is in order!

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the right (by the candy display) after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Outgoing selectman shares his message

To the people of Cohasset:

I have been honored to be chosen twice by you, the people of Cohasset, to serve in your government. This service has been a learning and broadening experience for me and I am deeply grateful for your trust and for the support and encouragement I have received from so many of you over the past six years. I know that not all my decisions have been pleasing to all, but I always acted in what I considered to be the best interests of Cohasset.

Due to the hard work of many, the town is now in much stronger condition after Cohasset's recent financial crisis. During the hard times our superb municipal employees continued to show their dedication by maintaining town and school services at a high level. Our amazing cadre of volunteers is another mainstay of the town. Whether they are serving on town boards, delivering meals to shut-ins, running the Food Pantry or helping out in so many other ways, volunteers all help make Cohasset a wonderful town.

We still have some strong challenges going forward, particularly our mushrooming debt for retiree health care benefits. Over the past year we have taken some small mitigation efforts. Much more will need to be done and our new OPEB Study Committee will be going to work on the complex financial and personnel issues at stake.

As I step down from public office I want to thank you one and all.

Please vote on Saturday. If you have children, take them to the polls and show them first hand how democracy works. My father first took me with him when I was 7 and it made an indelible impression. You can help pass our democratic traditions down to the next generation.

Paul Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road

Dog owners need to pick up!

Now that all major problems in town have been addressed, there's time to confront disturbing evidence of the crumbling of consideration on Cohasset walkways. Some pet owners are leaving untidy gift bags in their wake. What conscious thought prompts someone to pause, bend down, scoop and then leave the bag behind? Hasn't the most unpleasant part been completed? Is the gift left behind accompanied by a guileful glance over the shoulder? You are asking, no telling your neighbors that you are not going to dispose of your pet's waste, but that they have to. I can understand the pressure to have your shoes match your bag in Cohasset, but is this the way we treat our friends?

Consider this. Incorporate the bag into your exercise routine. As you warm those waking muscles with pumping legs, add an upper body workout. The pendulous motion of the sack not only creates an efficient cadence but adds isometric resistance as well. Allow your pet's recent weight loss aid you with yours.

Ok, so there are many more important issues still on the table, however, dog owners, finish the job, pack your bag and bring it home. We'd all appreciate it.

Joe Coggins, 57 Elm St

CEF appreciates help with fundraiser

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to everyone who helped make this year's spring fundraiser a success! The Derby Day Gala held on Saturday, May 4, at the Cohasset Golf Club was attended by over 200 guests. Thanks to all the sponsors and donors for their continued support of the CEF's mission to promote excellence in Cohasset public education.

In connection with the Derby Day Gala, we would like to especially thank the following individuals:

• The talented event committee and volunteers for making the Derby Day Gala a reality! Pam Turpel for designing and Dianna McSheffrey, Ashley Caufield and Susan Brower for sewing all the beautiful decorations.

• The CEF Board of Directors.

• Superintendent Cataldo, Principal Connolly, Principal deChiara, Principal LeCount, Assistant Principal Scott, and Assistant Principal Sandler for attending the event and their continued enthusiasm and support of Cohasset schools.

• The Cohasset Police Department and the Cohasset Fire Department for their generous donations to the silent auction.

• Stephanie Moriarty, the Cohasset High School Jazz Ensemble, Christian Cunnie, Lisa Sugrue and a talented group of ninth grade art students (Kerry Dunn, Carly Oremus, Maya Placek, Mysia Trojnor-Barron, Grace Lucier) for their contributions to the evening.

• Rebecca Synnestvedt, Liana Meyers, Chauncy Cunning and the Osgood teachers for their help in creating beautiful classroom art projects for the silent auction.

• Laurie Ferreira, Vicky Grimes, Dianna McSheffrey, Michelle Appleby, Lisa Sugrue, Pam Turpel, Denise Fox and Emma Cifrino for creating the amazing boutique of Kentucky Derby Day hats.

• LifeTouch, Twist Creative Group, Kevin Dooley, Lu Lu's Boutique, the McCann family, the Norton family, Stop & Shop, and the Village Greenery for their in-kind donations.

• The Cohasset Golf Club and Creative Events for the elegant venue and virtual horse racing entertainment.

• The following corporate sponsors: RW Rosano, Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance, Avalon Cohasset, Balance Studio, Dean & Hamilton, Health Express, Rockland Trust, Scituate Federal Savings Bank, Graham Waste Services, Harbor Medical Associates, Lawn Doctor, Martha Gjestby – Selectman, Sweet Relief Nursery & Preschool, The Law Offices of David Farrag and Walsh & Walsh Landscape.

The CEF was thrilled to see so many new and old faces in the crowd. With the support provided by all of you, the CEF raised enough funds to make a significant difference for our kids, our town and our future. Thank you!

Katie Norton, Ginni Froio, Katie Dugan and Anna Smith, Event Chairs

Shaw's thanked for support

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library would like to thank Shaw's of Cohasset for their continued support and generosity in providing finger sandwiches, dessert trays, bottled water, and paper goods for use at our library programs. Those who attended our movie matinees, book groups, and evening programs have snacked on delicious cookies and eaten tasty sandwiches all arranged beautifully on platters. We greatly appreciate Shaws' kindness in reaching out to their community.

BOARD OF HEALTH

Permit renewal policy updated

The Board of Health recently decided on a new policy to send out permit renewal notices to restaurants in town, following an issue with the Red Lion Inn in March after the inn did not pay its permit fees on time.

The new policy will be to send out renewal notices at least one month before the renewal deadline; the deadline will be one month before the permit's expiration. If renewal applications are not received before the deadline, the restaurant will receive another reminder notice before the permit is revoked.

The selectmen discussed asking the Board of Health to also send a certified letter, but the ultimate consensus was that the permits have to be paid in time, and the letters are merely a courtesy.

COMMENTARY

Moms are great organizers

ELISA CASTIGLIONI

There is a lot to do. The right to be safe should be recognized by the Congress at a federal level.

Soon it will be Mother's Day. My 6-year-old daughter is making me a surprise gift at school. Her teacher told the children not to tell anything to their moms. Of course mine couldn't resist. She told me about the gift. And then she begged me to forget about it, otherwise on Mother's Day there would be no surprise for me.

Well, every mom knows that this is impossible. A mother's life is filled with surprises: A sudden laughter, a shy smile, an unexpected tear, an invisible scratch that demands a "Hello Kitty" (or a "Cars") bandage. The drawing of a flower or of the pet they wish to have.

Being a mother is a great privilege. And a greater responsibility. We have the responsibility to work for our children's health, education, happiness and safety.

We are mothers not just to our children (and ideologically to all the children) but also sisters to the moms who lost theirs. Especially when it happened in a violent way. A bomb. A handgun. An AR 15. A Crickett first rifle (cute and pink, still a mortal weapon).

We need to be their voice. I know: We live in a state where gun control is already in place. What more could we do?

There is a lot to do. The right to be safe should be recognized by the Congress at a federal level. (Also New Hampshire is very, very close. Good for skiing. Scary when it comes to assault rifle shopping.)

Moms are great organizers. Let's organize a network of moms from Texas to Vermont and make a change. Call your college friend who now lives in Tennessee, your aunt who spends the winter in Florida, your sister who just moved to Oklahoma. Bring them on board. Start your own group or join one of the many that are out there working for peace. I joined Moms for Gun Sense in America.

I had hoped the universal background check would have been supported by the Congress. It didn't happen. But that was round number one, right?

Richard Bach once wrote, what the caterpillar calls the end, the master calls a butterfly.

Happy Mother's Day! A day filled with butterflies.

A Mother's Bill of Rights

We, as mothers, have the absolute right to protect our children from harm. We have the right to know our children are safe from gun violence, from the moment they leave our arms in the morning until they return home later in the day. But the rights of American mothers are under attack by criminals, the gun lobby, and legislators who are unable to stand up for common-sense gun reforms. The right of mothers to protect our children shall not be infringed.

As mothers, we have the right to...

- Expect that assault weapons will remain in the hands of our military, not civilians.
- Preserve our children's innocence and shield them from gun violence in America, real and scripted.
- Demand that all public places remain "gun-free zones," except private homes and shooting ranges.
- Know our children are safe in their schools: Any school, anywhere.
- Expect our teachers to be focused on teaching our children, not training to become armed guards.
- Demand that our government create the same strong regulations for guns as they have for toys, cars and food.
- Expect our leaders to put our children's safety above the profit and influence of the gun industry.
- Have access to complete, accurate information about the impact of gun violence on our families and communities.
- Hold our elected officials accountable for keeping our children safe from gun violence.

Mother's Day Walk for Peace

Scarlett Lewis, mother of 6-year-old Jesse Lewis, killed in Sandy Hook, Conn., will join other speakers at the 8 a.m. opening remarks before this year's Walk.

Recent violence in Boston and nationwide, underscore the importance of the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute's message of healing and dedication to peace in our communities. Established in 1996 by Tina Chery, who was grieving the death of her son to gun violence, the Mother's Day Walk for Peace began as an opportunity for families, whose children had been killed, to gather and support one another. The 17th annual Mother's Day Walk for Peace will take place from 8 to 11 a.m. Sunday, May 12 at Town Field Park, 1520 Dorchester Ave., Dorchester. For more information visit: mothersdaywalk4peace.org.

Many people from Cohasset are participating in the WALK this year as three Cohasset churches are involved, Second Congregational, First Parish and St. Stephen's. Cohasset's team, Compassionate Cohasset, will be joining a team from Newtown, Conn., parents whose child was killed at Sandy Hook School, as well as folks distraught over the violence perpetrated at the Boston Marathon. For more information, contact Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

The walk raises funds to support The Peace Institute's work to assist and empower families impacted by violence by providing support to survivors of homicide. In 2012 The Louis D. Brown Peace Institute served 44 of 53 homicides in the city of Boston. This year, in the aftermath of recent violence in Boston and elsewhere in the country, thousands more people are expected to attend.

The Mother's Day Walk is the Peace Institute's major fundraiser; although there is no cost to register, donations are encouraged to meet this year's goal of $100,000.

Scarlett Lewis, mother of 6-year-old Jesse Lewis, killed in Sandy Hook, Conn., will join other speakers at the 8 a.m. opening remarks before this year's Walk.

In honor of the walk this year, Boston's Zakim Bridge will be lit in purple, the universal color of peace, for the Mother's Day weekend. Joyce Zakim, of The Lenny Zakim Fund, feels strongly "The bridge illustrates Lenny's legacy of uniting communities and the Mother's Day Walk for Peace carries the same important message; working together we can stop violence and bring about peace for us all."

Register online at: mothersdaywalk4peace.org or on the morning of the walk at Town Field, beginning at 7 a.m. Opening remarks begin at 8 a.m. and the Walk begins at 8:30 a.m.

FOR THE RECORD

Getting down to local business

GREGORY MATHIS

Terminology is important when conveying what you're looking to do when you call our newsrooms.

Many times people call looking to place an advertisement in the paper about their upcoming community event. The ad is actually a news release if your group has nonprofit status or if the event or workshop is free to the public.

We receive a lot of news releases from the various community groups and organizations, as well as individuals, and try to find a spot for everything. News releases run on a space available basis, and there are no promises of it running a certain way, on a certain page or in a certain section of the paper. Those decisions are left to the editor's discretion.

Conversely, some community business folks send in news releases that really fall under the category of an advertisement.

The one big difference between a news release and an advertisement is an ad costs money and a news release is free of charge.

There are other differences, though.

If you buy an advertisement, you pretty much have control of not only the message, but the placement of that message. A news release is subject to editing, just like stories written by staff and any other content submitted for the newspaper or to be published online. While you can request your news release to run in one of the many different sections of the newspaper, it ultimately will be the editor's decision where it runs, depending on space.

Another difference is an advertisement is virtually guaranteed to run when you need it to run. If your message needs to be in the newspaper four weeks in a row, it's unlikely a news release will make it all four weeks. We generally try to get the release in the week before the event, but some are looking for it to run well ahead of the scheduled date, perhaps because registration is needed in advance.

The topic of how local businesses can make better use of the media – both in print and online – was a discussion point at a recent South Shore Ad Club meeting. With many smaller businesses struggling to make ends meet, the focus of the talk was on what resources were available to owners who may not necessarily have money to advertise and what type of content would we consider printing under the news release category.

We'll always find space for hirings, promotions, business awards, programs and workshops being offered by businesses, and a host of other types of news releases. We'll also do profiles of interesting business people, as well as provide space for new business in town, expanding businesses, and business-related stories that we deem meets the standard of general reader interest.

What became evident was many business owners had the perception of some giant wall blocking them from getting their word out to the community through our products. Hopefully what they learned through the course of the panel discussion is that there are many options available and it all starts with a phone call to the local editor and an interesting idea or a well-crafted news release that meets basic standards and doesn't involve a lot of work on our end.

If those criteria are met, you just might be in business.

Records request centers on candidate Gomez home

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Democrats are digging for information on Republican Senate candidate Gabriel Gomez, who lives in Cohasset.

On April 15, Town Hall received a Right to Know Request from Jamie Schell of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee in Washington, D.C. Schell followed up with an email to Planning Administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak on May 2.

Schell asked for copies of all public records including but not limited to permits, permit applications, building plans and complaints for three Cohasset properties, including 59 Highland Ave., the $2 million home of Gomez and his wife, Sarah.

The democratic campaign committee also requested copies of the trench permit for sewer service for the Gomez home, as well as a permit to install roofing, permit to remodel the master bath and kitchen, and permit to re-roof 17 squares on the house.

Finally, Schell asked for copies of any information between Gomez and the Cohasset Historical Commission, such as any permits, agreements, records and correspondence regarding preservation restrictions.

Schell said that he was only seeking information that is considered public under the Massachusetts Public Records Law, and that he was gathering the information "for research purposes only."

Schell wrote in his request, "Disclosure of this information is likely to be in the public interest and is not for commercial activities." Further, he said he is willing to pay up to $250 to obtain the documents. He asked to be notified if the fee is more than that.

Calls made to Schell's work and cell phone number were not returned by press time Thursday morning.

Planners seek public input on Route 3A study

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Now that the state department of transportation (DOT) has turned an eye to the Route 3A corridor, Chief Justice Cushing Highway, the Cohasset Planning Board is seeking public input to ensure that the town has a say in how the study goes.

The Planning Board held a public forum on Wednesday, May 8, in the Town Hall Auditorium and explained what the MassDOT's study will encompass, and asked the attendees to weigh in on what the biggest issues are with 3A, and how these problems could be improved.

Chief complaints of the night were high speeds and accidents, along with a lack of turning lanes in certain sections. Suggestions ranged from narrowing the road to force cars to go slower, changing traffic light patterns, or perhaps installing medians or traffic circles. Many expressed interest in seeing sidewalks and bicycle paths on 3A and discussed how to pay for those; the planners explained that there are grants and other funding mechanisms available.

Planning Board member Clark Brewer applied for a grant with MassDOT to have the 3A corridor studied. Out of 30 corridors that applied, Cohasset was chosen, along with Gloucester and Rockport. The main focus of the study, said Brewer, is public safety and coordinating any improvements with the state.

The planners think this is the start of a long-term development.

"This is the fact-finding part of a long process," said Planning Board chair Stuart Ivimey. "It could take as much as decades to effect actual change on 3A... We hope from the study to get a needs analysis on how to keep 3A a safe, usable mode of transportation through town, not a burden on the town, and to lobby DOT to make whatever changes the town thinks is in its best interest."

While several people, including business owners and town officials, attended the forum, the Planning Board hopes to elicit more public input through an online survey, which they plan to post on the town website within the next week. The board plans to submit comments to MassDOT in time for the study's preliminary report, which will be published at the end of June. The final document will be completed by September.

The following is a list of questions the planners passed out at the meeting; the online survey will likely include similar questions. These questions are intended to enhance critical thinking on the main problems of the 3A corridor:

- Self-image: What does the corridor say to others about what kind of place Cohasset is?
- Vehicle safety: What options might make sense for the intersection?
- Pedestrian, bicycle and commuter rail accommodation: Can these co-exist with vehicles?
- Sidewalks and roadway width: How can these increase safety while moving traffic along?
- Economic enhancement: How can signage and curb cuts encourage business quality and use?
- Future change: How could sewering impact the corridor?
- Zoning enhancements: How can abutting residential and business zones enhance each other?
- Economic development: How can sustainability or smart growth concepts shape the corridor?
- What are the top 10 benefits of the corridor as is?
- What are the top 10 problems with the corridor?
- What are the top 10 things that would improve the corridor?
- What could the future corridor look like?
- Have you ever had to walk along 3A?

Town refinances debt, saves $1.7 million

The Board of Selectmen voted to approve refinancing the town's debt, saving the town $1.7 million.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Finance Director Mary Gallagher recently met with financial advisors First Southwest and determined that many of the town's bonds could be refunded due to a current low interest rate environment.

Milanoski said, "With selling these bonds, we have yielded a good return to the town. Over the last year, through the new initiatives we've done, we've been able to save the town $1.7 million by refinancing the town's debt just by improving our finances and bond rating. This is money the town will now not have to spend."

MEET THE CANDIDATES — Vote for two

Russell Bonetti.

Russell Bonetti

(James) Russell Bonetti, 62, lives at 20 Parker Ave. He has been in town for 28 years. His education includes St. Anselms College. He is a manufacturer's rep.

Civic/municipal involvement: Current Chair of the Community Preservation Committee; Member and Chair of the Hagerty Committee (Mariners' Landing); Former member of the Harbor Health Committee; Former member of the Government Island Committee.

Favorite quote: "A positive attitude may not solve all your problems but it will annoy enough people to make it worth the effort." – Winston Churchill.

Favorite book: Too many for a favorite. Recent ones include "Empire of the Summer Moon" (Quanah Parker and The Rise and Fall of the Comanches, the Most Powerful Indian Tribe in American History) by S.C. Gwynne, and "The Man Who Saved the Union" (Ulysses Grant in War and Peace) by H. W. Brands.

Quality you most admire: A positive attitude and a sense of humor.

Fun fact: I was born in Tachikawa, Japan.

Voters' biggest concern: The biggest concern that most voters have expressed to me is the feeling that town government is not listening to them. Town Meeting votes have been ignored, and various committees' work has been interfered with. Many town employees feel uncertainty about their jobs and feel left out of the process of reorganizing the work force. I want to help make the town better for everyone. I would appreciate one of your two votes on Saturday.

Main reason for seeking election: I want to bring an independent voice to the Board of Selectmen. Over the years I have worked with various committees and groups in town on a variety of issues. I have been able to help reach a consensus on many controversial issues. I listen to people, and try to find the middle ground whenever possible. I want to bring these abilities to the BoS. Many people feel they have no voice on the BoS. With one of your two votes on Saturday, I will work hard to see that all sides feel their concerns are being heard.

Best part of Cohasset: The best part of Cohasset is the many people who give countless hours of their time to help make Cohasset the place it is.

Steve Gaumer.

Steve Gaumer

Steve Gaumer, 54, lives at 86 Pond St. He has been in town for 21 years and his education includes a BS in Business Administration and Communications from the University of New Hampshire. Gaumer is a financial advisor.

Civic/Municipal Involvement: 12 years Capital Budget Committee, 7 years as chairman; Water Planning Group; Budget Planning Group (since inception); coach for youth soccer; ASP group leader; adult sailing instructor. UNH alumni mentor network.

Favorite Quote: "Nothing in the world can take the place of Persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent." — Calvin Coolidge Favorite Book: "A Star Called Henry," by Roddy Doyle.

Quality you most admire: Candor.

Fun fact: In another life, I'd like to be a history professor.

Voters' biggest concern: Voters regularly want to talk about their continually rising taxes and their perception that there is no genuine concern for cost management. They see in their own lives and jobs that they've learned to be more productive with better tools and methods and wonder why the town has not learned the same lessons. Many are concerned about the future affordability of living here, some are concerned that rising costs will forever alter the existing fabric of the community.

Main reason for seeking election: I care about taxpayers and I want good government. The only way I know how to achieve these aims is to promote them from within. Good government is predictable, transparent and accountable. These traits create the foundations of trust by executing clearly understood, repeatable processes for reaching decisions. This has been the basis for the success achieved by the Capital Budget Committee in evaluating projects and purchases, establishing and maintaining funding, and working to strengthen the town's balance sheet.

Best part of Cohasset: School concerts; fishing boats in the morning; kids skating at the duck pond; veterans on Memorial Day; first snow on the common; Pledge of Allegiance at Town Meeting.

Leland Jenkins.

Leland Jenkins

Leland Jenkins, 69, lives at 198 Jerusalem Road. He has been town for 35 years and his education includes a BS in Civil Engineering from Tufts University. He is a small business owner.

Civic/municipal involvement: Active volunteer during my 35 years, working on such projects as the original Osgood Play Park, Alumni Field, the town fuel dispensing center.

Have taken the initiative through citizen petitions at Town Meetings to pass several town bylaws dealing with financial accountability and transparency.

Served as a trustee and deacon at the Second Congregational Church

Served 6 years on the Advisory Board and 3 years on the Board of Selectmen

Favorite quote: "You have enemies? Good. That means you've stood up for something, sometime in your life." — Winston Churchill

Favorite book: any book by W.E.B. Griffin, especially "Call To Arms."

Quality you most admire: To deal honestly with others.

Fun fact: While an Army Captain serving in Panama, during a night paratroop exercise I was first out of the plane and landed in a tree

Voters' biggest concern: Across the town from young families to seniors the biggest concern has been the ability to afford living in Cohasset. With the unfunded $38 million in post employment health care benefits and the $14 million in unfunded pension liability, residents are worried how the town will be able to cope in the future and still offer quality services.

Main reason for seeking reelection:

To continue the reforms begun in the last year that are leading us on the road to fiscal stability. When I joined the Board the town was in financial disarray from actions of a previous town manager who concealed 5 years of audit reports that disclosed inadequate policies and procedures and lack of financial accountability. In the last few months we have seen proactive changes e.g. reorganizing payroll procedures, negotiating health care premiums and restructuring bonds that has realized over $2 million in taxpayer savings. I want to ensure we stay this course toward accountability and financial health.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset's rich history and passionate people that want to leave the town better for those who follow.

Karen Quigley.

Karen Quigley

Karen Quigley, 65, lives at 27 Clay Spring Road. She has been in town for 39 years and her education includes Northeastern University, English-Journalism major (2 years). She is a web and graphic designer.

Civic/municipal involvement: As an environmentalist I sat on the Open Space & Recreation Committee, Water Resource Committee, Storm Water Committee, chaired Harbor Health Committee; was Selectman 2009-11and chair 2010-11; member citizens' group to protect Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary; successfully brought forward citizens' petition to conserve land around Peppermint Brook to protect our drinking water supply; presently member of private land conservation group, Cohasset Conservation Trust.

Favorite quote: "If you just set out to be liked, you would be prepared to compromise on anything at any time, and you would achieve nothing." – Margaret Thatcher

Favorite book: "The Human Zoo," by Desmond Morris.

Quality you most admire: Intelligence, which is not the same as education.

Fun fact: I was an avid equestrian and did dressage for discipline and jumping and cross-country for the sheer thrill of it. I kept my horse in Cohasset for a few years and enjoyed trail riding on the beautiful trails in Wheelwright Park and Holly Hill Farm.

Voters' biggest concern: A disappointment in their town leaders and anger over the turmoil, divisiveness, and overall lack of respect, arrogance, and rancor that has dominated town government for two years and led to needless legal expense and litigation placing the town in jeopardy; and that the absence of any tolerance for differing opinions has town employees and experienced, qualified town officials reluctant to speak out for fear of reprisal.

Main reason for seeking election: To restore public confidence and reestablish the traditional Cohasset values of respect and civility to town government; to work with the School Committee and Council on Aging to safeguard both the quality senior services and excellence in education that our community so highly values; to support efforts to build the new senior center; to assure a financially healthy and secure Cohasset by continuing the critical financial reforms begun under my chairmanship of the BoS; and to hire an experienced, qualified town manger to guide the selectmen in bringing back stability to our community.

Best part of Cohasset: Cohasset is unmatched in its natural environment but it is our unique sense of community that makes it special.

ELECTION

Mother's Day."

The selectmen's race could yet attract a crowd. Four residents are running for two selectmen seats: Leland Jenkins, current selectman; Russ Bonetti, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee; Steve Gaumer, Capital Budget Committee chair; and Karen Quigley, former selectman.

Jenkin's term is expiring while current selectmen chair Paul Carlson has decided not to run for reelection. The Tuesday, May 7 board of selectmen meeting was his last as an elected official.

The following citizens are also running for other town boards:

- For the School Committee, which has also has two three-year positions, Jeanne Astino (incumbent) and Mary McGoldrick (incumbent Linda Snowdale is not running for her seat);
- Library Board of Trustees (three seats for three years): Sarah Pease and Teresa Polhemus (incumbents), James Sandell;
- Board of Health (one three-year seat): Elizabeth Kirkpatrick (currently filling seat vacated by longtime member Steve Bobo);
- Cohasset Housing Authority (unexpired term for one year): Virginia Najmi (incumbent), James Sheerin;

Council on Aging board member Bebe McCarron poses questions to all the candidates during Monday's candidates' forum at the Lightkeepers Residence, which focused on elder issues, priorities for the town, and the direction elders affairs should be taking. STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

- Board of Assessors (one three-year position): Elsa Miller;
- Planning Board (one five-year full member and one three-year associate member): Charles Samuelson (incumbent) running for the full position, Joseph Regan for the full term, and Michael Dickey for the associate membership;
- Recreation Commission: Kimberly Mulcahy;
- Sewer Commission: William McGowan.

Curran honored

On the eve of the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC) men's lacrosse semifinals and finals, the conference office released the end of the year awards, including Cohasset's Vin Curran, who earned all first-team accolades, with two on the second-team and three on the third-team.

Curran has had a stellar season so far for Lynchburg.

The midfielder is third on the team in goals (23) and fifth in points (28). Curran also took over the majority of the faceoff duties, winning 56 percent of his attempts this year. His biggest moment came this year when he scored the game-winning goal over defending national champion Salisbury University.

The ODAC named him Player of the Week the ensuing Monday.

Tee Club scholarship

The Tee Club, a local women's golf club, is accepting applications from young women between the ages of 14 and 18 for up to a $500 scholarship to help defray the cost of golf lessons, golf clinics, or the golf school of your choice.

Interested females should write an essay discussing how golf has influenced their life, how they would use the scholarship money to improve their golf game, how they were introduced to the game and their hopes for improving their game this season.

Tournament bound

Skippers qualify for MIAA team tourney

By Mark Ducharme
For the Cohasset Mariner

The MIAA state individual tennis tournament starts this weekend and the Cohasset boys tennis team will send its team to the affair to compete.

"It is great tennis," said Cohasset coach Ann Thome about the MIAA individual tournament. "We will take a full fleet of boys to compete in the tournament."

Thome sent her team to the tournament a year ago. The Skippers coach has in fact the same group of players from last year competing this year.

They have a goal that they are looking to take care of this year.

"We have almost the same lineup as we had last year," said Thome. "They were developing their games last year. We had a little bit of disappointment last year. We finished 9-11 and we didn't make the tournament. We want to make the tournament."

The Skippers came into the week needing to win two of their last seven matches to get back to the post season after their 5-0 win over Abington/Rockland.

Cohasset/Hull run together

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Individually, Cohasset High School and Hull High School each have strong sports programs.

Each school has won state championships in the past few years, but being small schools, there wasn't enough numbers to field any kind of competitive track and field team.

With that in mind, the two schools have come together and fielded a co-op track and field team that has been competitive in the South Shore League.

"We have a lot of kids that are new this year," Hull coach Karissa Connors said during a quiet moment at a meet against Carver on Monday. The underclass is learning. This is the best season we've had in three or four years, and that makes it easier for the next few years because they'll all be back."

Baseball battling for postseason contention

By Mark Ducharme
For the Cohasset Mariner

The trip back to the tournament is never easy for any team even with great success.

Just ask Cohasset baseball coach Pete Afanasiw whose team has a battle ahead of them as they enter the second half of the season.

The Skippers entered the week needing to win five of their last eight regular season game to get back to post season play.

They got off to a good start on that note with wins over Carver and Norwell, cutting the magic number to three of six.

In a 11-3 win over Norwell Tuesday, junior outfielder Chris Haggerty went 3 for 4 and had two RBIs and a stolen base for the Skippers (7-7, 7-4 South Shore League). Senior Connor Goetz went 2-for-3 and had five RBIs in the Skippers win.

The team must have been listening to Afanasiw, as they played error-free baseball, the key for his team's success this season.

Shane Haggerty tossed six strong innings in the Norwell win.

Goetz was also a huge factor in the Carver victory, going 4 for 4 with a walk and 3 RBI in the 10-7 road win.

Goetz is hitting .400 with a team-leading 15 RBI. He is also working his way back to catcher duty as he recovers from a hockey injury.

Connor O'Brien pitched six solid innings and Tommy O'Brien got the save, pitching a scoreless seventh, striking out two.

"We have to stop making the mental mistakes," said Afanasiw after a recent loss to Abington. "You will make a physical error at times, but we have to stop making the mental mistakes. They are not acceptable. We have been getting in the way of ourselves lately.

"We are facing the other team's aces and that is fine. It is a compliment to our program, but we are not as good as we have been."

The South Shore League has been a very tough league so far this year. East Bridgwater has the lead in the league coming into the week

Goetz has been Cohasset's leading hitter, batting .400 with a team-leading RBI while still recovering from a shoulder injury he suffered in hockey. He is hoping to get back on the mound, where he could become the team's ace, and is also making his way back to catching.

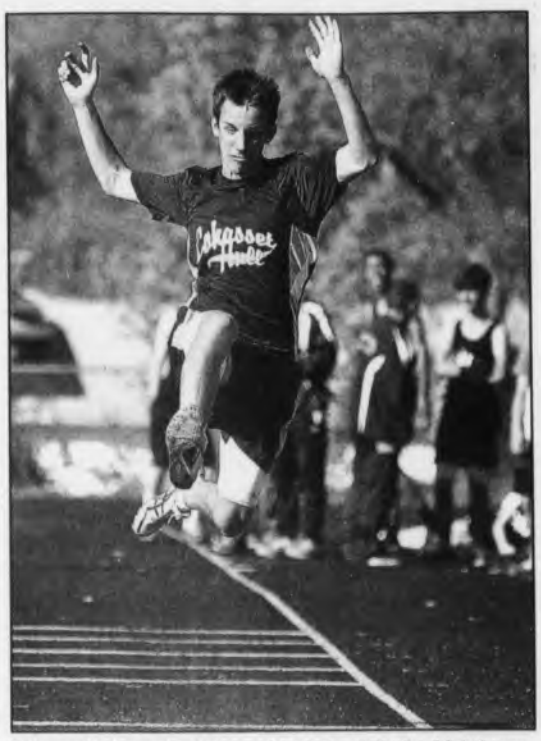
For the team, there have been many successes.

Christian Fuda is already qualified for States in the triple jump, long jump, 110 hurdles and 4x400.

Vinny Smyth has been solid in the 100, finishing first or second in all but one meet. In the meet he finished third, he still set a personal best with a 11.74 run against Mashpee.

Bobby Nahill has been strong, as has Anthony Nahill and Aaron Lanner.

Melinda Dignam is already qualified for States in the hurdles.



In the two-mile, Dan Toomey has fared well, with an 11:16.70 best.

He had a first place in the mile against Norwell.

One thing Connors likes is the fact that there is some versatility.

"The kids do it all," Connors said. "They can do the 800 or mile one day, and something different next. They are multi-faceted kids"

Stingers win Legends title

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The last shall be first in the Legends Div. of the South Shore Coastal Men's Hockey League.

The Stingers, who were the only team in either division not to win a title were able to pull out a 3-1 win over the Toros to win the Legends Div. Winter title.

The Classics Div. saw the Rangers, who finished in last place in the league in the Fall put together a strong offense in the Winter season. They led both divisions in scoring and rolled to a 6-1 win over the Bruins in the Classics Div. title game.

Scott Kelly of Pembroke scored twice in the final 3:42 of the game including an empty-net goal to lead the Stingers to its 3-1 championship game win.

Chris Poudrier assisted on both of the goals by Kelly.

Hanover's Peter MacPherson scored an unassisted goal to give the Stingers the first goal of the game in the second period.

Joe Spagenberger of Scituate tied the game with a wrist shot and goalie Ken Menkello had 26 saves in the game for the Toros.

Jim Hutchinson scored two goals including a first period power play goal as the Rangers rolled to a 6-1 win over the Bruins in the Classics Div. final.

Lou Sideropoulos had goal with two assists and John Sances added goal and an assist each for the Rangers, who scored the first five goals of the game.

Joe O'Connell and Hanover's Jay Parker added a goal each in the win.

and Cohasset was fifth and there was a three loss difference between the two teams.

Abington pulled into a tie for the lead with a win over East Bridgewater.

The Skippers have had a tough time as of late with the mental mistakes according to the coach in losses to Mashpee, East Bridgewater and Abington.

According to the coach they allowed nine unearned runs in the losses to Mashpee (5-2) and East Bridgewater (5-4).

Cohasset will attempt to bounce back in the league with games against Carver, Norwell, Hull, Rockland and Monomoy as they begin the second half of South Shore League play.

The Skippers lost a tough 1-0 game to Abington at home. They were only able to garner three hits off Abington ace Mike Walsh.

Shane Haggerty pitched a tough gutsy game for the Skippers. The senior righthander battled his way to a complete game allowing just four singles. He struck out four walked three and hit three batters.

"You have to tip the hat to Mike (Walsh)," said Afanasiw. "He did a very nice job. It is frustrating. I felt that my guy (Shane Haggerty) pitched a great game. He was able to get in and get out of trouble."

The difference in the game was that Abington took advantage of its opportunity.

Tyler Perakslis (two hits) slapped a leadoff single to left in the second inning. He moved to second on a wild pitch and to third on a flyball. He scored on a slow roller hit to short by Jake Quinlan.

Cohasset's chance to score was a delayed double steal attempt in the fourth inning. They had runners on first and third with no outs, but Abington shortstop Brian Dwyer who cut off the throw to second on the double steal attempt, threw a strike to catcher Nate Littman to cut down Terrence Doonan who attempted to score from third for the Skippers.

"They just made one more play than we did," said Afanasiw.

Haggerty. Connor Goetz and Brett Dooley each had a single for Cohasset in the loss to Abington.

BOYS LACROSSE

Gelling as a team

Laxmen playing solid lacrosse

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team was scheduled to go into a tough battle against Div. 2 power Hingham last night with an 8-2 record that included six wins in a row, mostly of the one-sided variety and a No. 1 ranking among Div. 3 teams in the state.

"The team has gelled really well lately, outscoring our opponents 91-17 (over their last six games, all wins)," Cohasset first-year coach James Beaudoin. "The offense is unselfish and has moved the ball very well living the motto 'We don't care who scores, just that we do.'"

While the scoring has become a force, the defense has been equally up to the task.

In wins over Hamilton-Wenham and Mashpee, the Skippers won by a combined 28-0.

They beat Hamilton-Wenham (9-6) 11-0, and Mashpee 17-0.

Beaudoin praised the defense.

"The defense has also become a strong unit communicating well and getting our second and third slides where they are needed."

The Skippers have had help from an outstanding draw by Will Golden, who has won almost 90 percent of his faceoffs.

In the net, Jack Conte has a 72 percent save percentage.

Heading into playoff time, Beaudoin is working to keep his players from thinking that far ahead.

"We want to focus on one game at a time," he said. "We are not focused in the playoffs until the BC High game (season ender, May 22) is over."

Games still left are Hanover, Hull, Westborough, Scituate and BC High.

TENNIS

That number was met on Tuesday when the Skippers rolled to a 4-1 win over Norwell to improve to 10-3.

"That was a big win for us," Thome said of the Norwell win. "We lost to them 3-2 earlier in the season. To beat them resoundingly was nice. It's exciting. We're on a high right now."

Tuesday, Cohasset beat Carver 5-0.

They have a tough stretch of matches against rivals Norwell and Scituate this week. Cohasset will face Sacred Heart in a non-league match on Tuesday, Randolph on Wednesday and Monomoy on Thursday.

Cohasset defeated Sacred Heart 5-0 earlier this year as well as Monomoy.

The team split its two matches with Div. 1 Old Colony League power Bridgewater-Raynham and took a match in their loss to another Div. 1 power, Hingham.

Thome feels that her team has strong leadership and it is why they have improved.

Seniors captains Jack Thome (second doubles) and Jack Cobin (first doubles) are the Skippers leaders.

"They have both provided strong leadership," said Thome. "Justin started playing tennis about three or four years ago."

One of the keys for the Skippers has been the strong play of if its No.1singles player Niles Morin. The sophomore is a humble player according to the coach and she feels that is big positive for her team.

"Niles played No.1 singles as a freshman," said Thome. "He is very humble and modest. I just found out that he won his first USTA match in New Hampshire this year. He defeated the top-seed in the quarterfinals and the third seed in the finals."

Another sophomore Danny Surkovic, who can play either singles or doubles is playing third-singles this year for the Skippers.

Eric Weinstein, a junior who has played second and third singles in the past is Cobin's partner at first doubles. Weinstein can play either singles or doubles very well according to the coach.

Doug Fitzgerald, another junior played at either second or third singles a year ago. He is playing singles this year.

"Eric and Doug are both dependable strong players," Thome said. "Eric made it to the second round of the individual tournament last year. They both love to compete and play tennis."

Cohasset's No. 1 singles player Niles Morin hits a return in an early season match. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Thome at second doubles, has played with two different players so far this year, Nathan Bumstead and Trevor Tedeschi. Tedeschi was supposed to start the season playing as Thome's partner,but came down with mono.

Bumstead has played most of the season so far with Thome and the two teamed up for a key win over B-R in Cohasset's 3-2 win.

Thome likes also the fact that her program has five new freshmen that are helping the program including Jack Dutton, who has competed in some of the team's matches so far.

In the Carver victory Tuesday, Dan Surkovic (No. 1), Jason Bumstead (No. 2) and Ben Astley (No. 3) won in singles for Cohasset (9-3). The Skippers got doubles victories from Jackson Dutton/Sam Pitts (No. 1) and Christian Bumstead/Will Butenschoem (No. 2).

GIRLS LACROSSE

Wild and crazy tie

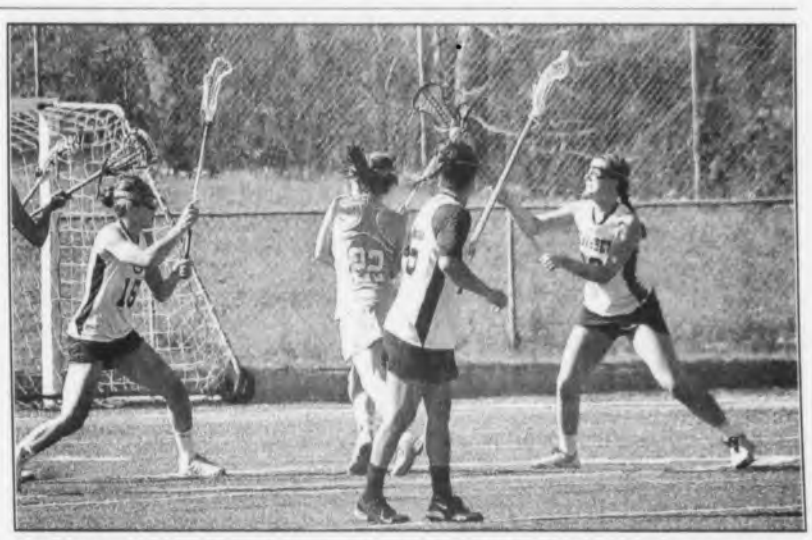
Laxwomen knot up defending D2 champs

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset HS girl's lacrosse team faced a tough challenge last Friday against defending D2 State Champion Medfield and the team more than rose to the task and played their best game of the season in a wild 9-9 tie.

Medfield attackers continually drove hard to the cage all day long and the Skipper defense of Molly and Megan Fitzgerald, Kyle Burke and Mackenzie Axelson refused to allow them any easy shots. Goalie Kylie Coffman made all the hard work on defense pay off as she made several outstanding saves and finished the game with a season high 12 stops.

The Cohasset offense got rolling early as Kathryn Dunn fed Corey Golden who drove hard to her left and ripped a far corner shot to tie the game at 1-1.



Hope Kissick then notched her first of four goals on the day on a free position shot to give the Skippers their first lead at 2-1. Medfield scored the next two goals to take a 3-2 lead before Ally Leahy hit a cutting Madigan O'Neill and she fired a shot that beat the Medfield goalie to the bottom left corner. The Warriors regained the lead at 4-3 but that would be short lived as the Cohasset offense worked the ball around several times which gave Maddie Curley the opportunity to beat her defender on a crease roll and knot the game at four with three minutes left in the first half.

Both teams made furious bids to take the lead before the half but outstanding goaltending on both ends prevented another score. The half ended with Coffman stuffing a Medfield shooter on the crease and holding the ball until time expired.

Medfield took a 5-4 lead at the beginning of the second half before Dunn threaded a great pass to Kristin Alexander who scored to tie the game yet again. Cohasset gained their first lead of the second half as Axelson fed Kissick on the crease.

The Skippers then increased the lead to 7-5 after an excellent play by Leahy who forced a bad pass by the Warrior goalie that was intercepted by Kissick and tossed into the open cage. Kissick then returned the favor by scooping a loose ball and then feeding Leahy to make the score 8-6. The Warriors tied the game on two free position shots and took the lead at 9-8 keeping possession after the goal on a foul. It was looking bleak for the Skippers but another Medfield goal was called back after a dangerous shot call that gave them the ball back. After a nice clearing play by the defense, Kissick sprinted down the alley to tie the game for the fifth time at 9-9.

The final 45 seconds of the game was filled with frantic action as Dunn forced a bad pass from a Medfield defender on a clear, Leahy intercepted it and Cohasset called a timeout to set up a final play. Dunn drove to the cage and forced a shooting space violation on Medfield to set up a free position shot. Dunn shot low and it appeared the ball got past the Medfield keeper but the referee denied the bid and the Warriors transitioned the ball up the field with 15 seconds left to try and score the game winner. As the Medfield attacker raced down the field, defender Molly Fitzgerald set up in position to stop their final bid. The players collided and the referee called a charge on the Medfield attacker as Cohasset preserved a well-deserved tie in what was a game to remember.

Coach Kully Reardon was pleased with the team's effort.

"Today was a great testament to the kind of team we are," she said. "The girls fought hard for every ground ball won and every goal scored. From Kylie and the entire defense to midfield and the attack, everyone participated and helped us pull out the tie. It was a total team effort."

The Skippers traveled to Hull on Monday and started very slowly, falling behind 3-1 in the first five minutes of the game before completely dominating the rest of the way and winning 16-6. Captains Hope Kissick (5 goals, 1 assist) and Kristin Alexander (5 goals) led the scoring parade, followed by the first career two-goal game from freshman Paige Carrabes.

Defender Molly Fitzgerald caused four turnovers adding to her team leading total of 33 on the season. The win clinches second place in the South Shore League for Cohasset and an automatic bid into the MIAA D2 tournament. The team's record stands at 4-4-2 going into the last six games of the season before the tourney.

PLAY AT SUMMER CAMP!
How Summer Camp Experiences Support Optimal Child Development

By Lucy Jackson Norvell, Director of Public Information, American Camp Association, New England

There's a lot in the news lately about the value of play. Child development experts have always considered opportunities for play essential to optimal child development. And today's families and schools are facing a serious problem—time for play has been squeezed out of the schedule. The American Academy of Pediatrics and other child development researchers have issued a number of reports in the last few years emphasizing the importance of play in the lives of developing children. There's a renewed interest in ensuring that children's lives include enough play.

Playing develops essential life skills like cooperation, compromise, and teamwork. It encourages social-emotional learning. And playing prepares the developing brain for future challenges of all types—cognitive, social, emotional, and physical.

Summer camps provide unparalleled opportunities for play and at camp, play is a priority. In fact, play, in a variety of forms, dominates the camp day. The fun experiential educational settings of day and overnight camp, where children learn by doing, are full of opportunities for both unstructured free play and play guided by adults. And these opportunities are woven around times of specific instruction and formal learning.

At camp, playing means moving often in new and different ways. Whether it's a spontaneous game of tag, a unique camp specific game, a wide game involving a few hundred people, a traditional contest such as a baseball or soccer tournament, an intense gaga match, or a noncompetitive game that fosters group cooperation, playing at camp involves moving around a lot: running, climbing, swimming, jumping, stretching. And these are all forms of exercise that are not always part of children's non-camp lives.

Camp play encourages safe risk-taking by allowing campers to try new things—things they may not have felt brave enough to try before, like zooming down the zip line, singing a solo in the talent show, or extending the hand of friendship to someone new. Camp experiences allow children to try new experiences and to "try on" new attributes and qualities.

Playing at summer camp doesn't only stretch children's muscles, it also encourages them to stretch themselves in all ways and to stretch in the direction of their goals! Campers move beyond their comfort zones and push themselves to exceed their own goals.

Campers grow into their own potential through play. Playing at camp also helps children learn teamwork. Campers build cooperation, compromise and conflict resolution skills under the guidance of trained counselors. Through play, children have critically important experiences of leading and following, and of balancing the needs of the group with their own individual needs and wants.

The settings of summer camp throughout New England—whether nestled among the lakes, forests, beaches, and mountains, or located in or near cities inside, encourage and inspire play. Every child deserves the benefits a play-filled summer camp experience can provide!

Last but not least, it's fun.

Cyclists offer all these reasons and more to explain why their ranks are growing steadily in Massachusetts. By just one measure, the number of Bay State commuters who mainly biked to work spiked 80 percent from 2000 to 2011, from roughly 12,300 people to 22,200, according to U.S. Census Bureau estimates.

The rise has been rapid in a handful of cities – Cambridge estimated there were three times as many people biking on its streets last year compared to 2002.

Add people who bike mostly for fun or fitness and the numbers soar. About 688,000 people in Massachusetts biked more than once in 2011, according to estimates by the National Sporting Goods Association. That's about one in 10 state residents.

Also climbing now: The number of state and local leaders who say they want to build on this trend as an alternative to congested roads and streets originally built mainly for cars.

In a recent sign of this shift, the state Department of Transportation (MassDOT) announced last fall it aims to triple travel by biking, walking and public transit by 2030. It's not about just accommodating people who bicycle for fun, but recognizing bikes as a form of transportation, said Catherine Cagle, manager of sustainable transportation at MassDOT.

"We want more of them," she said.

But to get more people cycling on a larger scale across eastern Massachusetts, it could take time, more infrastructure and more concentrated efforts to educate people about rules of the road, say transportation advocates and planners.

Advocates credit the recent expansion of bike lanes, paths and places to lock up bikes in part for the growth of cycling, making it more convenient and safer for more people to hop behind the handlebars.

For example, in the 101 towns and cities served by the Metropolitan Area Planning Commission, there are now about 103 miles of striped bike lanes, 43 miles of shared lane markings and 67 miles of shared-use paths, according to the commission.

"When you build it, they come," said Jason Schrieber, a principal at Nelson/Nygaard Consulting Associates, a planning firm that specializes in bicycle and pedestrian plans. "Embracing cycling is not a hurdle for most people – they've been doing it since they were 5. It's just that we never really gave them the environment to do it safely, until now."

Cyclists also credit bike-friendly shifts in public attitudes and values. More people – especially younger generations – are moving to more urban areas and seeking healthier, greener and simpler ways to get around, and more leaders are embracing that shift.

Much of the growth of cycling has not been among the stereotypical, spandex-clad crowd, said David Watson, executive director of the Massachusetts Bicycle Coalition, or MassBike.

"They're just regular people, very often riding inexpensive bikes, wearing regular clothes, just to get around," he said.

But cycling's growth has been uneven. In Bristol, Norfolk, Plymouth and Worcester counties, there are fewer bike commuters than the state average.

Beyond Boston and nearby communities, bike infrastructure can be scarce or disconnected from other lanes, trails or common routes. More towns and cities are embracing lofty goals for bikeable, walkable streets on paper, but this doesn't always yield results on the ground.

The next ring of communities outside Boston – including suburbs and other cities – will need to catch up, said Steve Miller, executive director of the New England Healthy Weight Initiative at Harvard School of Public Health and a board member at the Livable Streets Alliance, where he writes a transit blog, "The Public Way."

"Bicycling is going to be one of those lifestyle harbingers of future economic growth," he said.

Many advocates also see room to improve safety as more bikes hit the streets.

Statistics from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration show 39 cyclists died on Bay State roads from 2007 to 2011 – roughly 2 percent of all crash deaths combined for those years. Seven deaths occurred in Boston, with the rest distributed throughout the state.

A more recent case illustrated what many cyclists viewed as a failure to recognize their legal right to share the road. A grand jury in February decided not to indict a truck driver, Dana McComb, whom police say struck and killed cyclist Alexander Motsenigos in a hit-and-run in Wellesley last summer. At the time, MassBike condemned the decision.

Police departments also reported to MassDOT that more than 2,100 people riding bikes suffered non-fatal injuries in crashes from 2007 to 2010, though the count is inexact and does not include most crashes in Boston. And while many cyclists say tensions with drivers are rare, they do arise – in a recent example, Cambridge police in February charged a Lowell man with assault after he allegedly got out of his car and slapped a man on a bike in the face.

In part, cyclists are aiming for more safety in numbers – in some U.S. cities, overall bike crash rates have declined as more people pedaled. At MassBike, Watson favors more public education on sharing the road, but most of all, more regular bike education in schools.

"If we want to make the real shift, where people are instinctively looking for bicyclists and thinking about the safety of all the different users of the road, we really need to start with the kids," he said.

MassBike also backs legislation this year aimed at safety, including a bill to stiffen fines and require traffic safety training for drivers who harm, threaten or assault cyclists, as well as pedestrians, skaters and other so-called "vulnerable road users."

Another bill backed by a coalition of public health and transit groups this year would provide new financial perks to towns that adopt bicycle- and pedestrian-friendly street standards.

As state and local leaders look to fill gaps in the region's cycling infrastructure and make other improvements, Boston Bikes Director Nicole Freedman noted her city was once rated among the worst in the U.S. for bicycling.

Since 2007, it has added 60 miles of bike lanes, launched the Hubway bike-sharing program and made other strides.

"Five years later, we're one of the top cycling cities in the country, in a city that has narrow, tight streets and has winter," Freedman said. "That really says: Look, it's doable anywhere."

Legislation focuses on safer streets for cyclists, walkers

Rules for bikes

State law says bicycles "shall have the right to use all public ways in the commonwealth," except for highways where signs are posted specifically prohibiting bikes. They also "shall be subject to the traffic laws and regulations of the commonwealth."

That means bikes have as much right to be in most travel lanes as cars and trucks, and that most of the same traffic rules apply to cyclists, including obeying traffic signals and signs.

There are a few special rules – for example, cyclists may ride on sidewalks outside business districts if necessary, should signal stops or turns by hand if possible to do so safely and may pass cars on the right, the law says.

Cyclists also may ride two abreast, but must allow any traffic to pass. Front and rear lights and reflectors either on the pedals or worn on the rider's ankles are required for travel within a half-hour after sunset and a half-hour before sunrise.

Helmets are required for anyone 16 or younger.

Rules for cars

Motorists must pass cyclists "at a safe distance and at a reasonable and proper speed," state law says. If a driver can't safely pass a bike in the same lane, he or she must use another lane or wait until a safe chance to pass.

Drivers also are required to check for bikes and pedestrians before opening a car or truck door. Violations may be punished by a fine of no more than $100.

When taking left turns, drivers must yield to oncoming traffic, including bikes on the right of other approaching vehicles, the law says.

Similarly, drivers are not supposed to turn right across the path of a cyclist "unless the turn can be made at a safe distance from the bicyclist at a speed that is reasonable and proper."

Twenty-eight years ago, a truck driver struck Peter Brooks while he was riding his bike, leaving him with brain damage and in the trauma center at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston for five days.

Brooks said he has since recovered completely and remains an active cyclist, sitting on the board of directors for the Charles River Wheelmen, a club of some 1,200 riders.

"Life has to be lived," he said of his return to biking.

While the driver's insurance helped pay for medical bills, Brooks said the man faced no penalty for the crash that transformed the Watertown cyclist's life. In part, that's why Brooks supports legislation from the Massachusetts Bicycle Coalition, or MassBike, known as the vulnerable road users bill.

The bill would step up consequences for negligently or recklessly killing, seriously injuring or harassing a cyclist, pedestrian and anyone else considered vulnerable in the path of a car.

"If the vulnerable road user law is passed, that would give cyclists a little bit more leverage in a case against motorists," Brooks said.

Republican State Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, said he supports the vulnerable road user law.

"It's a free-for-all out there," said Hedlund, a bicycling enthusiast who sometimes bikes to the State House from Milton. "The pedestrian laws are not followed."

The vulnerable road user bills is among several proposed legislation that bicycle, transportation and public health advocates hope to pass this year with the aim of making it safer and easier to get around by bike or on foot. Other bills would bar parking in bike or marked shared-use lanes and reduce the default speed limit if it is not marked from 30 miles per hour to 25 on certain busy streets.

The main bill defines vulnerable road users as "a pedestrian or a person operating a bicycle, handcycle, tricycle, skateboard, roller skates, in-line skates, wheelchair, non-motorized scooter or any non-motorized vehicle, or a person riding a horse."

That is a broader definition than when MassBike first filed the bill last year. "We wanted to pitch a bigger tent," said David Watson, MassBike's executive director.

Among other things, the bill would subject drivers found guilty of crimes such as motor vehicle homicide or hurting or killing a person while driving drunk to double the normal fines if the victim is considered a vulnerable road user.

The bill also would require violators to take a traffic safety class and perform up to 100 hours of community service related to road safety. The legislation would set penalties for drivers who harass vulnerable users with their vehicles and lays out guidelines for victims to sue motorists who assault or make verbal threats against them.

Such behavior is rare, several cyclists said, but dangerous when it occurs.

"We want to actually create the legal structure to protect people, but by doing so, we're also publicly sending a message that this kind of behavior is unacceptable, and that is perhaps the more important result," Watson said.

Overall, many cyclists see room to improve safety on Bay State roads. Massachusetts ranked the 11th safest state in the country for biking in the 2012 Bicycling and Walking in the United States report, by the Alliance for Biking and Walking.

Bicyclists represented about 2 percent of all traffic deaths from 2007 to 2011. That's about the same as the nation as a whole, according to the Bicycling and Walking report.

Hedlund said head injuries cause 90 percent of the fatalities suffered by bicyclists who are involved in motor vehicle accidents.

"This why wearing helmets is so important," he said. "I got hit on Front Street in Weymouth years ago and I've been wearing a helmet semi-religiously since then."

Hedlund said current state law requires bike riders under age 16 to wear a helmet while riding.

"That law was put in place back in the early 90's," he said.

South Shore Hospital spokeswoman Sarah Darcy stated 73 patients were treated for injuries incurred in bicycle accidents in 2011-2012.

These patients, according to Darcy, included 51 adults age 16 or older and 22 children age 15 or under were treated in the hospital emergency room or required a transfer to Boston Children's Hospital.

"Head abrasions, concussions and skull fracture account for almost one-third of the 73 injuries," Darcy stated.

She further stated most of the injuries suffered by cyclists in roadway accidents generally consisted of facial bone fractures, broken collarbones, femur or upper leg bone fractures, upper arm and leg bone breaks, broken ribs, collapsed lungs, in addition to internal injuries to the liver, spleen, and pancreas.

While many cyclists see a need for more drivers to be aware, avoid turning in front of riders and look before opening doors in traffic, they acknowledge some bikers could improve, too, by avoiding habits like recklessly running red lights or riding the wrong way.

Watson chalked some of the problems up to a casual attitude about traffic laws in the Bay State, regardless of how one gets around. MassBike focuses partly on public education on safety and rules of the road.

"Part of it is there may be a need for more traffic enforcement in Massachusetts, but that's a challenge because our police departments are under huge financial pressure and have lots of other priorities," he said.

A vulnerable road users law would help set an official tone that whoever can cause the most damage in a situation has more responsibility to prevent it, said Steve Miller, a board member at the nonprofit Livable Streets Alliance and author of a transit blog, The Public Way."

"Right now, we have a general attitude of, 'I've got my space, get out of my way,'" Miller said. What's needed is more of a sense that "we're all in this together," he said.

Another bill takes aim at the way streets are designed, which other advocates see as key to safer roads.

An Act Relative to Active Streets and Healthy Communities would offer financial incentives to towns and cities that adopt cyclist- and pedestrian-friendly street standards and create plans to carry them out on the ground.

"The problem is there's always a space between policies that are on the books and getting them implemented, really, on the ground," said Maddie Ribble, policy and communications director for the Massachusetts Public Health Association, which backs the bill.

Hedlund said the roadways on the South Shore are generally incompatible for bicyclists to use.

"When Massachusetts began its bridge rebuilding program it was supposed to include bicycle access here on the South Shore," he said. "The reconstruction of Route 228 in Hingham and Route 123 in Norwell are supposed to have shoulders to allow for bike riders, but people fought tooth and nail against it because they did not want the shoulder to encroach on their front lawns."

Hedlund said Boston Mayor Thomas Menino has done a good job with creating bicycle lanes in the city for riders.

"He has improved them immensely for cyclists immensely," Hedlund said.

Myriad reasons to ride

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

Lori Cooke of Pembroke said it took her a while to get used to bumping into another person's arm or hand while riding in a group, but now she's used to it.

Moving through the group of cyclists she often rides with, Cooke said she catches up with several different people during a ride.

"I love group rides for the socialization. We tend to move through the pack catching up with friends after busy weeks," she said. "At times a little friendly competition ensues as we race for town lines or up hills. Then of course there's the coffee or lunch after a nice long ride. It's a family."

By most accounts, this is only a fraction of all people who ride in the Bay State – some as activists, others just for short trips around town or leisurely rides, and still more as part of organized cycling clubs that ride for longer distances and at higher speeds.

Whatever their reasons for biking, the number of riders continues to grow.

"There seem to be more serious riders, more enthusiasts than there used to be," said Beth Mills, owner of The Cycle Lodge in Pembroke. "A lot of that was started with the charity rides."

The Pan Mass Challenge is the biggest of these charity rides on the calendar in Massachusetts and one of the biggest in the country. According to the Pan Mass Challenge's website, an average of 5,500 bike riders participate, coming from 36 states and eight countries. Last year the event raised $37 million for cancer research.

Mills said people pick up riding for the events and then stick with them. She said another major reason people ride is to stay in shape.

"There's a big fitness craze in general," she said. "We have a lot of people who are former runners."

Mills described how running puts a lot of weight on a person's knees, whereas riding is non-weight bearing. So even though they are both physically demanding, a runner can transition to riding a bike to stay active.

Census data offers a few details about who bike commuters are. They represented only 0.7 percent of all Bay State commuters as of the U.S. Census Bureau's 2011 American Community Survey, but that's up from 0.4 percent as of the 2000 Census.

This seems to mirror a national trend – in the U.S., the number of bike commuters rose nearly 40 percent from 2005 to 2010, according to the League of American Bicyclists.

The Bay State ranked 15th highest in the country for commuting by bike in the 2012 Bicycling and Walking in the United States report, by the Alliance for Biking and Walking. The study placed Massachusetts behind states such as Oregon, Washington and California.

Most bike commuters are

WHY WE RIDE

Quick spin with: George Johnson

George Johnson is a South Shore Biker rider who participates in a weekly ride held by Beth and Jim Mills of "The Cycle Lodge," in Pembroke. He answered the following questions recently about why he rides a bicycle.

What was your first bike, and what do you ride currently?
My first bike was a Schwinn steal bike. Currently, I ride a Merline Titanium Custom (purchased in 1999). I have over 12,000 miles on this bike.

Why do you ride?
I maintain good health with less strain on my knees and hips. Having been a long time runner for over 20 years, I needed to find another form of exercise with a desire to develop new skills with effective conditioning.

Mountain bike or road bike (and why)?
I enjoy riding reasonable distance. I started by riding a cycling event PMC (Pam Mass Challenge) in 1993. Next I participated in a two-day 192-mile cycling event from Sturbridge to Provincetown, to raise funds for Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. 2013 will be my 20th consecutive ride and at 80-years-old continue to be inspired by the purpose of this event.

What's your favorite place to ride on the South Shore?
Duxbury, Kingston, Plympton, Carver, Marshfield, Pembroke, Marshfield, Scituate, Hingham and Norwell.

Favorite post-ride meal and beverage?
Pasta and beans. Plenty of fluids such as water and sport drink. Some protein too.

Quick spin with: Kate Lysakowski

Kate Lysakowski is a South Shore Biker rider who participates in a weekly ride held by Beth and Jim Mills of "The Cycle Lodge," in Pembroke. She answered the following questions recently about why she rides a bicycle.

What was your first bike, and what do you ride currently?
A Specialized Allez. Currently I ride the same bike, as well as a mountain and cyclocross bike.

Why do you ride?
It's just so much fun!

Mountain bike or road bike (and why)?
Both; I like to mix it up.

What's your favorite place to ride on the South Shore?
Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

Favorite post-ride meal and beverage?
Good and greasy breakfast food, with either hot chocolate or OJ, depending on how cold my ride was!

Do you have a funny or interesting anecdote about riding?
Once on a mountain bike ride around the holidays, my friend and I found a small tree in the middle of the woods decorated with Christmas ornaments. It was a great little discovery.

Quick spin with: Lori Cooke

Lori Cooke is a South Shore Biker rider who participates in a weekly ride held by Beth and Jim Mills of "The Cycle Lodge," in Pembroke. She answered the following questions recently about why she rides a bicycle.

What was your first bike, and what do you ride currently?
I remember a turquoise blue banana seat bike as a child, but I bought my first road bike in 1976 with paper route money, which was a black Bianchi 10-speed.

Why do you ride?
I ride for the escape, the freedom.

Mountain bike or road bike (and why)?
Both! Each has it's own special qualities; I love the solitude and cognitive stimulation of the woods. The road lets me "open things up," travel further in the same amount of time and not really have to think about anything other than pedaling.

What's your favorite place to ride on the South Shore?
I have a coastal route that spans through Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Norwell and back home to Pembroke. Jerusalem Road (Cohasset) is my favorite segment.

Favorite post-ride meal and beverage?
Hands down has to be a burrito and Mexican Coke!

Do you have a funny or interesting anecdote about riding?
One time, while training in the Blue Hills, I wanted to be like the boys and bunny hop the potholes. I bunny hopped the same pothole 2X and flatted both times! The final lap, I chose to ride around it and got a bee in my helmet.

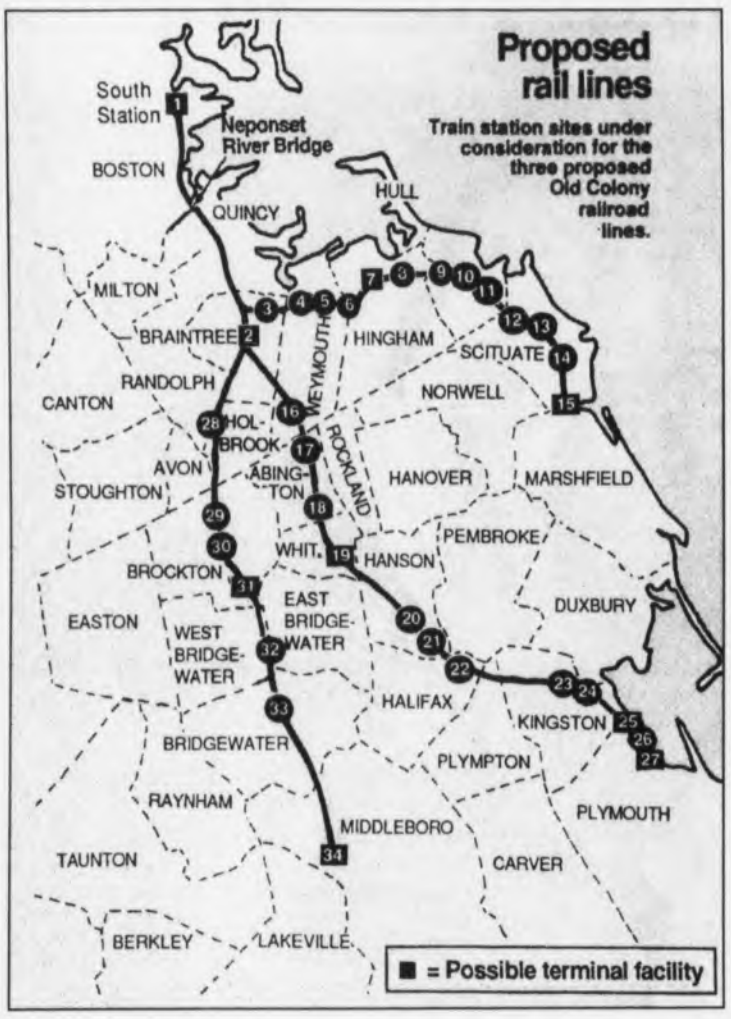
Quick spin with: Patrick Duffy

Patrick Duffy is a South Shore Biker rider who participates in a weekly ride held by Beth and Jim Mills of "The Cycle Lodge," in Pembroke. He answered the following questions recently about why he rides a bicycle.

What was your first bike, and what do you ride currently?
My first bike was a Mongoose BMX bike. Then, a Huffy road bike.

Why do you ride?
I ride now for fitness, which has turned to pure fun. I really can't get enough.

Mountain bike or road bike (and why)?
I equally ride road and mountain bikes. During the colder winter months I am mostly in the woods with the mountain bike. Then it progresses to the road. I have modified the mountain bike with thinner off road tires to be more efficient on the road as well as off.



What's your favorite place to ride on the South Shore?
My favorite off road place to ride would be Wompatuck State Park, but there are plenty of places within a 15-mile radius of my home in Marshfield to ride and I have loads of fun.

Favorite post-ride meal and beverage?
Food! Lots! Chocolate milk. Large turkey sandwich.

Do you have a funny or interesting anecdote about riding?
There is a certain protocol when riding with others. I have met so many super friendly people in the riding community they help with anything.

RAIL TRAILS

Pursuing a path for safety

By Seth Jacobson
sjacobson@wickedlocal.com

When it comes to providing recreational space for riding bicycles, Rockland is ahead of the game with its establishment of a rail trail in town.

And it has gotten the state's attention.

In the middle of March, Rockland Town Administrator Allan Chiocca had a meeting in Boston with officials from the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), the MBTA, Iron Horse Preservation (the company that did the train track removal in Rockland for the rail trail) and those from other communities interested in establishing rail trails.

"The meeting was for those officials who are interested in looking at rail trails as a possibility," Chiocca said. "It was also for the purpose of developing a playbook for other communities, because establishing a rail trail is a process. And nobody has more regulatory roadblocks than Massachusetts when it comes to this sort of project."

He explained there are many conservation regulations that make it difficult to establish rail trails, but there are still several rail trails around the state.

The Rockland rail trail spans about 2-1/2 miles.

The Iron Horse Preservation Society, a company based out of Nevada, did the track removal on the rail trail project more than a year ago, which took a few months.

"We didn't pay them anything," Chiocca said last summer. "All they wanted were the old railroad tracks and old ties for the tracks."

He explained Iron Horse just collects the iron from the tracks, as it is valuable.

Open Space Committee Chairman Donald Cann said he has a bigger vision for the rail trail in Rockland; he wants it to get larger by having other towns join the network.

Cann said Abington and Hanover have old tracks that could be removed to make way for rail trails, but noted those attempts were unsuccessful for different reasons.

"Ultimately, I would like to see other towns connect with our rail trail so we could have something like Boston's Emerald Necklace on the South Shore," Cann said. "But state regulations can be difficult when it comes to establishing rail trails. Each town has its own hurdles."

He added having a network of trails would be great for those bicyclists on the South Shore, providing a safe place to ride.

"There's that, and there's a lot of other benefits of having rail trails in town," Cann said. "It adds value to abutting homes, it adds to the quality of life and provides a safe, beautiful place for biking and walking. There are not many drawbacks."

According to the U.S. Department of Transportation website, "Railroads generally oppose (rail trails) for the following business reasons: the trails are not related to railroad operations and generally do not generate revenue for the railroads; railroad rights-of-way may be needed for future enhancements to system capacity; poor design or maintenance of trails could lead to increased trespassing, with consequent increases in injuries and deaths; narrowing the railroad's portion of the right-of-way drives up the cost of maintaining track and structures (including complicating safety protection for roadway workers); and significant new populations of pedestrians close to the active track structure may result in additional stress on train crews seeking to ensure the safety of train movements...Railroads have borne the burden of litigation for many incidents on their property, even for crashes with at-fault trespassers or automobile drivers who ignored obvious warning systems. Further, they note that the railroad may be determined by civil courts to owe a higher duty of care to trail users than to trespassers, particularly at new, designated crossings."

men – about 72 percent, according to the Bicycling and Walking report. This reflects a national gender disparity that some bike advocates have sought to address, highlighted by a national Women's Cycling Forum in Washington, D.C., last March.

Many bike commuters are relatively young. Roughly half the estimated 50,600 people who use any means other than driving, public transit or walking to get to their jobs in Massachusetts – that includes cycling, but also cabs and other less common ways of traveling to work – are between the ages of 25 and 44, Census figures show.

However, people in the 45-to-54 bracket outnumbered those between 20 and 24, and adults of all ages were represented in the figures.

About three-quarters of this population is white, about 14 percent Hispanic or Latino, 7 percent African-American and 6 percent Asian, the Census figures showed.

"In general more people show up than they used to," Mills said. "We get about 60 people per week at our Saturday ride."

Cooke is one of these Saturday cyclists.

"Cycling is the best thing that ever happened to me," Cooke said. "It has brought me fitness, friendships and great joy. It allows me to contribute to making my environment green and promote a healthy lifestyle. As a competitive cyclist, I also feel it allows me to be a role model for many."

Some cyclists view riding as a means of addressing public health, social justice or other issues that concern them.

"I've done the YMCA's Trek ride [for breast cancer] for a couple years in a row. In this tough economy, I find it very difficult to raise the funds needed for rides like PMC and best buddies," Cooke said. "My main focus is racing so my schedule is very focused on that."

Cooke said she brings her bike with her so she can go for a ride while she is out. She said she is trying to find a job closer to home and would definitely commute to work on her bike if she did.

"I ride pretty much every day," she said. "If I can't ride outdoors, I ride indoors."

The growth of cycling means the public's image of who a typical bicyclist is – such as a fast-moving, "antisocial" bike messenger – is changing, said Steve Miller, executive director of the New England Healthy Weight Initiative at Harvard School of Public Health and a board member at the Livable Streets Alliance, where he writes a transit blog, "The Public Way."

"Very few people think of that as true anymore," he said. "We now understand that bicycles are us. We are all, or almost all, potential bicyclists."

Wompatuck gearing up for a busy season

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Wompatuck State Park is a popular destination for bikers of all levels. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Wompatuck State Park, with 12 miles of paved bicycle trails, attracts mountain and other recreational bikers from near and far. It also offers miles of wooded bridle paths and hiking trails.

The 3,526-acre park – located mainly in Hingham, with portions in Norwell and Cohasset – is named for an Native American chief the local colonists knew as Josiah Wompatuck, who deeded the park and surrounding land to the English settlers. Wompatuck abuts Cohasset's Whitney Thayer Woods, a Trustees of Reservations property that offers mountain biking opportunities on a network of gravel paths.

In recent years the Wompatuck park staff, with the enthusiastic assistance of area mountain bikers, has put in a huge effort to create a new network of single-track trails on the left side of the park in some of the areas recently reacquired by the state.

"Wompatuck is one of the most popular mountain biking destinations in New England, even during the winter," said Wompatuck Park Supervisor Steve Gammon. "There are also miles and miles of regular bike trails."

Now that spring has arrived after a long, cold winter, Wompatuck is gearing up for a busy biking season.

'Wompy' as the locals refer to it, offers varied mountain biking trails, from fast and swoopy to others that are similar to long-distance sections.

Prospect Hill, the largest hill in the park, offers five routes to the top, four of which are single track.

Because Wompatuck's trails can be wet in early spring, park staff suggest heading further south during the mud season for a better riding experience. Myles Standish State Forest in Plymouth/Carver is one suggestion.

'Famous race'

Wompatuck hosts various bike races, but the annual Landmine Mountain Bike Classic and Marathon, set for Sunday, Sept. 8, this year, is among the most popular.

"It's a fun and kind of famous event," Gammon said. Pre-registration is available at BikeReg.com.

This race features a one-loop course: 6 miles for novice/first time racers, 11 miles for Cat 3 (beginner), and 25 miles for Cat 1 (expert), Cat 2 (sport), and Pro. Another marathon option includes two 25-mile laps.

Over the 25 miles, bikers will experience almost every type of trail situation, including rocks, roots, berms, minimal pavement, and fast and slow trails.

All proceeds directly benefit the park. Funds from prior years' races have paid for the reclamation of South Field – the site of the race. The open area is now more family-friendly. Race proceeds have also paid for the opening of new trails, the resurfacing of bridges, and the completion of general park maintenance.

The all-volunteer Friends of Wompatuck State Park was incorporated in 2006 for the purpose of educating the public about the park's uses and historical value as well as helping the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation preserve, maintain, and enhance the park's assets, rich history, and other features.

The 484-acre Bare Cove Park, located along the banks of the Weymouth Back River in Hingham, also attracts many bikers. The park features river shoreline, wetlands, open fields, dense woods, and diverse wildlife.

It also offers many miles of paved roadways and woodland trails for biking, walking, jogging, or just relaxing.

Enjoying both parks

Avid biker Jeff Cutler, the author of "Mountain Bike America: Boston" and a freelance writer who regularly covers the Tour de France, enjoys biking in both parks. He noted that Bare Cove and Wompatuck "are two vastly different riding areas in terms of terrain and the challenge to riders. But each has its benefits," he said.

Cutler considers Bare Cove Park more conducive to "the sedate, casual rider who's on a hybrid or low-end mountain bike. Many of the trails are less challenging and flatter than you'll find in Wompatuck," he said. "You'll also encounter more foot traffic there, so it pays to take it slower when riding in Bare Cove."

For more of a workout – on both the road and mountain bike trails – Wompatuck is "great," Cutler said. For mountain bikers, the trail system – maintained regularly by the Friends of Wompatuck State Park and members of the New England Mountain Bike Association – is expansive and ranges from sedate to challenging.

"The topography of the trail system includes lots of rocks, roots, smooth dirt, and many climbs," he said. "And riders can enter the woods at the main parking lot and not touch pavement again until they reach the back of the park and switch sides to ride trails back toward the front."

From a road cyclist's perspective, the hills (yes, there are hills in Hingham, Cutler notes)

"present a nice challenge if you ride the main road from the front of the park to the back. The scenery is great and in certain seasons the fire gate gets locked at 3 p.m. so riders can cruise the road without the added challenge of automobile traffic," he said.

Longtime biker Jim Watson, also a Hingham resident, noted that while Wompatuck's paved roadways are "pretty smooth," there are also opportunities for a road biker to "climb and then descend with great swooping curves" in the park.

"The width means bikers don't have as many worries about possible collisions with other riders," he said. Watson agrees with Cutler that "the absence of cars gives a greater freedom than bikers who ride along public roadways have."

Watson is also familiar with Bare Cove Park. "It offers less-challenging but scenic biking loops, with the benefit of water views," he said.

Ultimately, both recreation areas have something for every level of rider. "If you do go out riding in either location, remember to bring water and wear a helmet," Cutler advises bikers. Safety and fun go hand in hand.

Bike lanes, paths key to safety

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

If state and municipal leaders want more people in Massachusetts to bike, then designing new streets and retrofitting old ones to be more rider-friendly is where the rubber meets the road, say transportation planners and advocates.

The answer is not always as simple as painting a bike lane. Transit planners have a whole lexicon of options to delineate how and where cars, trucks and bikes should travel – from sharrows and bike boxes to cycle tracks – depending on the location.

These types of road designs are meant not only to make it clearer and easier for existing cyclists and drivers to share the streets, but to encourage more people to see biking as a safe and legitimate means of transportation, planners said.

For its part, the state Department of Transportation is looking to include bike paths and lanes where appropriate in its projects, said Catherine Cagle, the agency's manager of sustainable transportation. MassDOT also led 65 workshops last year on Complete Streets, a type of planning that includes cyclists, pedestrians and public transit, and has had a plan since 2008 to eventually create a 788-mile, long-distance bike network.

Yet outside the urban core and major trails, dedicated bike routes in eastern Massachusetts can be frustratingly incomplete or disconnected, cutting out at busy intersections or failing to tie important destinations together, several cycling advocates said.

Towns and cities often have to fight for their share of transportation funding, meaning bike paths do not always continue across town lines, advocates said.

Transit and public health groups are forming a coalition to try to close some of the gaps, said Steve Miller, a board member at the nonprofit Livable Streets Alliance and author of a transit blog, "The Public Way."

"We really need a regional network of bike and pedestrian corridors," he said, calling the idea the Metro Green Routes Network.

Part of the push for infrastructure is driven by research in Portland, Ore., that suggested more than half of people may be interested or curious about cycling, but concerned about their safety.

That finding has informed bicycle planning across the U.S. Dedicated bike lanes and paths could make this population more likely to hop on a bike, or so the thinking goes.

"Would my mother ride on this road?" Cagle said. "That's my judgment when we've done a really good job."

The tools available include sharrows, a term for simple pavement markings that show an arrow and a bike to serve as reminders to drivers that cyclists can share the lane. There also are cycle tracks, or dedicated bike lanes separated from cars by parked vehicles or a physical barrier, and bike boxes, which allow cyclists to line up at red lights ahead of cars.

Bike lanes should be at least five feet wide, sometimes with a buffer to protect cyclists from opening doors of parked cars, said Jason Schrieber, a principal at planning firm Nelson Nygaard Consulting Associates.

Some planners also favor so-called "traffic calming" measures, such as narrower car lanes.

"The narrower your road, the lower the speed, the less crashes," Schrieber said. "It's very direct."

The right approach depends heavily on the location, said David Watson, executive director of the Massachusetts Bicycle Coalition, or MassBike.

"It's not about prioritizing bicyclists and pedestrians over drivers," he said. "It's about finding balance."

SHARING THE ROAD

Taking the safe route

By Mark Burridge
mburridge@wickedlocal.com

Have you ever gone around a turn with a biker between your car and the edge of the road and worried you're going to knock the rider him off? Imagine how the biker must feel.

"Unfortunately, my safety is questionable almost every time I commute to work on my bike," said Kate Lysakowski, a biker from Quincy. "Being aware of my surroundings and having strong bike handling abilities has allowed me to respond very quickly when a driver makes a left turn across from me at an intersection without seeing me coming, or darts out into the road from a parking lot without taking that second look left."

Lysakowski said she always tries to ride a bike as if no one sees her so that she can stay safe. She said there are several things a biker can do to stay safe while making a commute or just going for a ride.

"Ride defensively," she said. "Always be aware of your surroundings, including traffic, road conditions, etc."

She said she makes sure to stay alert for cars entering and exiting parking lots and driveways. She said it's important to be on high alert at intersections.

"It's smart to practice bike handling so you can ride confidently on your bike and be able to react quickly to a potentially dangerous situation," she said. "Most importantly, wear a helmet and wear one that fits."

Although bikers have ramped up safety through necessity, the shops where they buy bikes and equipment are more than aware of the danger the road poses.

Beth and Jim Mills own The Cycle Lodge, in Pembroke, formerly of Hanover. The two have been biking for 30 years and running a bike shop for 20 years. In an effort to keep bikers safe on the road, Beth and Jim have several rules for bikers to follow when participating in shop-hosted weekly rides. The rules have evolved over the years, in an effort to keep up with the times.

"Driving habits have changed," Beth said. For example, "when we started, there were no cell phones."

Beth and Jim described how rides held by the shop mainly take place on less traveled roads, early in the morning. That way, the shop has a bit of a workaround when it comes to competing with cars.

The Mills' started organizing runs in the mid 1980s. Over the years, they have learned exactly how a safe ride should go.

"We encourage people to ride safely," Jim said.

Beth added: "But just like anything, there are always a few people who are a little reckless."

The runs feature a staggered start. Every Saturday morning, up to 60 arrive at the Cycle Lodge, ready to go for a group ride. Beth said not only is it unsafe for that many bikers to leave at once, but it is a nuisance for driver's who round a corner and come across a giant herd of bike riders.

The other effort put forward by the Mills' is a set of safety rules to follow when biking participants go out on the road. Jim said the group is good at making sure each and every rider is handling the road safely.

"People tend to self-police," he said. "Sometimes new riders are nervous about riding in a group. They might see a pothole and not know how to handle it."

One of the regular riders in the Mills' runs is Patrick Duffy. Duffy uses the rides to keep himself in shape. He said safety is important to keep in mind on the road.

"Thirty years ago the auto traffic was far less than it is today," he said. "Motorists were more aware of cyclists. We never wore helmets. You were a geek if you wore one."

Duffy said one of the biggest issues for bikers today is dealing with technology. Matched with the sometimes-volatile nature drivers can have towards bikers, he said it can be troublesome.

"Today technology has created a very dangerous situation on the roads for riders. Cell phones. Auto technology. Smoother, faster cars, and a heck of a lot more of them," he said. "Lycra clothing cannot compete with a two-ton car or SUV. So be very aware and be careful."

Because of the potential safety issues of bike riding on crowded roads, Beth and Jim have considered taking out an insurance policy on the bike runs. Each biker would have to sign a waiver and put in some money to pay for the policy. That way, if a biker did get into an accident, the business couldn't be deemed liable and the Mills' wouldn't have to produce the money.

There's not always safety in numbers, so veteran cyclists take extra precautions and are always aware of their surroundings. STAFF PHOTO/MARK GARDNER

Right of Way: Readers reaction

As part of our Right of Way special report, we reached out to readers to ask them to share stories and concerns with regards to motorists, bicyclists and pedestrians sharing the roadways.

Here's what they had to say:

Safety concerns

I've had my episodes of a bottle thrown at me from a passing vehicle's window and the pickup who, while approaching from the opposite direction, swerved across the road into my lane and came directly at me forcing me off the road to avoid being hit head on. Overt aggression is out there but some the greatest threats I regularly experience are due to misguided good intentions.

The town I live in began building what they call "bike paths" but are no more than sidewalks that might be an extra foot wide. Mass DOT's Design Guide for road and bridge projects includes minimum specifications for designing safe and functional bike paths but what was built fails to meet almost all of the specs. The result, which was predictable, is that most cyclists avoid the paths and continue to ride on the road. What's worse is that useable width of the roadways were reduced in order to create the "paths" thereby increasing road congestion and danger to the cyclists. One stretch of road previously had an approximately 3-foot wide paved shoulder on both sides which made it one of the few roads that were safe for cyclists who use it thousands of times a year. The paved shoulders which used to function as bike lanes were narrowed on one side and all but eliminated on the other side and are now buried under a useless strip of grass next to the "bike path".

I read about how Boston, Cambridge and the near suburbs are really trying to make roads safer for cycling but out here the people who run the little towns just don't get it.
Craig Fritz, Scituate

Enough already

We recently moved to the South Shore from Arlington. I hit a man on a bike two years ago on Highland Ave. and Eastern Ave. in Arlington at 6 a.m. It was raining, but apparently this doesn't stop an informal, unsanctioned bike race from happening. It occurs in the month of May on every Wednesday for one month. The rider who can complete the most laps up and down the hill wins – nothing, apparently.

I saw several bike riders flying down the hill in the dark, blowing through a stop sign. I was stopped. After looking again, I began through the intersection. I then hit a man speeding down the hill, sending him flying through the air into a neighbor's yard. Luckily he was just scratched. He didn't want the police called, but every neighbor did. When the police arrived, they did nothing, to me or him. He stated that he saw me from up the hill and assumed since I had stopped to let his fellow racers go, that I must have seen him and would also wait. I never saw him. I felt so horrible that I paid over $800 to fix his bike and make it go away. Police had differing opinions about who was at fault.

I would like to mention (1) that a bike rider was killed in this town during a sanctioned bike race several years ago, and (2) that Arlington has a wonderful bike path that runs from Bedford to Cambridge. When we moved out of this town, they were preparing to drop one lane on Mass. Avenue to create a "bike lane." Enough. I'm all for being green, but this is getting ridiculous. I love to ride my bike, but have always been respectful of cars. This craziness has to stop.
Susan Moore

Dodging traffic

Every day when I walk my dog down Old Oaken Bucket Road on to Central Street on my way to the center of town I dodge cars that are only an arms length away. I am 90 years old and need to walk to keep in shape. When I think how the town is considering spending $1 million to put in artificial turf on the high school fields instead of sidewalks I cringe. What is the matter with these people who are making these decisions where to spend community preservation funds, they must be asleep or unthinking. I'm sure the many runners and joggers dodging the same traffic I do feel the same.
Wallace R Rockwell Sr., Norwell

Hit by a pickup truck

Our family just experienced a scary incident. My daughter and I are training for a long walk in July. Grace was walking on a side street in town where she goes to college. The driver of a large pickup truck either did not see her or intentionally did not give her space. The upshot is Grace was hit on the right side of her chest by the mirror on the side of the pickup truck.

The driver did not stop. Grace was following the rules as a pedestrian: #1 walking against the traffic and moved as far off the road as she could when a car approached; and #2 she was also wearing a bright orange traffic vest. Thankfully grace is OK and walked away with only bruising and soreness.

Our daughter was very lucky. I am furious at this driver. He was older and I think he was just not paying attention, as a driver should always be doing. I am a firm believer that older people need to have their license renewed more often and after a certain age a driving test should be required.
Beth Dwyer, Pembroke

Don't honk

My husband is the cyclist in our family, averaging 2,000 miles usually from April to October/November each year.

He is on the road at 5 a.m., except all day trips like riding from Abington to Provincetown, he encounters courteous and respectful drivers.

The two complaints he does have are about younger drivers, teenage boys honking loudly and long at him. Also, when drivers swerve way out and around him. He does find that annoying.

I am guilty of swerving out when I see a cyclist thinking I'm avoiding any mishap.

I think it is encouraging to read about positive experiences as well as any harmful situations.

Troop 65208 visits The Fresh Feast!

Brownie troop 65208 and leaders Jen Ognibene and Megan Brinzey trekked from Cohasset Osgood School to The Fresh Feast in Cohasset on April 11. Throughout the year, the Brownies gear their activities toward earning certain badges. Julia Lisinski, owner of The Fresh Feast, hosted the girls at her shop as part of their work to earn the Healthy Me Brownie badge.

The girls gathered around Lisinski 's kitchen island and assembled fresh salad wraps (veggies, herbs, chicken, sauces, cheese) while also learning about seasonal and local produce. The Brownies had so much fun preparing their healthy meals. They even ate more veggies than normal due to the experience with Julia and her staff. They had a great time and even came away with a little healthy chicken snack for their dogs or cats. Lisinski gave them each a little doggie bag.

Lisinski is always introducing new healthy selections daily at her shop. The Fresh Feast is at 105 Riley Road. Customers can stop by or call ahead to 781-383-2255 between 11 a.m. and 7p.m., Monday through Friday, and 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturdays, and grab an easy pre-made healthy meal. OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Nancy L. Stefan

COHASSET – Nancy L. (Commander) Stefan, age 70, of Cohasset, passed away on Monday, April 29, 2013 after a long battle with lung disease.

She was born on March 16, 1943 to Alec and Jeanette (Miller) Commander. She grew up in Cleveland, OH and eventually got married and had three children. She is survived by her daughters, Mara Stefan of Cohasset and Marchell Stefan of Scottsdale, AZ and her son, Alec Stefan of California. Grandmother of Eric and Ethan Bartucca. Also survived by her younger sister, Claudia Kozel of OH and three nieces and nephews, as well as her former husband Paul A. Stefan of No. California.

Nancy was an avid proponent of Animal rights and supported many organizations including the Humane Society and Scituate Animal Shelter. She enjoyed traveling, reading and watching Nascar on the weekends.

A Memorial Service was held in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset on Saturday, May 4, 2013 at 5 p.m. Visiting hours immediately prior to service from 3 - 5 p.m. on Saturday, May 4.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Nancy's memory may be made to the Scituate Animal Shelter, 780 CJC Hwy., Scituate, MA. 02066.

CEF DERBY DAY GALA

It was off to the races!

The Cohasset Education Foundation brought Kentucky to the South Shore last Saturday night, as more than 200 partygoers packed the Cohasset Golf Club for "Juleps, Jockeys and Jazz" to support Cohasset public schools.

From the Kentucky Derby's official cocktails at the door to virtual horse races and barbecued Southern fare, the CEF's annual spring gala offered as much Kentucky ambiance as one could find without getting on a plane – and raised $35,000 for Cohasset school programs, projects and materials.

"It wasn't just a fundraiser, it was a friendraiser," said Katie Norton, one of the event's organizers. "We were so happy to see all the new faces, and since our grants cover Osgood, Deer Hill and up through the high school, people who are coming to the parties now will see their kids continuing to benefit later."

The festivities were enhanced by the many local Derby enthusiasts who arrived decked in full race spectator regalia – seersucker blazers, floral frocks and extravagant millinery.

"It was a wonderful night," said CEF president Carolyn Coffey. "The festive atmosphere and huge hats made for a lively party, and one that will bear fruit for our schools."

For those arriving bareheaded, hat committee members Michelle Appleby, Denise Fox, Ginni Froio, Vicky Grimes and Pam Turpel helped craft dozens of creative options for purchase at the gala's Unique Millinery Boutique. Laurie Ferreira, owner of LuLu's Boutique on Route 3A in Cohasset, also created adorned hats for purchase, with all hat sales benefiting the CEF.

The event's fundraising highlights also included a Wishing Wall depicting grant requests submitted to the CEF by teachers and administrators. Among the requests on display for funding consideration: Grants that would enhance curriculum, provide enriching after-school program options and help create 21st century classrooms.

"The festive atmosphere and huge hats made for a lively party, and one that will bear fruit for our schools."

— CEF president Carolyn Coffey

"We are so fortunate to have the Cohasset Education Foundation to support the schools, offering opportunities to our teachers and students in unique and creative ways," said Cohasset schools superintendent Barbara Cataldo. "Saturday was an example of how a group of families demonstrate their commitment to the schools. The event was spectacular; the energy in the room was a demonstration of the tireless efforts of community members who look for opportunities to enhance learning in our public schools."

Cohasset students contributed to the evening as well, showcasing their talents and energy in an hour-long live performance by the High School Jazz Ensemble. Students also staffed several interactive Your Donations at Work displays that highlighted projects and programs funded through past CEF grants. Those exhibits included coastal research, video production, Lego robotics and Greg Tang mathematics displays. In addition, student art was celebrated in the Priceless Items silent auction, which was filled with wildly creative original mixed media creations including canvases, wreaths, quilted wall hangings and even a Derby mural.

Over the past seven years, the CEF has awarded nearly $700,000 in grants that enrich the community's public schools and help foster their growth and continued excellence.

Sign ups underway at CSCR

Registration is now open for the Center for Student Coastal Research's Summer 2013 Programs. CSCR will again be hosting a variety of Research Projects for students in grades eight through 12. CSCR will also be offering its popular Junior Marsh Monitors Program for students in grades five through seven in July.

CSCR's Summer Institute offers high school students opportunities to study ocean currents with NOAA scientists, evaluate eel grass and wetlands defining our estuaries, monitor water quality of the Gulf River, and document the effects of storm water running over and through our environment. And CSCR has teamed up with Cohasset Middle High School this year to offer students opportunities to earn a competency-based Certificate of Environmental Stewardship.

CSCR's Junior Marsh Monitor Program is a hands-on environmental education program designed to get middle school students out into the marshes and onto the harbor to learn about our fragile coastal environment. This program runs Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings July 8th through July 19th. Students are welcome to sign up for one or both weeks.

CSCR also welcomes students with interests and skills in technology (web design, programming, etc), public relations (media, photography, etc), financial management, building management and even landscaping who might be interested in helping support this environmental non-profit. Students who aren't interested in environmental research can find that CSCR is a place of opportunity for developing a range of skills and talents.

Students and families can register online at www.cscr.org or by email to Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com.

SUMMER INSTITUTE PROJECTS:

- Wetland Monitoring – Wetland research teams collect data for the state's Department of Ecological Restoration." Students monitor fish in the wetland, vegetation, birds, invertebrates and water quality in tidally restricted salt marshes.
- Gulf River Water Quality – The Gulf River water quality project is part of a larger study of herring in the watershed. The project will include basic water quality monitoring, bacteria studies, nitrates studies and fish studies. This data is critical to the towns of Cohasset and Scituate, several state agencies, and to the members of the Gulf Association.
- Cohasset Harbor Tidal Flushing (the Drifters) – The Drifters project is entering its third and most critical year. Students will not only calculate tidal currents using surface drifters, students will examine fresh and salt water mixing the harbor. This data is critically important to several groups in town.
- Macro Invertebrates of the Harbor – This study is designed to locate, preserve, and identify worms, shellfish, crustaceans, and "creepy crawlers" that live in the sand, sediment, mud, and muck of the Harbor. This study is critical to the town because everyone says that bio-diversity has declined in the harbor, but no one has data to support the claim. Students on this research team will be pioneers in "unchartered" waters.
- Sea Perch Robotics – Sea Perch takes its name from the navy's underwater robotics programs. Students in this project will construct (from a kit) a submersible ROV (remotely operated vehicle) for the purpose of locating and examining (with an underwater camera) eelgrass beds in Cohasset Harbor. Eel grass is an indicator of a healthy ecosystem; we need to know where and how well eel grass is growing in the harbor.
- GIS Phragmite Mapping – The wetland sites all have invasive plants growing "out of control." The towns of Cohasset and Scituate are trying to get more tidal water into the marshes in order to kill the salt intolerant invasive plant called phragmites. Students will learn how to use GPS technology to create maps of the plant's extent. These maps will be used to measure change over time. This is a hands-on high tech project that combines field work with computer mapping.
- Cohasset Harbor Water Quality (NPDES) – NPDES is a federal government program, the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System.Working that requires cities and town to test the water into which treated waste water is discharged. This project will be coordinated by the Waste Water Treatment Plant and the CHS student intern. This project takes place only once a week at low tide, on days of the week to be decided by the research team.

For more information about these projects or CSCR's Junior Marsh Monitor program, email Jack Buckley at jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com.

REGISTRATION THIS WEEKEND

Cohasset Sailing Club's Adult Program

While the Cohasset Sailing Club was founded in 1960 in order to give all the town's children an affordable sailing option, the CSC also offers adult memberships and classes for beginner- and intermediate-level sailors who want to test the waters for any number of reasons. The CSC is a great way to enjoy Cohasset's beauty from another vantage point, and to gain access to the boats available for free sailing during the summer. This is an easy way to sail without having to deal with the upkeep and expense of keeping a boat – or to try out a regular sailing commitment before investing in a boat. Some may never have had the time or opportunity to learn to sail, and been intrigued watching the white sails from the shore in past summers. Most find that it is less expensive in terms of time and money to learn the basics at the CSC on the weekend rather than journey farther away or stay in Boston after a day at the office. Others sailed half a lifetime ago and need a refresher course. Some join to experience what their kids are learning in the Junior program, the better to participate in the Stanton Racing series and post-race barbecues on Sunday evenings. Starting on July 8 this year, the Stanton races have the adult family member serve as crew while a child who has completed the Sailor (first-year) level skippers the boat. Some adult members also enjoy participating in the Porter Racing series, which takes place on selected Thursday evenings during the summer season. Like the Junior program, the Adult program is a great way to forge new friendships with other town residents, as is the CSC's annual launch party and silent auction, this year scheduled for July 6.

The Adult program is an accelerated course offered on eight consecutive Saturday mornings; this year's season will take place from June 29 through Aug. 17. Bob Cunningham, a CSC trustee with years of sailing experience, oversees the classes that are mainly taught by seasoned CSC instructors. In the past, students have ranged from 17-year-olds to 75+-year-olds. Each three-hour class will combine shore and on-water activities, with a distinct weather-permitting emphasis on the latter. To promote a high-quality learning experience, classes are kept small; two to three adults per boat plus an instructor to maximize the sailing time. The beginning class will cover basic navigation, sailing, docking and elementary racing. Students will benefit from a well-organized and thorough curriculum that has been refined over the years. The beginner-level class is geared to passing the helmsman's test as soon as possible – then students can take a sailboat out by themselves or with a companion and further refine their skills. The intermediate level class will build on the skills learned in the beginning sequence, and will work with individual students to improve or explore particular areas of interest.

Registration to join CSC for the 2013 sailing season and program signup for Junior and Adult classes is this weekend, Saturday, May 11, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Sunday, May 12, from 10 to noon, at the clubhouse on Government Island. CSC requests that all effort be made to submit membership applications and program registrations in person during Registration Weekend, as the CSC runs by volunteers whose time is very valuable. A $50 late fee will apply to mail-in applications submitted after this weekend. The combined membership application and class registration form is available at www.cohassetsailingclub.org. There people can also find more detailed information about the CSC, the classes, racing programs and plans for the new clubhouse, which CSC hopes will be ready for the 2014 season.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 20, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you might prefer moving forward at a steady pace, it might be a good idea to stop and reassess your plans. You could find a good reason to make a change at this time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Just when you thought you had everything planned to the smallest detail, you get some news that could unsettle things. But a timely explanation helps put it all back on track.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home and work continue to compete for your attention. But you handle it well by giving each its proper due. Someone you trust offers valuable advice. Listen to it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Unsettling news creates a difficult but not impossible situation. Continue to follow your planned routine, but keep your mind open to a possible change down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Lick your wounded pride if you like, but it's a better idea to find out why your suggestions were rejected. What you learn could help you deal with an upcoming situation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Feeling a bit listless? No wonder. You might be pushing too hard to finish everything on your to-do list. Cutting it down could help get your energy levels up.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Taking time out of your busy schedule might be the best way to handle that sensitive private matter. It will help reassure everyone involved about your priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Insist on full disclosure by all parties before agreeing to be part of a "great deal." What you learn should help you decide whether to go with it or not.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your decision to protect the secret that was entrusted to you might irk some people. But it also wins you the admiration of those who value trust and loyalty.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative activities take on a practical approach as you realize you might be able to market your work. Ask for advice from someone experienced in this area.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) If you're suddenly a bit unsure about your decision, ask trusted colleagues and/or friends or family members for suggestions that could help resolve your doubts.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A workplace situation could get stormy. But stay on course until there's a solution that meets with everyone's approval, and things can finally calm down.

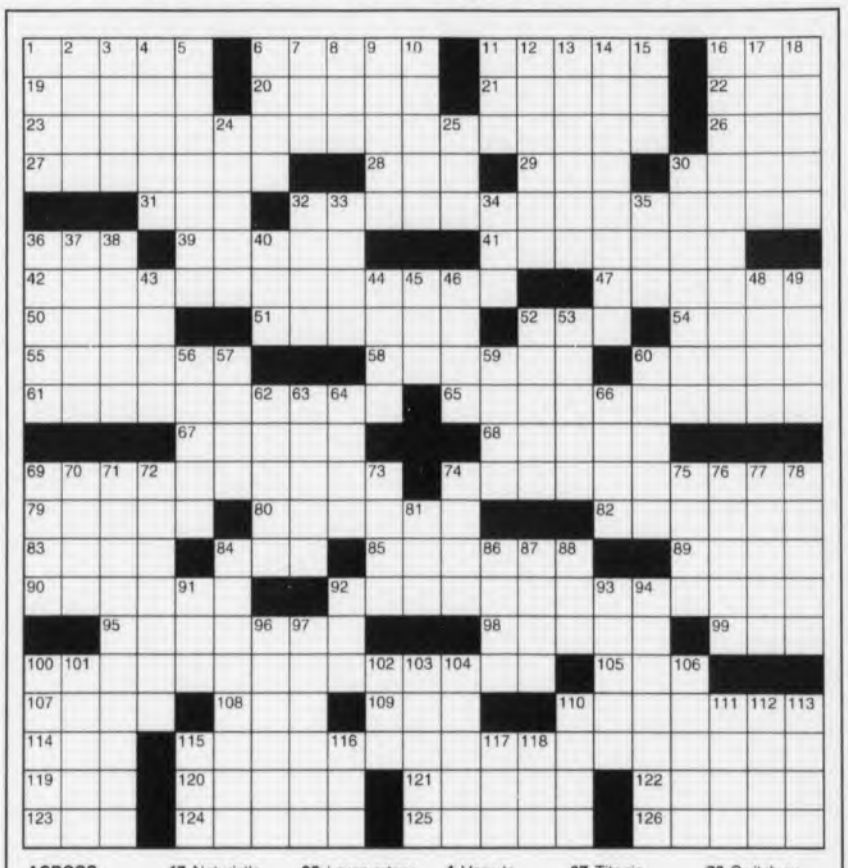
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

All emails concerning public business from town officials or employees are considered part of the public record, per the state's public records law. The only type of information that is redacted is sensitive legal, personnel or medical information.

The town's Chief Technology Officer (CTO) Rob Bonnell wrote a Tuesday, May 14 email to the Board of Selectmen to clear up some "misinformation" about selectman Martha Gjesteby's email account.

Bonnell said that while Gjesteby claimed that her town email account was hacked into, and that the hacker had used her account to send SPAM (junk mail) to her contacts, he did not find evidence to support that.

"I have reviewed all connection logs to her mailbox and at no time has SPAM been sent from her town email account. In fact only five emails have been sent from her account since the mail server archiving came online in August of 2012," Bonnell wrote.

Gjesteby said last week that she had a technician work on her computer in late April, and the technician told her that her account had been hacked. The Mariner called the technician and learned that he thought she might have been hacked, but had no way to "verify for sure" what had happened.

Bonnell stated in his email that a technician working on Gjesteby's home computer would not be able to discern whether her town email had been tampered with without going into the town server. "That technician would have no access or ability to diagnose this," said Bonnell, adding that the tech could have diagnosed her personal email account.

Bonnell was first asked to

Gaumer, Quigley win selectmen seats

Turnout hovers around 30 percent

By Erin Dale

Steve Gaumer and Karen Quigley beat out Russ Bonetti and incumbent Leland Jenkins for two Board of Selectmen seats in Saturday's Cohasset town election. The selectmen had two open seats; Jenkins' first term was expiring, and Paul Carlson decided not to run for a third term.

Gaumer won the most votes with 906, while 805 voted for Quigley. Bonetti was just four votes behind Quigley with 801, while 750 votes were for Jenkins, who was seeking a second term on the board.

In other contests, Virginia Laugelli Najmi won a seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority with 762 votes to James Sheerin's 545. Both were running to fill Ann (Nancy) Barrett's unexpired term.

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said that polls were steady throughout the day, with an almost 30 percent voter turnout. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said he was glad to see Cohasset voters turn out "to participate in democracy."

The top vote-getter of the day was Mary McGoldrick, who won a seat on the School Committee, with 1204 votes. Jeanne Astino, who currently serves on the school board as chair, was reelected with 1082 votes. McGoldrick and Astino were the only two

Sign scam

Karen Quigley won one of two selectmen seats in a four-way race during the Town Election Saturday, but her victory is not without controversy. Signs appeared around Cohasset on Friday, May 10 that told townspeople a vote for Quigley was a vote to bring back former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed in March 2012 after six months on the job.

Quigley's campaign sent an email Friday afternoon stating that these signs were not Quigley's.

"Placing these signs overnight on public and private property is the lowest tactic yet in this nasty campaign season," the email stated. "Karen Quigley will not bring back Mike Coughlin. Karen will bring back reason, respect, and a sense of decency to our community."

Quigley, who lost a reelection bid to the Board of Selectmen in 2011, managed to secure the second highest number of votes (805) for a selectman seat on Saturday, behind Steve Gaumer, who received 906, besting the other two candidates, incumbent Leland Jenkins and Russ Bonetti. Bonetti was only four votes behind Quigley but did not ask for a recount (see related story).

Bonetti called the signs about Quigley "despicable" and "cowardly."

"Who knows who it was?" Bonetti wondered. "Whatever they can do to find out who it was, which is hard, I think they should do. I think they should look into it for no other reason than to let people know it's not acceptable."

Quigley filed a complaint with the police on Friday because some of the signs were placed on town property. Several of her supporters as well as Town Building Inspector Robert Egan, seized the signs. Quigley told the police that

POLICE BEAT

Drunken driving arrest following two-car accident

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 12:43 a.m. on Friday (May 10), police responded to an accident on King Street near the Great Neck Grille. Two vehicles, a blue 2006 Toyota Highlander that was facing north in the southbound lane, and a blue 1997 Mercury Sable that was facing south in the entrance of 156 King St., were heavily damaged.

There was heavy front-end damage to the Highlander, whose operator, a 19-year-old Hingham woman was standing outside the vehicle. Police could not open the left driver's side door of the Mercury that was crushed inward. The Cohasset Fire Department responded to the scene.

The driver of the Mercury, a 46-year-old Cohasset, woman, reported she was struck while trying to cross the highway. She was exhibiting the signs and symptoms of intoxication and allegedly admitted to having been drinking. She was arrested before being transported to the hospital where she was admitted with non-life-threatening injuries. She was charged with operating under the influence of liquor (second offense), negligent operation of a motor vehicle, and failure to yield the right of way.

Police said the other operator reported she was traveling north on King Street (3A) when the Mercury started to pull across the roadway, stopped and then pulled in front of her vehicle. She said she did not have time to stop and struck the side of the Mercury.

Flim flam

At around 5:20 p.m. on Friday (May 10), police were dispatched to Stop & Shop on a report of a man in a bright yellow shirt that might attempt a flim flam. Stop & Shop was alerted by loss prevention at Stop & Shop in Hingham where Hingham police said the suspect reached into the register while the clerk was getting his change for a $7 purchase and took $100.

Cohasset store employees kept their eyes on the individual in the bright yellow shirt and no crime was attempted in Cohasset. The man was apparently known to Stop & Shop, which had not been able to identify him.

Cohasset police were able to get the plate number of the 2007 Hyundai Elantra, which came back to a 57-year-old Plymouth man. That information could possibly help solve the case in Hingham, police said.

Summonsed

Police were dispatched to a home on Jerusalem road at just past midnight on Sunday (May 12) where they were met in the driveway by a 48-year-old man who reported that about 20 minutes earlier he had been pushed out of the door and fell to the ground in at the American Legion hall on Summer Street. He showed police a scrape on his arm and was checked out by paramedics.

Police investigated the incident at the Legion where staff said they were unaware of the incident. However, the alleged victim did identify one of the patrons as the man who allegedly pushed him. Another witness reported the alleged victim had been pushed out the door because he was drunk and being a jerk, according to the police report.

Police are summonsing a 47-year-old Cohasset man, who allegedly did the pushing, to court on the charge of simple assault and battery.

Ring lost

Police took a report on Saturday (May 11) from a 39-year-old Cohasset woman who had lost her diamond ring while coaching her children's baseball game on Sunday (May 5). She explained she had her diamond ring strapped to her wristwatch during the game so she could wear a baseball glove. After the game while helping to clean up, she removed her watch and forgot the ring was attached. She realized the ring was missing as she was leaving the field and spent the rest of the night looking for it to no avail. The ring is valued at $14,200.

Intoxicated

A 41-year-old Scituate woman was taken into protective custody after police located her at Tedeschi Plaza around 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday (May 8). Earlier police went to the shopping center on a report of a bicycle theft. Police received information that the alleged thief and alleged victim may know each other. Upon arrival, police could not locate the alleged victim but Scituate police found the bike and reported the suspect was the alleged victim's boyfriend.

Police said the boyfriend reported he had taken the bike from his girlfriend for her safety. A short time later, the alleged victim called 9-1-1 again about her bike and police located her outside CVS. She was exhibiting the signs and symptoms of intoxication and was taken into protective custody by police.

Disturbance

At around 3:40 p.m. on Tuesday (May 7), police went to an establishment on King Street for a report of a disturbance. The owner and his cousin met the officer who reported the landlord was sitting in his vehicle taking photographs of the two men and their customers. They reported one customer was so disturbed that she left without her order.

The landlord denied taking photographs and said the men were upset because he is trying to evict them. The officer explained to the men that they could seek a harassment prevention order should there be additional problems.

Domestic

A 51-year-old Cohasset man was arrested on domestic assault and battery and intimidation of a witness charges following an argument with his wife during which he allegedly pushed her when she tried to grab the phone, police said. The wife went to the police station to report the incident on Tuesday morning (May 7).

Stolen

Police are investigating the apparent theft of $5,000 worth of construction equipment from a storage area off Crocker Lane. The 62-year-old Scituate man, who owns the two metal brakes and two 24-foot ladders that are missing, reported the items as stolen last week. He does not know when they went missing, as he had not been at the site for a couple of months, police said.

Towed

Police responded to a parking complaint at the corner of Church Street and Flintlock Ridge Road on Tuesday afternoon (May 7). The vehicle was sticking out into the roadway and the plate came back to a 50-year-old Weymouth man. The car was uninsured and the man, who was soliciting for a landscaping company, did not have a solicitor's permit, police said. He was warned about not having the permit and is being summonsed to court to face the charge of allowing an uninsured motor vehicle on a public way. His car was towed.

Bike accident

A 64-year-old Hingham man on a bicycle and an 85-year-old Scituate man in a 2006 Toyota were involved in a collision on Wednesday afternoon (May 8) at the intersection of Border Street and Otis Avenue. The accident occurred when the cyclist was making a left from Border Street onto Otis Avenue and the motorist was making a right from Otis onto Border Street, police said. There were no injuries. The Toyota had a scratch on the door caused by the accident.

Quit job

An employee at a local establishment quit his job after his boss came to his Cohasset house three times during a six-hour timeframe after the employee had called in sick last week. The boss allegedly pounded on the door and screamed his name. Police said the former employee did not want to get a no-trespass order.

Memorial Day Weekend Schedule

May 18 through June 1

Memorial Day speaker: Lt. Col. Charles Coe

Lt. Col. Charles Coe, recipient of the Bronze Star Medal during Operation Iraqi Freedom, will be the guest speaker for Cohasset's Memorial Day observances at Veterans Memorial Park at noon on Monday (May 27).

Coe is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of New Hampshire, where he was an Army ROTC distinguished military graduate. Upon graduating from UNH, Coe was commissioned into the Field Artillery and assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division. Coe then left active duty but returned after graduating from the New England College of Optometry.

After assignments in Korea, Colorado, and Germany, Coe attended a doctorate program at Indiana University, where he was awarded a doctorate in Physiological Optics. Coe was deployed in 2007 to Baghdad, Iraq during the surge as a member of the 31st Combat Support Hospital.

During his 15-month deployment, Coe saw over 4,500 patients, many of whom suffered from combat trauma. For these actions, Coe was recognized by the international Red Cross for his care of injured Iraqis.

review Gjesteby's email account following a public records request made by resident Chris Allen, asking for emails sent to and from Gjesteby and former selectman Ronnie McMorris, former selectman Karen Quigley (now reelected), former town manager Michael Coughlin, and TinyTown Gazette editor Tanna Kasperowicz. The email hunt turned up only 11 emails, with only one that was sent from Gjesteby's account. There was no "smoking gun" in the search, officials said.

All emails concerning public business from town officials or employees are considered part of the public record, per the state's public records law. The only type of information that is redacted is sensitive legal, personnel or medical information. Allen had to pay over $125 to receive the 11 emails from Gjesteby's account. He could not be reached for comment as to why he wanted to review these emails.

Bonnell said that he complied with the public records request but otherwise does not look into town officials' or employees' email accounts. "At no time does any person have access or read the email except the person doing the redaction."

Since Bonnell's email was sent Tuesday morning, it was not part of the selectmen's correspondence packet, which is compiled the Friday before the Tuesday meeting. Last week the selectmen discussed the issue with Gjesteby's email account and the public records request after Gjesteby raised the matter during the selectmen's comment period, and decided to put the matter on a future agenda.

Cohasset Chief Technology Officer (CTO) Rob Bonnell wrote a lengthy memo to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski about this investigation whether Selectman Martha Gjesteby's town email account had been "hacked." MARINER FILE PHOTO

However, the matter was not on Tuesday night's agenda, and the issue did not come up when the reorganized board was setting their agenda for their May 28 and June 4 meetings. The Bonnell email was also not discussed during the "topics not reasonably anticipated by the chairman 48 hours in advance of the meeting."

When the Mariner brought up the email, the board seemed surprised to hear of it. Gjesteby said she had not seen the email. New members Steve Gaumer and Karen Quigley do not yet have town email accounts, chairman Fred Koed said. Since the email was not part of the selectmen's packet, it would not be discussed that evening, Koed added.

Gjesteby said after the meeting that she had a technician look at her computer again and the issue with her email had been resolved.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Paul Carlson sends letter to board

Former selectman chair Paul Carlson, whose last meeting on the board was Tuesday, May 7, asked at that meeting for the issue concerning selectman Martha Gjesteby's email to be discussed with Town Counsel during an upcoming executive session.

Carlson also wrote a letter to the selectman dated May 10 that he asked to be included during a future discussion with counsel. Carlson said it was appropriate for him to request this while he was still a member of the board and wanted "to be heard on a matter that happened while I was still on watch."

Carlson said in a phone call that he felt it was important to write this letter. "It was reporting on a serious event that I thought was unnecessary and uncalled for, and I wanted to make sure the board knew about it and was in the public record. I wrote it because it's something for the board to consider."

Carlson's letter was included in the selectmen's correspondence packet but was not discussed during the Tuesday, May 14 selectmen meeting. In the letter Carlson states that Gjesteby confronted Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski about the public records request for her email and did so in an "unseemly and grossly inappropriate matter."

Milanoski said during the May 7 meeting that Gjesteby had "accosted" and yelled at him over the issue, which Gjesteby denied, saying that she did not attack the town manager.

Carlson's letter begs to differ, calling Gjesteby's confronting Milanoski an "ambush attack." The former selectman chair also said that Gjesteby called his home on May 3 and was "extremely agitated and aggressive" with him. "She accused me of colluding with Mr. Milanoski to hack into her private computer to obtain personal information" and "accused me of criminal activity. Her voice was loud and out of control to the point I had to take the receiver away from my ear. My wife and our guests in the room easily heard her comments."

Carlson said that the accusations Gjesteby made of him were "false, unsubstantiated and fabricated out of thin air."

The former chair stated that Milanoski was just doing his job when he complied with the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request to produce some of Gjesetby's emails. All official town emails are considered part of the public record.

None of the selectmen, or any other town official or employee, can expect privacy when it comes to their email accounts, said Carlson. Gjesteby "cannot expect non-compliance or special treatment for herself. None of us can," he wrote. "Further, Mrs. Gjesteby should not be able [to] defame anyone, no less her colleagues, when she disagrees with the lawful performance of the requirements of law."

In her defense, Gjesteby said at the May 7 meeting that she believed Milanoski had conducted himself improperly when he called her days after the fact to let her know a public records request had been made, and she was expected to turn over her emails.

"This type of behavior is unprecedented in my memory, having served Cohasset in elected office since the 1980s," Gjesteby stated. "It is a breach of our democratic form of government to have an appointed official surveil [sic] elected officials' email without authority or notice."

Selectman Fred Koed was concerned about the protocol that Milanoski used to inform Gjesteby of the email search. "I'm not clear— if this happened to any selectman, we wouldn't be informed for five or six days? I've been a selectman for 14 years, and this is the first time I've seen it done this way."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she would like to have a formal process in place to "get rid of the discomfort" such a matter can stir up between the town manager and an official.

"It's like everything else — it's not so much what you're doing, it's how you're doing it," Kennedy said. "This would be a lot nicer of a situation instead of having everyone feel uncertain."

The consensus among the board at the time was that there needed to be a written policy or procedure for dealing with public records requests from now on. Kennedy suggested at the May 14 meeting that the board schedule an Open Meeting Law and public records workshop in the near future.

SIGN

she contacted the District Attorney's office and was told that placing these signs constitutes election fraud.

In a phone call Tuesday, Karen Quigley acknowledged that tracking down the perpetrator(s) would be difficult. "Unfortunately, unless someone comes forward and says 'I saw so and so placing a sign on my lawns,' there's no way to track them down."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski would not comment on the signs or the election results, except to say that he was glad 30 percent of registered voters turned out to "participate in democracy."

Quigley said in an interview on local TV show "Our Town" that her first order of business as selectman would be to ask her fellow board members to publish a request for proposals (RFP) to search for a new town manager. Milanoski has been acting town manager since Coughlin was ousted in March last year. Coughlin is currently suing the town of Cohasset for reinstatement as town manager.

Quigley on Coughlin

Quigley voiced her support for Coughlin during a public hearing in March 2012 on whether to remove him. However, she said Tuesday that despite what the signs said, she does not plan to "bring back Mike Coughlin" now that she is a selectman again.

"I'm running to bring back civility, respect and stability. To bring back any issue, whether it's Mike Coughlin or Cat Dam, does not further that goal for me."

Quigley said that she was against Coughlin's removal last year because of the way he was treated by town officials. "It was the process and the behavior, the way they [the selectmen] treated an individual that was so unprofessional and unnecessary to me, that led to this litigation the town is now facing. I don't know what the outcome will be."

Quigley added that whether Coughlin comes back to Cohasset is up to a court of law, not the current board of selectmen. However, in her opinion, "it's not something that would be good for either the town or Mr. Coughlin," adding that she feels both Coughlin and Cohasset should move on.

Coughlin attended an election party hosted by Tanna Kasperowicz at her home on Saturday. Kasperowicz edits the local newspaper, the TinyTown Gazette. TinyTown endorsed Quigley and Bonetti for the election.

Coughlin said in a phone call Monday that he came back to Cohasset on Saturday to hear the election results and visit with friends and supporters.

"I have a lot of friends so it's only natural" to come back for the election," said Coughlin. "Many of the people who participated in the election are folks who supported me and feel the same way I do on certain issues."

Coughlin said that he had nothing to do with the signs linking Quigley to him, however.

"I'm flattered in a way that I have many supporters in town, but the signs were not designed as a supportive measure. But they didn't hurt Karen; she was the second top vote getter."

The former town manager added, "I've been around campaigns long enough to know it's a tactic that's designed to throw whatever side into a dither and get them off their game plan. Obviously it didn't work" on Quigley.

It is still unknown who placed the signs. Cohasset's Acting Police Chief William Quigley said "it doesn't appear there's any crime involved. There's also a First Amendment issue."

So far no one has claimed responsibility for the bogus campaign signs that were apparently intended to sway voters away from Karen Quigley. COURTESY PHOTO

Lawsuit update

Former Cohasset Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was fired in March 2012 after six months on the job, is suing the town for reinstatement.

Coughlin said Monday that his lawsuit is proceeding but was delayed by a week due to the offices of the town's law firm being in close proximity to where the Boston Marathon bombings took place on April 15. The firm asked Coughlin's attorney for an extension on issuing certain information, said Coughlin.

"We're still awaiting discovery from the town," he said.

While seeking reinstatement as town manager, Coughlin said that his suit is about justice — both for him and for town employees that Coughlin claimed were punished for supporting him.

Coughlin said that he also believes the election results will lead to a change.

"I'm just heartened that the town's destiny seems to be shifting and I think that that's good. I do believe there's many things in the past year that have been very hurtful to any number of people... First and foremost is to hopefully do justice for those folks. Justice for me will be in the course of my lawsuit."

Selectmen unanimous in Koed chair appointment

Also appoint vice-chair, secretary

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The reorganized Board of Selectmen was quite different with two new additions Tuesday night, with two former members noticeably absent. It was the first meeting since the May 11 Town Election.

Former chair Paul Carlson had his last meeting on Tuesday, May 7. Carlson decided not to seek a third selectman term. Former selectman Leland Jenkins lost a bid for a second term.

Steve Gaumer, former Capital Budget chairman, and Karen Quigley, former selectman, won the four-way selectmen race, besting Jenkins and Russ Bonetti, current chair of the Community Preservation Committee (CPC).

Bonetti attended the Tuesday, May 14 meeting and congratulated the two new selectmen, showing there was no ill will after his loss. He also applauded the board's unanimous votes for chair and vice-chair.

"Thank you for the good start you guys are getting," Bonetti said.

The board voted 5-0 to appoint Fred Koed as chair, and to keep Diane Kennedy as vice-chair. Kennedy opened the meeting as vice-chair and swapped seats with Koed after he was appointed.

Koed thanked the board members for their confidence, and suggested appointing a secretary in charge of reviewing the minutes. He said it should be someone who has time to come to Town Hall and review the minutes on a regular basis.

Quigley nominated selectman Martha Gjesteby for the role. Gjesteby accepted the nod, stating that she is the only selectman who does not have a full-time job. The board was unanimous in appointing her as secretary as well.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski suggested the board also appoint a treasurer to keep a close eye on the financial information the board receives, suggesting that Gaumer was quite experienced in that area. Gaumer served on Capital Budget for over 10 years, spending seven years as chair.

Gjesteby, however, said she was against this idea because she felt the board members should all have an equal look at the budget. Kennedy said that she was hesitant because a selectmen-treasurer does not exist in the town bylaws. The board opted out of voting to appoint anyone as treasurer.

The new-look board discussed the summer meeting schedule and setting goals and objectives for the rest of the year. On an upcoming agenda, they will discuss developing a process to search for a permanent town manager and revamping the town's computer usage policy, which the board has decided needs an update. The board also plans to have Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell in for a discussion during their June 4 meeting.

AROUND TOWN

Get your cameras ready for Pre-Prom Gala!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hey there, Cohasset and happy days to you all as the interesting weather days of May continue. Each time I check in with the actual date, I do a little "regroup" in my head as I am waiting so patiently (sort of) for warmer weather but then keep reminding myself again that GREAT things come to those who wait! HMMMPH, I continue to wait, LOL! Anyways, we are pretty lucky overall for the weather we have so take it one day at a time, embrace it and enjoy all that it brings!

Prom night

I would like to extend an invitation to the community as I talk about what the month of May brings from the parents of the students in this years CHS Class of 2013...Here in Cohasset, our CHS Senior Class celebrates in style each year with a wonderful Senior Prom. This great event, held next Friday, May 24th is kicked off ahead of time with a "Pre-Prom Red Carpet Gala" that takes place at 6 p.m. at Town Hall on Cohasset Common and the entire town is invited!

Come on down (early is good, people start around 5:15ish or so) and get ready to see each Senior and his/her date announced, pose if they choose for a photo opportunity and walk down the Red Carpet to greet family and friends before loading onto the awaiting trolleys, that will take them to the Prom! This event had become a tradition here in town for so, so many and it means the world to both the student and their parents to know that their first big send-off as a "young adult" is being done surrounded by the community.

Happy birthday

I have to add a birthday wish at this time, one that is so special and filled with a whole lot of love and emotion. Happy Birthday to the "baby" in our family, Cody as he turns 18 on Friday, May 24th! That's right...18 on his Senior Prom on the last day of school at CHS, wow! Happy Birthday CMP and just remember that even though the NUMBER says 18 and in a few weeks the diploma will be in your hand, you will ALWAYS be my baby. We love you Cody, happy 18th birthday!

Prom DVDs

Shaun Galvin would like all CHS Senior parents to know that he will be videotaping the 2013 Senior Pre-Prom Red Carpet Gala for the 8th straight year on Friday May 24th. DVDs of the 2013 CHS Senior Pre Prom Red Carpet Gala will be available for sale for $20 per DVD and they make great graduation gifts. To order a copy please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197 (cell) or email your request to galvin_shaun@yahoo.com. Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20.00 per DVD to Shaun Galvin P.O. Box 526 Hingham, MA 02043.

Musicals!

What a great experience and event to take part in...On Wednesday, May 22 at 11 am, at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., vocalist Lorie Walsh will present a Rogers and Hammerstein retrospective. Join friends as this talented musician shares the stories of these composers' lives. In addition she will perform a selection of music from "Oklahoma," "Carousel" and "Sound of Music." Luncheon, prepared by Mr. Dooley's will follow the show. Call 781-383-9112 to reserve your spot and transportation if necessary.

Movie night

The next featured movie presented by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be "The One Percent." This documentary focuses on the growing wealth gap in the U.S. as seen through the eyes of filmmaker, Jamie Johnson, the 27-year-old heir to the Johnson and Johnson pharmaceutical fortune. In this film he explores the political, moral and emotional rationale that enables the so-called one percent to control nearly half the entire wealth of the U.S. The film includes interviews with Nicole Buffet, Bill Gates, Robert Reich and Ralph Nader among others. Please join us in the meeting room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 7 p.m.for an insightful look at this growing problem. These movies are free for all and refreshments are provided.

Union College

Aisling Kearns, Class of 2013 of Cohasset, was a presenter at Union College's annual Steinmetz Symposium Day on Friday, May 10. Aisling presented researched titled "Irish Travelers and the Transformative Nature of Media Representation."

Every year, Union College celebrates its Undergraduate Research program by inviting students to present their creative and scholarly achievements. This year, more than 450 students participated in the festivities that spanned all of the college's academic disciplines.

Woodward School

The Woodward School for Girls announced Mary Kate McGowan, a seventh-grade Latin IA student from Cohasset, earned a Purple Ribbon for Outstanding Achievement in the Introduction to Latin Exam on the National Latin Exam.

This annual exam is sponsored by the National Junior Classical League under the aegis of the American Classical League. More than 154,000 Latin students around the world took this exam.

UMass-Dartmouth

Olivia Kimla from Cohasset graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree in psychology at the UMass-Dartmouth undergraduate commencement on May 12, 2013. An estimated 1,446 graduates received degrees.

Washington & Lee University

Alexandra Butler of Cohasset, a member of the Class of 2015 at Washington and Lee University, has earned dean's list status for the recently ended 2013 winter term.

Dean's list status at Washington and Lee represents a term grade-average of at least 3.4 on a 4.0 scale.

Playground

The Buy-A-Brick program in which your personalized brick will be placed in a donor pathway at the Deer Hill School is still ongoing through June 1. Bricks start at $150 and include three lines of text or more. Those who would like to purchase a brick may obtain the necessary forms at the Osgood and Deer Hill School offices or by contacting either Franchesca Arnold at: franchesca@cohasset.netor at 383-2548 or Michelle Loughlin at mloughlin521@hotmail.comor at 383-8308. Don't miss out on your chance to be forever remembered at the playground.

Girls shop

I received a request from a number of Cohasset women to share the news of a new store that will be opening in Scituate Harbor by two ladies who live in Scituate but are a big part of the Cohasset crowd of Moms and friends as well. Congratulations to Meredith Lanata and Amy Tarsala who are excited to announce the opening of the Every Girl shop in Scituate Harbor. You will find treasures for girls of all ages as well as a place for all girls to express their creativity.

The mission is to build a meeting place for girls and women where they can come together and spend time enjoying all that the seasons bring. They want to empower girls to create, share and enjoy time spent together. The retail space will include doll clothes, furniture and accessories, jewelry, bags and seasonal clothes and decorative items. A calendar of events will be available on the website as well as on Facebook. They anticipate at least 3-4 activities a month for little girls (5-9), tweens (10-14) and teenage girls from 15-18. Women's events and classes will also be held weekly. Classes will range in price between $12-$30.

They look forward to the May 18th Grand Opening 10 a.m.-8 p.m. and would love for you to join us for the party. It will be a Pink and Orange Extravaganza with a candy bar, cupcake station, face painting, balloons and more. Congrats ladies...info@everygirlsci.com

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Kate de Lima, Cohasset native, is featured in "Hairspray." COURTESY PHOTO

Kate de Lima in 'Hairspray'

Riverside Theatre Works will present the Tony Award-winning musical "Hairspray" running through May 19.

Based on the film by John Waters, with music and lyrics by Marc Shaiman and Scott Whitman, "Hairspray" brings to life the city of Baltimore in 1962 and one girl's effort to integrate a local TV dance show. With some of the most infectious music ever written for the stage and hilarious but lovable characters throughout, Hairspray is sure to delight audiences of all ages.

Cohasset resident Kate de Lima is featured as Prudy Pingleton and the prison matron in the production.

Adding to the tremendous appeal of the show, "Hairspray" is directed by Boston theater notable, Leigh Barrett, in her directing debut at Riverside. In addition to Ms. Barrett, the creative team for "Hairspray" includes choreographer Kami Smith and musical director Marilyn Whipple. Parish concert is this Sunday

The Lexington Symphony Chamber Players, an ensemble made up of professional members of the Lexington Symphony, will present works by Jongen, Françaix and Lexington composer Pamela Marshall – who will also speak at the concert. A small reception will follow. The concert will take place at 3 p.m., on Sunday, May 19, in the Parish House of First Parish Cohasset at 23 North Main St.. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Founded in 1995 by conductor Hisao Watanabe and a group of professional musicians and supporters, the Lexington Symphony maintains a grass-roots community spirit while producing high-quality performances that attract an ever-growing audience from Lexington and surrounds. The orchestra presents six concerts each year led by conductor Jonathan McPhee.

First Parish is proud welcome Lexington Symphony members Danielle Boudrot (flute), Elizabeth Whitfield (violin), Lisa Kempskie (viola), Jane Sheena (cello), and Barbara Poeschl-Edrich (harp), in a program that explores the various combinations and timbres of these five instruments. The program will consist of pieces by Jean Francaix, Joseph Jongen and Pamela Marshall, who is a Lexington-based composer. Marshall, who studied at Eastman and Yale, was also a fellow at the MacDowell Colony. She has been commissioned by Carson Cooman, the Assabet Valley Mastersingers, Unitarian choirs in Massachusetts and Minnesota, the Fisher Foundation, and others. Marshall will be present at the concert to introduce her piece.

The concert will be followed by a small reception where people are invited to meet the performers and composer.

Now that's Italian!

Domenic's brings one-stop shopping to Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Domenic Truglia inside the newly opened Domenic's Italian Market in Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square off King Street. PHOTO/ERIN DALE

Domenic Truglia put it best: "We're bringing a little bit of the North End to the South Shore."

Domenic's Italian Market opened in late April on 130 King Street (Route 3A) and offers Italian imported goods, from pasta and sauces to wine and beer, to specialty coffee and soda.

"They're items you won't see anywhere else," said Truglia.

The new storeowner, who previously owned the Club Casa tanning salon across the highway, said that he was inspired to open his own Italian market as someone who regularly frequents these types of shops.

"Being Italian, I'm always going into Italian market stores," said Truglia. "I got my dinner items, lasagna and sauces, but then had to go somewhere else to get my wine and beer. It's a lot easier to not have to make two different stops."

Domenic's one-stop shop for Italian goods offers a little bit of everything, because Truglia is putting the customer first. During the shop's soft opening the week of April 15, Truglia sought customer input on what the store should carry. He continues to be open to suggestions.

When he heard "every other customer" asking him for gluten-free items, Truglia began stocking gluten-free pasta. He said that the store's distributor has offered to send gnocchi, ravioli, lasagna and more.

Truglia said that soon, he plans to offer prepared meals, and this will include gluten-free options such as macaroni and cheese or spaghetti and meatballs: "kid-friendly alternatives."

Another alternative in the works: vegetarian "meat" balls. Truglia said that he offers more vegetarian options than not in his shop, noting that meat-free meals are also in high-demand.

"Being in this area, we're able to do more non-traditional Italian items," said Truglia.

Another popular request: Gelato, the smooth, creamy Italian version of ice cream. Truglia hopes to expand the store to include a gelato case.

"Gelato is huge — everyone's eating it now," said Truglia. "It's crazy."

The shop will also offer cannoli on Fridays and fresh bread on Saturdays, along with samplings of food, wine and beer on Saturdays. Custom baskets as a gourmet gift, filled with items of the customer's choosing, are also available for delivery.

Three weeks into the opening, the new Italian market has garnered some praise from Facebook fans. Many raved over the cannoli and gluten-free pasta.

Three weeks into the opening, the new Italian market has garnered some praise from Facebook fans. Many raved over the cannoli and gluten-free pasta.

One reviewer wrote, "We love specialty food markets and this new place did not disappoint! We were very impressed with the quality of products here. Amazing cheese, Italian meats, pasta, wine, etc. We met the owner, fantastic guy, very knowledgeable about everything in the store, and he gave us some great recommendations! With the warm weather finally here this is the perfect place to stop and stock up on delicious delicacies and have a picnic!"

Domenic's is a family-friendly business, and a family affair. Truglia said he was happy to return to doing business in Cohasset, where his family is from. Truglia operated a tanning salon in town for a number of years before deciding to sell the business in 2011. He and his family – wife Judy and daughters Vanessa, six, and Viviana, five – took time off to travel around the country, at one point spending several months in Hawaii.

After a while, the Truglia family was ready to return to their roots.

"It's something we were missing," he said of his family's time away. "There's no place like the South Shore."

Truglia said that he and his wife are grateful that their daughters can attend Cohasset schools and be in close proximity to some of the best colleges and universities in the country. For now, the proud father enjoys showing off his daughters' artwork on the walls on his new shop.

He is also happy to be in the food business as opposed to his former work in the tanning industry.

"To feed somebody feels more rewarding," said Truglia.

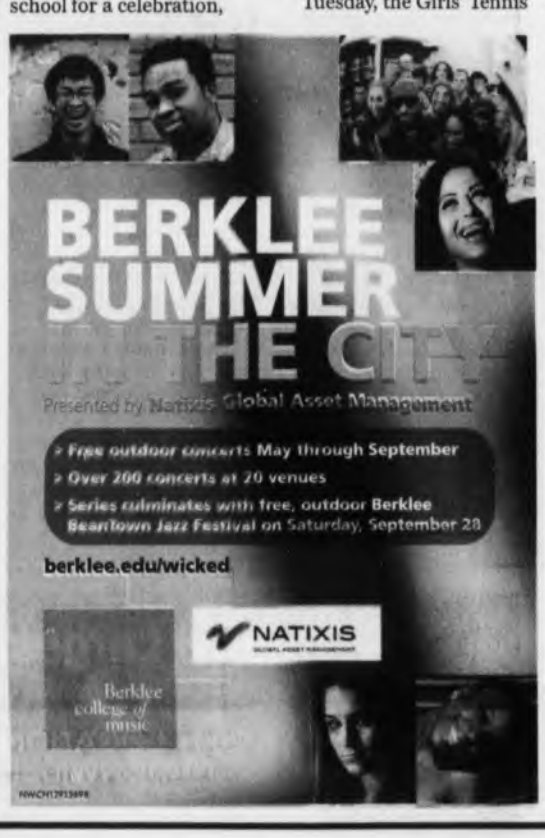
LIFE AT CHS

Arts, athletics and academics

The night will feature senior students' artwork displayed throughout the senior lounge and an awards ceremony for seniors who have dedicated their time and effort to Music and Art while at CHS.

WHITNEY MALONE

This week was certainly a balanced mix of work and play at CHS! Today, students finished their final AP exams, and this afternoon, the band and chorus students are taking their music trip into Boston. After visiting the Schubert Theater for a backstage tour and attending a private sketch comedy show at the Improv Asylum, we will top off the night seeing a Blue Man Group performance at the Charles Playhouse!



Monday, sophomore CHS students began their Mathematics MCAS testing, while that night, the Costa Rica students gathered at the school for a celebration, sharing pictures and memories with friends and family from the trip in April. After a ten-minute picture slideshow set to our "Coho Ticos" playlist, we each shared our favorite and most empowering experiences in Costa Rica, including our night hike through the rainforest, walking on a rickety metal bridge over a river (only three people at a time!), and white water rafting adventures down the Pacuare River! The party ended with everyone enjoying Mrs. Humphrey's homemade tres leches cake, a traditional Spanish butter cake soaked in three types of milk.

Tuesday, the Girls' Tennis Team celebrated their 3-2 win against Notre Dame Academy, contributing to their undefeated record. Congrats girls!

Next Thursday, the band and chorus members will celebrate their last performances of the year for friends and family at CHS Arts Night. The night will feature senior students' artwork displayed throughout the senior lounge and an awards ceremony for seniors who have dedicated their time and effort to Music and Art while at CHS.

This week, the student council collected order forms for Prom flowers. As a clever and (especially for us seniors) convenient fundraiser, the student council is selling corsages and boutonnieres through Roche Bros. floral department in Marshfield. Students can pick up their orders at school on their way out the door next Friday the 24th and will be all set for Prom that night! Next week, Prom tickets will be on sale in school. Also, if any CHS senior parents are interested in purchasing footage of the Pre-Prom Red Carpet Gala on the town common, I have been notified that they may purchase a DVD through Shaun Galvin by contacting him at 781-424-2197 or galvin_shaun@yahoo.com.

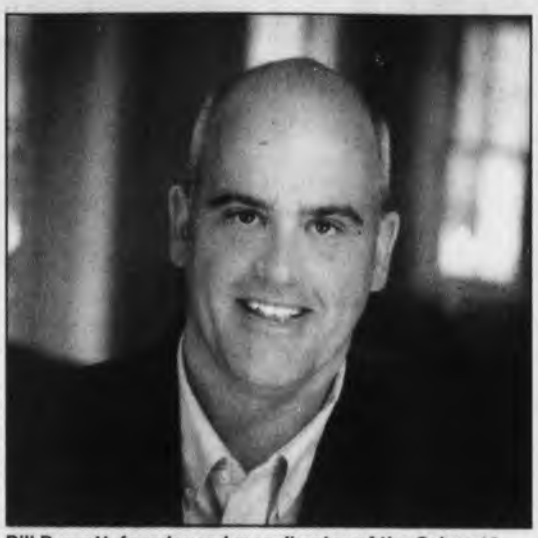
JUVENILE DIABETES CHAMPION

Bill Burnett being honored

The New England Chapter of JDRF, the leading global organization funding type 1 diabetes (T1D) research, will host its 31st Annual Boston Gala on Saturday (May 18) at the Boston Marriott Copley Place. JDRF, formerly known as the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, will recognize Bill Burnett, founder and race director of the Cohasset Triathlon, as the 2013 Nancy Jones Diabetes Champion. The goal of the black tie event is to raise more than $1.2 million to fund research to cure, treat, and prevent T1D.



Bill is the Managing Director and Founder of Streamline Events. He launched his first triathlon in his hometown of Cohasset in 2007. The Cohasset Triathlon was originally created to showcase the beautiful seaside town, but Bill also wanted to give back to the community. After seeing for years what a good friend's son had to endure managing T1D on a daily basis, he knew he wanted to raise money for JDRF's mission.

The Cohasset Triathlon, now in its seventh year, has raised nearly $1 million for T1D research to date and continues to be one of JDRF's largest and most successful volunteer fundraising events across the country. The event has also become one of the largest, most popular sprint distant races in New England.

"I am deeply touched by the outpouring of support from the T1D community. I've never seen anything like it. The passion and drive to find a cure is so strong. People often ask me how we made the Cohasset Triathlon so successful and my answer is simple: Surround yourself with good people who are passionate and have high integrity and good things will happen," said Bill. "The Nancy Jones Diabetes Champion Award is wonderful acknowledgment for our race coordinators, our volunteers, and everyone who has supported our efforts. This recognition makes me incredibly proud of what we have built through the Cohasset Triathlon."

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Local coaches team up for tri

Sarah's Soldiers race for Cohasset girl

CATZ Hingham coaches John Kalell and Tyler Aiken and Secret Physique instructor, Jenna Quilty, are participating in the Cohasset Triathlon on June 30 as members of the Sarah's Soldier's team. Sarah's Soldiers is a team of friends and family dedicated to help find a cure for Type 1 Juvenile Diabetes.

Sarah's Soldiers

Sarah Bast, an 11-year-old girl from Cohasset, was diagnosed with juvenile diabetes when she was just four years old. Mark and Clare Bast, her parents, created an organization that would raise money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) in hopes that one day their daughter and millions of other children could say they "had" diabetes. Sarah's Soldiers is the name of the team who races in the Cohasset Triathlon each year to raise money for JDRF.

Getting involved

The CATZ coaches decided to join Sarah's Soldiers and race in the Cohasset Tri because they with Clare Bast, Sarah's mother. Quilty worked with Clare at lululemon for two years. Kalell and Aiken know Clare because she works out at CATZ with lululemon. Kalell was named lululemon ambassador, so the group is also connected that way.

The event and foundation is dear to the coaches' hearts. The trio has no triathlon experience, and is nervous to participate in this Tri as none are swimmers or cyclists, according to Quilty.

However, they have decided to participate "because if Sarah can figure out how to live her life with Juvenile diabetes, pricking her finger and monitoring her blood glucose all day long, then we can figure out how to compete in this race!" said Quilty. "Let me add that I am petrified of the ocean... it scares me to even think about it. But I'm doing it for Sarah because she is a strong, beautiful, and brave little girl, and I am going to be equally as strong for her."

Teaming up

Both facilities are teaming up to raise money for this incredible cause. Each session will consist of a 30-minute CATZ workout with John or Tyler and then a 30-minute class at the Secret Physique studio with Jenna. You can register using the link found on the Facebook event page to reserve your spot or drop in the day of the event. Cash or personal check (made out to Sarah's Soldiers) is accepted. The cost is $30 per session; 100 percent of proceeds will go to Sarah's Soldiers.

Please plan to arrive 15 minutes before your CATZ session to check-in, sign a waiver, and receive your wristband. Your wristband will admit you into your assigned time slot at both locations.

Sharing the story of 'Saving Baby'

Hingham man co-authors book on horseracing

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

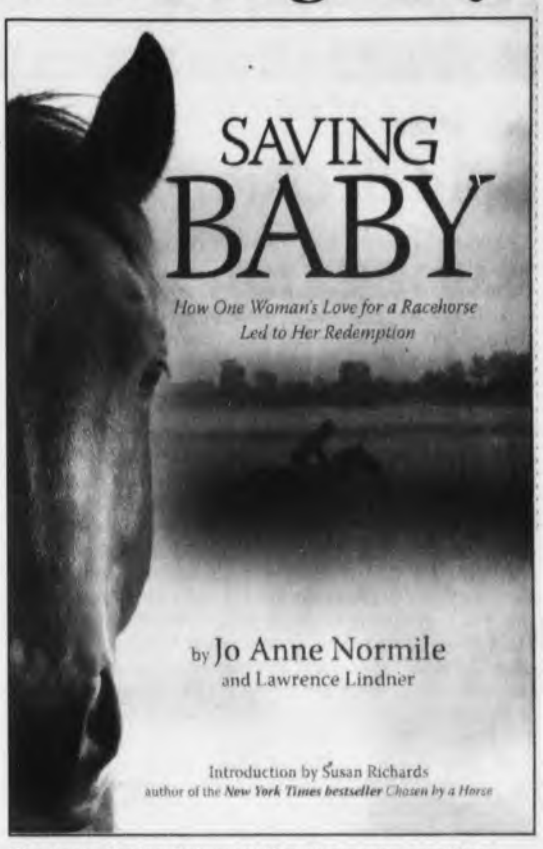
Three weeks ago, a book co-authored by New York Times bestselling author and Hingham resident Larry Lindner went live on amazon.com. The book, Saving Baby, tells the true story of Jo Anne Normile, who got pulled into horse racing and had to make painful, life-changing choices she never expected, or even knew existed.

Lindner admits that before meeting Normile he never paid much attention to horses. He has dogs, and has edited a veterinary magazine. When Dr. Nicholas Dodman, Director of the Tufts Animal Behavior Clinic told him about a woman in Michigan who wanted to rescue racehorses, Lindner kept saying no. He was a boy from the city, he said, meaning New York City originally, and knew nothing about horses. But in January, 2010 he agreed to meet Normile.

After hearing her story, he said, "I couldn't ignore it."

He sat down, took 80 pages of notes on how racing works, and came away shocked. He discovered that in a sad, frightening irony, the business of racing takes from horses the very thing that we so prize them for — the freedom and the possibilities they symbolize when we see them running, powerful and strong. Racing takes away horses' choices, up to their choice of life or death.

Like others, Lindner considered horse racing a sport. He no longer does, although he understands how someone watching it could see it that way. In addition to the competitive element, fans admire horses the way they do human athletes: for their grace, power, skill, and speed. Fans also admire athletes for their commitment and endurance; no athlete is immune from injuries. "I love football," Lindner said, "but Tom Brady, he gets to decide when he's going to quit, when he'll retire. Racehorses, they have no choice. They're stuck in a stall 23 hours a day. They don't eat the way we do, but they're fed the way we are."



The book describes Normile confronting both points of view as she comes to racing as a newbie. She might not have come to racing at all, except that she wanted to keep Baby, the horse she had loved and raised since his birth. She had to promise his original owner she would race him, because the original owner got a fee whenever Baby raced. Like a parent proud of her student athlete, Normile alternated being proud of how Baby ran, and becoming increasingly upset by the way his trainers treated him. His trainers kept him stabled to increase his desire to run, and fed him twice a day in bulk. When horses feast rather than graze, they can develop life-threatening colic. Long stabling also causes inflammation in the slender leg joints that have to bear the pounding weight of a running horse.

Breeders are also removing horses' innate ability to avoid injuries. "Horses are bred more for speed than for soundness," Lindner said. "Being bred for speed is diametrically opposite to being bred for sound."

As Normile struggled with the tension between wanting to keep her horse and seeing how he was being treated, she also had to confront another grim reality of track life — the horrifying fate so many horses meet after injury or poor performances.

The result of injury for a racehorse is usually death, and for most, it's not a quick, merciful death. Lindner mentioned the case of Eight Belles, the filly who broke both her ankles just after the 2008 Kentucky Derby. "Eight Belles was one of the lucky ones," Lindner said. "She was euthanized right there with a privacy screen." He said that most injured racehorses are loaded from the tracks onto cattle trucks and shipped off to Mexico or Canada for slaughter, where slaughtering horses for meat is legal. During these journeys, horses endure pain or tremendous discomfort. Track regulars call the people who arrange this pipeline from the track to slaughterhouses "kill buyers". The Humane Society of the United States' website also gives these facts and estimates that at least 100,000 horses are slaughtered each year this way. Lindner gave a higher estimate, between 150,000 and 175,000 horses, and that 10 – 15 percent of these are Thoroughbred racehorses, including brood mares.

Eventually these tensions led Normile not only to pull out of racing but also to try to save horses, to get to the route of the slaughter pipeline. She founded CANTER, an organization that strives to protect Thoroughbreds from slaughter, but had to leave it when her husband became very ill. She never stopped advocating against equine slaughter, though, and has spoken to members of Congress about its cruelty and the health risks to people. Most horsemeat is toxic because drugs fed to horses before slaughter haven't been metabolized. Those drugs get passed on to people.

In coordination with the book, Saving Baby, Normile founded the Saving Baby Equine Charity. The Saving Baby Equine Charity tries to identify horses in need and connect them with people who will foster them.

Normile is now doing more advocating. In coordination with the book, Saving Baby, Normile founded the Saving Baby Equine Charity. The Saving Baby Equine Charity tries to identify horses in need and connect them with people who will foster them. The charity also raises money to pay off kill buyers, pay veterinary bills, feed, and transport to safe farms. Lindner says the charity has saved dozens of horses from slaughter.

A percentage of proceeds from the book will go to the charity. "It's particularly important to remember that horses are people, too," Lindner said. "They each have their own personality and character. They have good memories — often better than humans — but they're prey animals, so they're vulnerable. When you buy the book, you're part of the story of saving horses."

OUR VIEW

Split decision

Saturday's election will no doubt go down as one of the most interesting in recent memory.

Those of us who are energized by the political process will be analyzing this one for some time to come. It makes you wish you were a guest on one of those Sunday morning talk shows where those on both sides and in the middle put their spin on the results.

While Steve Gaumer and incumbent Lee Jenkins – and Russ Bonetti and Karen Quigley – have made it clear they did not run as "teams" – often their signs were planted together on lawns. On Election Day many of their campaign workers were standing together along Highland Avenue leading some to believe they were members of two separate "camps."

So with Gaumer and Quigley in the winner's circle – some local political pundits are left scratching their heads. Just what was the message the voters were sending? Maybe it is the hope that while working together – Gaumer and Quigley – will also provide checks and balances. While there has been dysfunction on the board, healthy debate and the exchange of ideas should not be discouraged. Citizens want to be included in the decision-making process and that is only possible through the airing of different opinions before reaching a consensus.

We want to congratulate the winners Gaumer and Quigley and take our hats off to Bonetti and Jenkins. They all fought hard to win.

We don't believe the "changing of the guard" was a reflection of the job incumbent selectman Lee Jenkins was doing. In light of all the divisiveness, we think voters wanted a change on the Board of Selectmen and it would have been difficult for any incumbent selectman to win reelection. We've covered Jenkins for years and found him dedicated, direct and hard working.

However, the baton has been passed and a lot of trust has been placed in the hands of the new board to provide leadership.

Our sincere hope is that any "war wounds" from recent issues and the campaigns and will soon heal. In the end, we are all neighbors who all share the same love for Cohasset.

We'd also like to congratulate all the candidates who ran opposed or unopposed and wish them well on their respective boards, committees and commissions. We send special recognition to the winner Virginia Laugelli Najmi and her opponent James R. Sheerin who ran to fill an unexpired term on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Flower girls for Memorial Day

Flower girls, ages 5 through 12, are needed for the water service for veterans who died at sea. The event will take place at the Veterans Memorial. Parents and siblings can also walk, as well as past flower girls – the more the merrier.

Girls should meet at the Common across from the POW/MIA Square (near Depot Court) at 11 a.m., on Memorial Day, May 27. Girls should bring flowers from their gardens, and will walk from the Common to Veterans Park.

Anyone interested can call Dee Wigmore at 617-281-6128.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Bonetti reflects on race, looks ahead

I would like to thank everyone who voted for me last Saturday. I am most appreciative and humbled by your show of support. I would also like to thank all of you who chose not to vote for me. There were a lot of things going on last Saturday besides the election, and those who took the time to vote are the ones who make our system work so well.

I would like to congratulate Steve Gaumer and Karen Quigley on being elected. I wish them the best and will do all I can to help them in any way. I would like also to thank Lee Jenkins for his past service to the town as a Selectman, and as a member of the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee.

I'd like to thank Peter Wood for his help as treasurer of my somewhat improvised run for selectman. It was an interesting ride to say the least. Thanks to those who contributed monetarily, and those who took a sign for their yard. If I missed taking any signs down, let me know!

Thanks to The Mariner, 143TV, and the folks at Elder Affairs for providing a forum for the voters to hear the candidates' position on the many issues facing Cohasset.

I look forward to continuing to help preserve the character of Cohasset as a member of the CPC. I hope people will consider volunteering on some of the various committees in town. Volunteers make a huge impact on the town.

Cohasset will be facing some major decisions over the next few years that will only be solved if we all do our best to work as one. Recently we have all seen public discourse take a most uncivil turn. We all love Cohasset, so it is incumbent on us to put past differences aside and try to find common ground. We will never solve the issues facing the town if we don't face them together. There will be differences of opinion and that is certainly healthy, but if we want to move the town forward we have to stop dwelling on the past.

My only regret looking back is that only 30 percent of the registered voters took part in the elections. Having the right to choose your government is a privilege that we all should honor.

Thanks again.

Russell Bonetti, 20 Parker Ave.

BRIEFLY

CERT volunteers being sought

The Town of Cohasset Emergency Management is continuing to increase the number of trained volunteers under the CERT Program, to help respond during emergencies.

Emergency service personnel are the best trained and equipped to handle emergencies. However, following a catastrophic disaster, the community may be on its own for a period of time because of the size of the area affected, lost communications, and/or unpassable roads. To address this we are currently seeking volunteers in Cohasset to become a CERT volunteer.

CERT training is designed to prepare us to help ourselves, families, and neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. Because emergency services personnel will not be able to help everyone immediately, CERT trained volunteers make a difference by using skills learned to save lives and protect property.

CERT training covers basic skills that are important to know when emergency services are not available. With training and practice and by working as a team, we will be able to do the greatest good for the greatest number after a disaster.

CERT training will begin this summer. The training will be nine weeks, one night per week, day and time to be determined.

For more information or to volunteer email Glenn Pratt: gpratt@suburbanresources.com.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Senate election hits close to home

The 2013 Massachusetts Senate race for now-Secretary of State John Kerry's old seat has already proven to be a study in contrasts.

MATT GREGORY

Gabriel Gomez has always been willing to accept a challenge. The Cohasset businessman chose to apply for the Navy Seal program while still an aircraft carrier pilot, a move that could have jeopardized his entire military career. He decided to partially self-fund his political campaign for the 2013 Senate Election, utilizing his earnings from years working at an investment banking firm. He even participated in the fateful 2013 Boston marathon. Yet now, after surpassing challengers Daniel Winslow and Michael Sullivan in the April 30 Republican Party primary election, Gomez has been confronted with perhaps his most daunting undertaking yet: Outwitting 20-term Democratic Congressman Ed Markey and attaining one of the most powerful positions in American government, that of a United States Senator.

Gomez's name has become well known in Cohasset as of late. One can hardly miss the hundreds of blue-and-white signs decorating yards across town, or the massive wooden advertisement which was recently placed at the common, promoting his name to potential voters. When I voted in the primary on April 30, other people in line were not just discussing their support for the Cohasset native, but also how they had been with Gomez the night before, helping with his campaign. In the primary itself, he won 803 of 1,000 Republican votes cast in Cohasset, and his victory speech following the contest was held at the Red Lion Inn. He even ran for town Selectman in 2003. Cohasset residents know enough about Gomez as a person; he is an affluent, well-respected individual who in the past has attempted to play a role in town politics and social events. However, as a national-level politician, Gomez' profile is far less recognizable than that of his competitor, leading many potential voters to wonder exactly what type of politician this state would be sending to Washington if Gabriel Gomez was to win the Senate seat.

Pledging to campaign on a socially moderate and fiscally conservative platform, Gomez seeks to combine his years of experience in the private investment world with his "Washington outsider" status to "reboot Congress" and end the gridlock seen as currently preventing necessary legislative progress. Regarding government expenditures, Gomez plans to "enact meaningful spending reductions," and would likely ally himself with conservative elements within the Senate dedicated to opposing Obama's budget proposals in favor of policies similar to those advocated by Mitt Romney during his recent presidential campaign. Moreover, Gomez has ambitions of reforming Congressional budget-development practices, authoring a "Gomez Plan to Reboot Congress," in which he advocates a national balanced budget amendment and a provision mandating government salaries to be suspended until a budget has been submitted. On social issues, Gomez takes a moderate stance; he claims to be personally pro-life, yet advocates upholding Roe v. Wade, and does support the provision of same-sex marriage on a state-by-state basis. While Gomez's stances on these issues have been widely publicized, there are numerous other political concerns he will be forced to address in the Senate on which he has yet to make more than general assertions regarding his position. For example, concerning energy policy, Gomez writes on his website, "I will work with President Obama when he is right, and will oppose him when he is wrong," and on foreign policy, "We must confront the real threats to freedom and we must sustain...the cause of liberty." These generalizations have been attacked by Democratic leaders as illustrating Gomez' lack of experience and inability to adequately respond to the complicated challenges of congressional service.

Now enter Congressman Ed Markey. First earning a House of Representatives seat in 1976, the 20-term veteran has established a reputation as an unwaveringly liberal voice in Washington. Markey has supported many of President Barack Obama's initiatives, including the passage of the stimulus package in 2009 and the Affordable Care Act in 2010. Moreover, regarding foreign affairs, Markey has been a strong opponent of military intervention, voting in 2004 to oppose further funding for the Iraq War and continuing to condemn the Bush administration for the monetary and human losses suffered in Iraq and Afghanistan. On social issues, Markey has advocated strongly in favor of a woman's right to choose and for national marriage equality, opposing a constitutional amendment which would have banned same-sex marriage. However, Markey's area of greatest expertise is environmental policy; he has served on the House Natural Resources Committee for over 30 years, has consistently warned against the dangers of climate change, and has advocated government support for clean energy development rather than continued reliance on fossil fuel burning. Furthermore, as described by Markey's website, the direct impact of his energy activism has been beneficial for the Massachusetts economy: "Ed has fought to protect federal policies that enhance clean energy, which have helped bring more than 70,000 jobs to Massachusetts."

The 2013 Massachusetts Senate race for now-Secretary of State John Kerry's old seat has already proven to be a study in contrasts. Gomez is far younger than Markey, with a military and business background, a "Washington outsider" perspective, and idealistic ambitions of congressional reform. Markey, conversely, has a long tenure in Congress, with a storied history of liberal activism and the current support of established figures in the Democratic community, including President Obama and Secretary Kerry. Markey's age and years in Washington have been attacked by Gomez, who proclaimed, "You've got somebody here, who, literally, in 1976, was playing Little League baseball when Congressman Markey was first elected. There can't be a better poster boy for term limits than Congressman Markey." Yet on the other hand, Gomez's lack of experience and moderate stances have drawn comparisons to past Massachusetts politicians Scott Brown and Mitt Romney. The association between the former governor and the current Senate candidate is particularly notable; Gomez is receiving assistance from multiple Romney advisors, including Eric Fehrnstrom, notorious for his comment regarding shifting the candidate's image like an "Etch-a-Sketch." Gomez has even been called a "Mini Me" of Romney's failed presidential bid. Yet while the lack of a true conservative presence in the election has prompted some to dismiss the contest as between "two Democrats," the Massachusetts election will nevertheless have significant implications for the balance of partisan power in Washington and the future of government policy, an impact that will be felt both on the streets of Cohasset and across the United States.

Sally Field and the Bully Pulpit

Open and constructive disagreements are part of what makes this country great; anonymous bullying and personal attacks are not constructive.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

"You like me, right now, you like me!"

No, I'm not talking about me per se, rather I am sharing Sally Field's 1985 memorable Oscar acceptance speech for winning Best Actress in the movie "Places in the Heart."

If you haven't seen "Places in the Heart" I highly recommend that you do. It's a terrific movie about a young widowed mother in the 1930s trying to survive after the sudden death of her husband. The movie has a wonderful cast including Danny Glover who plays a share cropper helping Sally Field's character and John Malkovich as a blind man who Fields' takes in to help cover the mortgage.

There's a pivotal scene near the end of the movie where some townsmen dressed in white robes are about to lynch Glover but they are stopped when Malkovich identifies the men by their voices. It's an incredibly moving scene that showed that these men were tough hiding under their hoods and robes but as soon as they were exposed they cowered up and went away; which brings us around to Cohasset.

For the last few weeks the Mariner has been covering a story about the anonymous posters on the paper's website and how the Board of Selectmen has been investigating to see if any originated from Town Hall. The investigation has been suspended, because the Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski do not believe they originated from Town Hall, but regardless of where they originated they are unfortunately giving our community a black eye.

It's been debated whether the ongoing inflammatory responses are legal (protected by the 1st Amendment) or illegal (in violation of the Massachusetts anti-masking and anti-bullying laws) but no one can debate the fact that in many cases the posts lack civility and are vindictive. The ironic part is whatever value some comments seem to have is minimalized by the posters' refusal to stand by their words and the incessant vitriol.

Stop for a minute and answer this question: What would the community reaction be if it was found that a very small percentage of Cohasset High School students were anonymously posting nasty, slanderous rumors about other students on a town-centric social media site and that the site was allowing it to continue?

The answer is easy; parents would go ballistic, the actions would be deemed illegal (cyber-bullying). The institutions would be held accountable and all efforts would be made to correct the situation and catch the perpetrators. So then why are we accepting of these actions from adults and what signal is being sent to our kids that this behavior is being allowed to continue?

The Board of Selectmen and Mike Milanoski think the actions are questionable which is why they investigated to see if the posts were coming from town servers. I believe the solution shouldn't come from Town Hall; rather the solution lies with the management of the Cohasset Mariner.

The parent company for the Cohasset Mariner, Gate House Media, controls how posters log on. The paper already requires that when someone submits a letter to the paper that it must be signed. Require the same for people who post. No need for two sets of rules and such an act would ensure that all individuals are held to the same minimal level of civility. I know that Milanoski and others support this idea as do I.

Open and constructive disagreements are part of what makes this country great; anonymous bullying and personal attacks are not constructive. This is our community and the Mariner as our community paper should take a leadership role and do its part to elevate the level of discourse. If there is some hesitancy to fully embrace this change, I suggest the paper adopt a 6-month moratorium on the anonymous blogging with a public or published assessment afterwards.

As for the questionable posters, based on their posts it was quite evident that these folks strongly opposed the candidacy of Karen Quigley for Selectman. Late last week their overzealousness leaped off of the World Wide Web and on to streets of Cohasset as fake election signs mysteriously appeared stating, "Bring Back Mike Coughlin Vote Quigley." (For the record, there have been rumors of questionable tactics involving other campaigns, but I haven't seen anything to substantiate them.)

Really? Bring back Mike Coughlin? They thought Mike Coughlin would resonate with voters? Had they spent less time arguing online with Mike Coughlin and more time talking around town it would have been clear that the desire for civility and respect were amongst the key issues with those who turned out to vote. In a matter of minutes, they made a candidate with a closet full of questions — sympathetic.

The top two finishers in Saturday's election won seats on the Board of Selectmen. Steve Gaumer garnered the most votes. Karen Quigley, the candidate these individuals went after edged Russ Bonetti for second place by just four votes with Leland Jenkins a distant fourth. Four votes, just four votes, think about it for a minute. Don't you think those bogus signs generated a minimum of four or five sympathy votes for Quigley? What would have been the outcome had they done nothing?

Which brings me to another quote associated with Sally Field; this time from the movie Forest Gump. "Momma says, stupid is as stupid does."

Thanks for reading and it's time to remove the bully from the pulpit.

John McSheffrey was born and raised on the South Shore and he and his family have been part of the Cohasset community since 2007. John can be reached at jjmcs@aol.com.

FOR THE RECORD

Milestones just a click away

GREGORY MATHIS

With Memorial Day a little more than a week away, it's safe to say the school calendar is beginning to wind down.

Granted some school districts will be in session until the final week of June as a result of the numerous snow days over the winter, but that won't have a direct impact on the timing of proms, graduations and other end-of-year school activities.

While we make every attempt possible to cover as many of these school events as we can, it's difficult to be everywhere.

That's where you can help.

We'll most likely get to each of the graduations in the coming weeks by coordinating resources with our sister dailies – The Patriot Ledger, The Enterprise and the Taunton Gazette. But even that's not a given mainly because so many graduations are scheduled for the same day and around the same time.

But getting to each graduation, particularly the public schools, is a priority for us and we know you depend on our coverage to highlight this special day for the graduating seniors.

With that said, we know many are bringing their cameras to photograph and take video of the commencement exercises. Send your photographs and video our way and we'll find a spot for them either in print or online with the video.

Proms can be a challenge for us to cover, especially if they're held any great distance from the school. Although each school has a calendar of events, we cover many towns. It's safe to assume we don't always know when the junior or senior proms are, so please give us fair warning. Too often we are unaware of a prom and get called midday Friday to let us know the prom is happening later that night at the Quincy Marriott. Chances are assignments have been made and staff and freelancers are expected elsewhere.

Like graduation, though, there are usually people at the prom with cameras taking pictures and maybe even shooting video. We've missed some proms over the years and had to rely on you to help us cover these important events.

The same holds true for all the senior activities, field days and all the other events that will be happening at the schools as the calendar turns to June.

And it's worth reiterating as we enter this important stretch to be safe. Schools have been working with public safety personnel to stage mock accidents to provide compelling visual images of the dangers of drinking and driving. Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) and Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), as well as local police officials, have been out in full force making sure the message is being driven home. Students need to be accountable not only to themselves, but their classmates in making the right decisions. And parents need to be vigilant in knowing as much as they can about their child's whereabouts on these special nights and who they're hanging with and where they might be staying.

The last thing we want to be doing is reporting on a tragic loss of life following one of these once in a lifetime milestones.

So be safe, and don't forget to send in your pictures and video from these milestone events.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South and Cape Cod units. He can be reached by email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Yard sale to benefit scholarship fund

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its annual yard sale on Friday, May 17 and Saturday, May 18 from 8 a.m. to noon at the home of Donna McGee, 23 Hill St.

The proceeds from this yard sale, held each year for the past 11 years, go to fund the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship is awarded to a civic-minded, Cohasset, graduating senior in good academic standing.

Abigail Adams

Deer Hill students got a visit from First Lady Abigail Adams during a performance by actress and historian Linda Myer in an exciting one-woman show.

While married to President John Adams, the second U.S. president, Abigail "Abby" Adams ran the family farm, educated their children, and wrote letters describing the tumultuous events of the American Revolution. She was more than a mother and homemaker and played a key role in American politics at the time.

The program by Historical Entertainments was sponsored by Cohasset's PSO.

running for the two seats.

Selectmen

The four-way race for two selectmen seats was hard-fought between Bonetti, Gaumer, Jenkins and Quigley. The two victors, Gaumer and Quigley, took their seats on the new-look board during the Tuesday selectmen meeting, ready to dig in.

Gaumer said that he learned during his campaign that the grassroots effort of volunteers is key to running a good race.

"I'm really amazed when I recognize the amount of work that goes into even a small-town campaign," said Gaumer. "The number of people that came out to lend a hand, hold a sign, hold a gathering or cocktail party, or wrote emails — that's the part that struck me as surprising."

Gaumer said he was also surprised at the election outcome, because "you never really know. It was pleasing to know that 900 people will care enough to root for me every other Tuesday two hours at a time."

Now, said Gaumer, is time to "get to work."

His first order of business as a new selectman is to help the rest of the board "pull our act together," Gaumer said. "The town manager act elevates the board of selectmen into a role of governance — we set the objectives and policies by which we measure our success."

Gaumer explained that it's crucial to set objectives before taking action, so he hopes the reorganized board of selectmen will first set their objectives for the year before anything else.

"The new fiscal year is coming up; it's a good time to do it. You begin to define what is acceptable and what is not acceptable and the expectations of your management, and that's a big deal," Gaumer said. "If we identify what our objectives are, I'm optimistic we can work productively as a board."

Quigley said during the campaign that her first order of business was to support selectman Martha Gjesteby's call to the rest of the board to advertise for a new Town Manager. Cohasset has had an Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, since March 2012.

Quigley made good on her campaign promise by asking the selectmen to start the process on Tuesday night. Chairman Fred Koed agreed to put it on the next meeting's agenda, slated for May 28.

Quigley said that she has nothing against Milanoski but feels that he lacks the credentials to be a permanent town manager. "I don't feel he is qualified nor has shown himself to be a qualified town manager," she said, adding that, however, "It is not all his fault. The [previous board of] selectmen have allowed him to do that."

Her primary goal as a selectman is to bring civility back to town government, Quigley said. "I don't want to bring any more divisiveness or rancor to the town... I want it all to end. Let's just all turn our backs on that and move forward."

Jenkins, who was running for his second selectmen term, said that he is not embarrassed by his loss and plans to stay involved in town government.

"I'm definitely not disappearing. Anything I can do to help the town, I will be looking at it very seriously," said Jenkins. "I was the incumbent and I feel very strongly that all my votes were the right votes, and that's the way it goes...I just hope the town will continue on the same path we've been going to get the efficiency and be able to move ahead... It's complicated to say, but I had a very good three years and am happy with what was done in the past 14 months."

Jenkins also voiced his support for Gaumer: "I feel very strongly that Steve will give the ability to plan for the future."

Despite many similarities, and the fact that they were often spotted around town together, Gaumer and Jenkins did not run a joint campaign.

Gaumer said that during his decade-plus on the Capital Budget Committee, which he chaired for seven years, he has worked with every selectman candidate in the past. Jenkins was the one he was "aligned principally" with throughout the campaign, he said.

Gaumer added that he could see why some voters may have lumped the two together, since he and Jenkins "share a number of principles in common, whether it's maintaining solid stewardship of taxpayer's money or making certain you know where you're headed before starting out on a journey, setting objectives."

Gaumer joked that if people saw him and Jenkins holding their signs in the same spot, it was "because I got the bright idea to go there, and he'd already gotten there before me."

Bonetti attended Tuesday's selectmen meeting and congratulated both Gaumer and Quigley during the public comment period. He also applauded the board's unanimous votes for chair and vice chair, stating that he hoped that would set the tone for the rest of the year.

"Thank you for the good start you guys are getting," Bonetti said.

Bonetti added he would continue serving on the Community Preservation Committee and added, "I hope we can all work well together in the future, and I hope I can help in the process."

Recount?

When asked if there would be a recount since the results were so close between Quigley and Bonetti, the town clerk said it would be up to one of them to request it. St. Pierre added that the votes are tabulated by computer and are "quite accurate."

"Both Accu-Vote tabulators were tested with 50 voted ballots on Tuesday May 7 and the count was correct. Test Ballots and Accu-Vote tapes are available in the Clerk's office. This procedure is performed before every election," St. Pierre said.

The last time a recount was done was during the 2004 town election for the School Committee race. Adrienne MacCarthy finished only two votes behind Pat Martin. A recount was done and MacCarthy still lost by three votes.

"It did not change the results," said St. Pierre.

Prior to that, the last recount was in 1984, the selectman's race between Mary Jane McArthur and Doris Golden. McArthur won by just one vote, so a judge ordered a new election in June; McArthur won with a larger margin that time, with 1,623 votes to 867.

Despite missing a selectman seat by only four votes, Bonetti said that he had no plans to ask for a recount. The selectman candidate said he was comfortable with the election results.

"I have a great deal of trust with the voter registrars; I wouldn't be surprised if they counted twice when they saw it was that close," Bonetti said, adding that he thought a recount would look like "sour grapes."

"Honestly, right now I think the last thing we need is someone trying to do something divisive," said Bonetti.

The CPC chair said that he enjoyed running his first political campaign.

"I was glad to be part of it and very surprised I got as good a number of votes as I did. I feel flattered."

He also won't rule out running for selectman again in a future election.

"I already have signs," Bonetti said.

Quigley said that she appreciated that Bonetti did not ask for a recount, but that she would have understood if he did.

"I have respect for Russ Bonetti and I wouldn't expect anything less of him because I know his character," said Quigley, adding that she would not have requested a recount, either. "If the table had been turned, I would have been comfortable with the results."

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Young Athlete Program

The South Shore YMCA's Emilson Branch in Hanover will host the Special Olympics Young Athletes Program this August 7-9 and 14-16 for children ages 2 to 8.

Young Athletes is an early introduction to sports and to the world of Special Olympics for children with delayed development. The children enjoy games and activities that develop motor skills and hand-eye coordination.

Each Young Athletes session will focus on a new motor skill in a different area of the SSYMCA Emilson Branch. This Ability program is inclusion based and participants are encouraged to include their siblings in the program.

The South Shore YMCA is seeking Young Athletes participants, volunteers aged 14 and up and volunteer coaches for the inaugural session of this exciting new program.

If you would like to a participate or volunteer, please contact, Pamela Holland, Youth & Family Assistant Director, at pholland@ssymca.org.

Skippers need one for tourney return

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Two weeks ago, the Cohasset baseball team was reeling from inconsistent play fueled by mistakes.

Today, the Skippers are on the verge, and in fact may have already qualified to return to the MIAA Tournament.

Cohasset was under .500 and needed to win five of eight games to qualify.

The number was down to one as they prepared for yesterday's game against Monomoy.

In recent action, the Skippers got a great all-around performance by Shane Haggerty in a 7-1 win over Rockland on Monday.

Haggerty pitched a Haggerty threw a four-hitter with seven strikeouts and no earned runs, and laced a two-run triple to right-center in the second inning to help his cause.

Haggerty improved to 4-2 with a 1.58 ERA for the season with the win as the Skippers (9-7, 9-4 South Shore League) won on the road. Senior center fielder Christian Davis (2 for 3, 2 RBI, outfield assist) and jun-

Preparing for the best

Skippers scrape with Hingham, beat Hanover

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

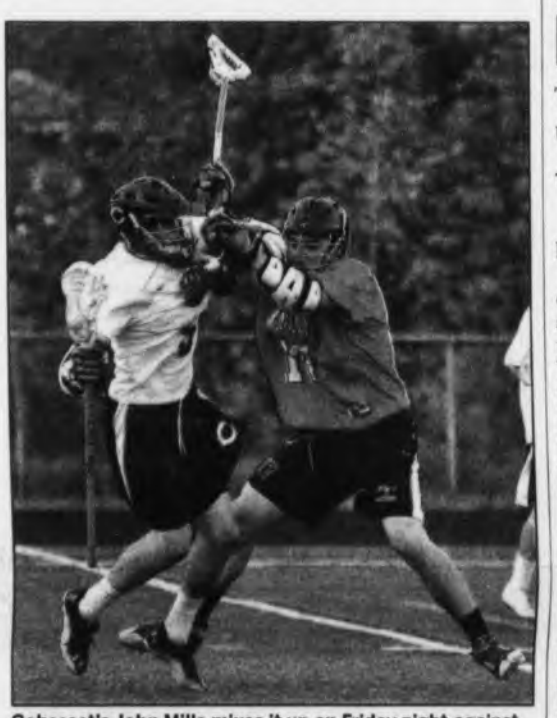
Cohasset boys lacrosse coach James Beaudoin may call it tough education on the field for his team after their 13-6 loss to Hingham Friday night.

The Skippers first-year coach is looking to get his team prepared for the Div. 3 Tournament and he feels that there are some games that will get his team better prepared.

"Hingham has played tough competition," said Beaudoin. "There last six opponents got them ready for this game. We have cut down on our schedule and have not played as tough of competition as they have. We will watch the film and learn from it. We still have BC High left and the Div. 3 tournament and Dover-Sherborn is the team to beat."

"Cohasset is a very good program," said Hingham coach John Todd. "Their coach (Beaudoin) has them playing very well. He has turned things around."

Cohasset was coming off powerful wins over Norwell, 16-4 and Archbishop Williams, 19-6.



The Skippers had a rematch with Hanover, which knocked them out of the Div. 3 quarterfinals last year.

Cohasset did well in that game, beating the Indians Cohasset 14- 7.

John Mills led the way with 5 goals and Will Golden added a goal and four assists as the Skippers improved to 9-3.

Mills is leading the South Shore League in goals and

This is a good problem to have.

Talented No. 2 singles player Emma Smith has been sidelined for the last four matches with a back injury. Yet the Cohasset High girls tennis team rolls on. On Wednesday the Skippers (14-0) handed defending Division 2 state champ Hopkinton its first loss of the season, 3-2.

Smith should return next week, giving Div. 3 Cohasset a dynamic 1-2 punch with unbeatable sophomore Emma Davis at the top of the ladder.

In the meantime, coach Gigi Meehan will continue to try out some different combinations, knowing that the Skippers have the depth to

Toughest tests

Girls battle Notre Dame Academy

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset girl's lacrosse team faced their toughest test of the season with two games in less than a week against nationally ranked Notre Dame Academy.

Having already qualified for the MIAA Tournament last week with a second-place finish in the South Shore League guaranteed, these games were an outstanding test and great preparation for the second season.

The first game started very well for the Skippers as they hung tough over the first 15 minutes and were within a goal of the Cougars at 3-2.

The last 35 minutes was pretty much all NDA as they took over and won 16-3.

The second NDA game on Monday was a very different story as Cohasset fought valiantly the entire game and the final score of 17-7 was not indicative of how close it was.

The Cougars started fast and jumped out to a 4-0 lead before Mackenzie Axelson

Mickey Barry added a double to the cause.

Before that, Cohasset beat Hull 7-4.

In the Hull win, last Thursday, Cavanaro had a solid effort, playing an excellent game at first base to go with two strong innings of relief.

Colin Gideon Murphy had yet another multi-hit game and both Shane Haggerty and Mickey Barry collected three RBI apiece.

After yesterday's Monomoy game, Cohasset will be at Mashpee and at Bridgewater, Tuesday and Wednesday.

total points.

They also have BC High, Hull (today), Westboro and Scituate left in the regular season.

Cohasset was able to put the pressure on Hingham Friday, but Harbormen goalie Tommy Bannon came up with crucial saves in the game.

They also learned that they can't afford to let a good team get too many extra opportunities.

"We will learn from our mistakes in this game," said Beaudoin after his team's loss to the Harbormen. "Hingham does simple things, but they do it very well. They do a great job of protecting the ball and we were dropping the ball. We got a lot of penalties. We had too many penalties and Hingham capitalizes on everything.

"I was told that Tommy Bannon is a good goalie. You can tell he is a lacrosse goalie. He is not flopping all over the place. He does such a good job in goal."

Bannon stopped a couple of point-blank shots in the early going and his teammates helped him out by scoring the first three goals of the game. Hingham would never relinquish the lead and built the lead to seven, 12-5 after three periods and coast to the win.

The Skippers offense in the game was led by Nick Tangherlini who scored three times. John Mills added two goals and an assist while Colin Whelan had a goal in the game.

Mills in the 16-4 win over Norwell had four goals and assisted on three others in the win. Tangherlini added two goals and four assists.

Will Golden and Whelan had two goals each in the game for the Skippers.

Mills and Golden both scored five goals each in the Williams victory. Whelan also had five points in the game as he scored two goals and set up three others.

Tangherlini had three goals and Drew Nahill had a goal and three assists for Cohasset in the Williams win.

forced a turnover along the sidelines and then drove hard to the cage to blast the first score home.

The Cougars scored another three straight to take a 7-1 lead before the Skippers exploded for three of their own to cut the deficit to 7-4.

The first of the three goals was on a nice feed from Corey Golden to Madigan O'Neill who flicked the ball past the NDA keeper.

Hope Kissick followed that with two goals of her own on aggressive moves to the net. Cohasset just missed on two more opportunities and the Cougars closed the half with two quick goals to make it 9-4 at the break.

NDA extended their lead to 12-4 and it was not looking good for the Skippers until Kristin Alexander scored twice in a row on excellent rushes to the cage. Kissick added another to finish her hat trick and make it three in a row for Cohasset, putting NDA on the ropes. The Cougars responded and put the game away over the final eight minutes.

Goalie Kyle Coffman kept the Skippers in the game all day long with 11 saves, several coming on the always challenging free position shot.

In between the two NDA games, Cohasset cruised to an easy 18-6 win over Pembroke.

The scoring was led by the first varsity goal and hat trick from Kyle Burke, who switched from defense to offense and scored all three of her goals in the first half. Hope Kissick, Madigan O'Neill and Maddie Curley also had hat tricks on the day followed by two goal efforts from Kathryn Dunn and Corey Golden.

Caelin McDonald and Kristin Alexander each had one goal and the defense was led by Ally Leahy (3 caused turnovers) and Molly Fitzgerald (4 caused turnovers).

Alexander was honored by the South Shore League with a Scholar-Athlete award presented on Wednesday night.

The girls were at Weston (5-6), Thursday, and have games at Hanover (8-5) Tuesday and at home Wednesday against Martha's Vineyard (3-10).

win with a variety of lineups.

"Oh my gosh, it's an abundance of wealth," said Meehan, in her 22nd season. "Emma (Smith) should slide right back in because her fitness is so good. She's played so much tennis that a couple of weeks off might be a good thing for her."

Until Smith is ready, Meehan noted, "It's nice to see other kids be able to slip in."

The highlight of the Hopkinton conquest came at No. 1 doubles, where senior captains Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford rallied, 7-6 (7-3), 3-6, 6-4. The pair trailed 4-1 in the first and third sets. On Tuesday they fended off two match points in rallying for the decisive win in a 3-2 defeat of Notre Dame Academy.

"On any given day they can beat anyone," Meehan said.

Meehan had lots of praise for her doubles team.

"Meredith had been out two weeks sick, but mentally she was there 100 percent," she said. "She and Kate want to have the last point depend on them. The way they came back was unbelievable.

Cohasset also won at No. 2 doubles – a 6-2, 6-4 victory by freshman Caroline Van Etten and junior Caroline Evans.

Davis, the defending state individual champ, posted a 6-1, 6-1 win at No. 1 singles. She has yet to lose a high school match.

Cohasset lost the other singles positions, although No. 2 Sara Corry (6-3, 6-4) and No. 3 Emily Livingstone (6-1, 6-1) played well. Corry, a senior captain, dropped ice hockey this year to concentrate on tennis, and Meehan seems impressed.

Cohasset's Sophie Wolfe plays in an early season match. Depth has been a big part of Cohasset's run of excellence this season.

"She's been playing lights-out," the coach said. "She's been a very good utility player for the last two years, but I never thought she could step up and play at this level."

Corry has been a bit of a revelation this season.

"Sara has really stepped up this season," Meehan said. "We had envisioned her in a doubles role, but she's had to step up. She's been a pleasant surprise.

Cohasset's Molli Brown has been a part of Cohasset's 14-0 start to the season. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Davis, meanwhile, played in the opening weekend of the MIAA Individual Tournament and fared well, advancing to the yet-to-be-played Round of 16.

She was the No. 1 seeded player in the tournament.

Meehan credited her players for giving their best and playing some great tennis in the Individual Tournament.

In other recent action, Cohasset found itself in a pitched battle against traditional rival, Norwell.

That was the day after Davis was injured playing out a heated battle against Carver.

"That was a tough match for us," Meehan said. "It came down to No. 2 doubles. With Emma out, we didn't have a clear cut lineup. We went in knowing Emily Livingstone had been tearing it up in practice and in challenge. She played No. 2 and lost a close match at No. 2. Caroline Evans won at No. 3.

"Kate played with freshman Caroline Van Etten. There was a lot of pressure for a freshman. They were down, but once it was relayed that they were the deciding point, they fired off nine straight games to win the match. Caroline hadn't had a lot of chances to play before, but when she had a chance to play for real, she showed what she's made of."

In another matchup, Van Etten played doubles with Evans against Hopkinton.

"Caroline and Caroline are prefect complements for each other," Meehan said. "Caroline Evans has taken on a leadership role in that pairing. Caroline Van Etten has good speed and good consistency."

Meehan wasn't sure what might happen in the Hopkinton match without Smith.

"We knew we'd be competitive," Meehan said. "But we didn't anticipate we'd beat them. It came down to Kate and Meredith the second day in a row. When we told then they had to win, they changed. When they went down they stopped playing their game. We told them there was nothing to lose. Don't play afraid. They chipped away and battled back playing crisp, solid doubles."

This is a team that is very deep.

When the opportunities arrive, players like Molli Browne and Sophie Wolfe get into matches and are given chances to build and learn from the best.

"Molli is consistently our toughest worker," Meehan said. "She's becoming a tennis player. Sophie has lots of enthusiasm. She works hard."

A few other players who have come up big for Cohasset include Gabrielle LeMoine and Giselle Hart.

Cohasset is in action at home on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday next week as they continue to prepare for a deep run in the MIAA Tournament.

BAY STATE GAMES

Registration open for the 2013 Bay State Summer Games

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation is pleased to announce that registration for the 2013 Bay State Summer Games is now open. The annual Olympic-style amateur sports festival features 26 sports for athletes of all ages and abilities.

The Bay State Games involves participants from over 300 communities in Massachusetts and over 7,000 participants annually. The Games are now in its 32nd year and over the past three decades more than a quarter of a million participants have competed. Bay State Games offers the opportunity for athletes to showcase their talents whether they are beginners or future Olympians.

The 2013 Bay State Summer Games is scheduled for Friday, July 5 through Sunday, July 21 with regional qualifiers and tryouts held through the month of June. The competitions are held in top-level sporting facilities such as Bentley University, Harvard University, Regis College, Wentworth Institute of Technology, Worcester State, University of Massachusetts Boston and the New England Sports Center.

Competitions are offered in archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, juniors basketball, baton twirling, diving, fencing, field hockey, 6v6 field hockey, ice hockey, judo, lacrosse, pistol shooting, rifle shooting, rugby, soccer, 7v7 soccer, softball, swimming, synchronized swimming, table tennis, track and field, trap shooting, volleyball, weightlifting and wrestling. Masters divisions are also available in swimming and track and field.

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation also offers the opportunity for student athletes to receive a college scholarship. The Future Leaders Scholarship awards six $2,000 college scholarships to Bay State Games participants who demonstrate leadership through community service, academic excellence and athletic achievement. High school students, who are Massachusetts residents in the 11th grade during the 2012-13 academic year, register and agree to participate in the 2013 Bay State Games, which they qualify for, are eligible for the Future Leaders Scholarship. The registration deadline for the scholarship is Wednesday, June 12.

For sport, registration and scholarship information please visit BayStateGames.org, call the Games' office at (781) 932-6555 or e-mail info@baystategames.org.

ROWING

Row this summer with Cohasset Maritime Institute

Want to spend some time on the water this summer? Registration is now open for youth rowing at Cohasset Maritime Institute.

Youth entering 8th grade and higher, experienced and beginners, are welcome to row with CMI.

Most kids row for twice a week, for the 8-week season (June 24-August 15). The 8-week season runs June 24-August 15. The first week will be modified hours because Cohasset and Scituate schools are still in session.

Experienced rowers will row Mondays and Wednesdays afternoons.

New rowers will row Tuesdays and Thursdays with afternoon and morning sessions offered.

If you aren't sure about rowing, have plans to be away for much of the summer and/or considering rowing as a fall sport, you can try a 4-day program. These Try It weeks will be offered three times this summer: June 17-20 at 3-5pm, July 15-18 and August 12-15 at 845-1045.

Spots are limited so act now.

Plant something!

Staff photos by Robin Chan

Don't Just Stand There – Plant Something, a new campaign to help everyone enjoy the benefits of planting, took place May 15. The campaign is an initiative of Plant Something MA, a joint program of the Massachusetts Flower Growers Association and the Massachusetts Nursery and Landscape Association. Plant Something MA seeks to get more people to enjoy gardening and support their local, independent nurseries, garden centers, landscapers and growers.

Local businesses contributed to public plantings in many local towns. Kennedy's Country Gardens led the effort in Scituate, Cohasset and Marshfield. Compost was donated by LionsHead Organics of Cohasset.

In Cohasset, Chris Kennedy, owner of Kennedy's Country Gardens, and horticulturist Paul Marini, planted hydrangeas, boxwood and flowering annuals in front of Deer Hill School.

Kennedy is a member of the Plant Something task force, and encourages everyone who has the gardening bug to visit the website: PlantSomehtingMA.org.

Skipper Café

Cohasset High School seniors kept voters and other attendees fed and caffeinated during the Monday, April 22 Annual Town Meeting. The Skipper Café, set up outside the gymnasium where votes took place, provided dinner, beverages, desserts, and a comfortable, bistro-style setting for residents to gather.

The café was a fundraiser for the 2013 prom Red Carpet community gather on the Town Common and the after-prom party. These events were established 15 years ago by parents who wanted to give students a safe and fun place to gather after prom.

Prom will be held on Friday, May 24, 2013. The community is invited to share the excitement on the common, where seniors and their dates walk the red carpet, Hollywood-style, before departing to the prom at Boston's Venezia restaurant.

Baked goods were sold at the Skipper Café to raise money for the Senior Prom.

Students served a light dinner menu, coffee and snacks at the Skipper Café outside of Town Meeting, which was held in the CHS gymnasium.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week

Always use extra caution in active school zones. Speed limits drop to 20 MPH and it's strictly enforced for a reason. Some states actually prohibit any cell phone use in active school zones. Although Massachusetts does not have such a law, all motorists should refrain from cell phone use in school zones to focus on the children's safety. COURTESY PHOTO

Fuzzy is shy and beautiful

PAULA J. FATERSIK

A small Russian Blue mix, Fuzzy has thick grey/lavender fur and golden eyes, and the cutest slate gray nose and distinctive cheeks that sit above a sweet grin.
COURTESY PHOTO

Just when you think your heart cannot break again, it does. But hearts mend, and this week's feature, FuzzyBear, is one special little girl who after going through the best of times and the toughest, is ready to love again too. She was cared for so dearly, and after losing her home, has been taken in and loved in foster care for the past month. It is Fuzzy's time to shine now and get back to a gentle, loving and peaceful forever home. One where she can amuse and entertain, cozy up and enjoy love, affection and care.

If you know the Russian Blue breed, you will already have a good idea of Fuzzy's delightful characteristics as well as her finicky nature. She is a princess and has earned her place. Rolling on a sun splashed carpet, surrounded by her favorite toys, is a morning sight that welcomes the day. Of course, she enjoys snuggling at night and will join you for some slumber time too. And, should you enjoy some couch time, your lap will be her "place". All of this comes once Fuzzy has settled in and bonded. She is a shy girl and needs to take each day warming up to her new life. Giving her that time equals one fabulous reward.

Playtime is a lot of fun for Fuzzy as she bats her ping-pong ball or soft toys around the room. She is very independent at times and will initiate her own games before you join in. But you will also hear her distinctive feline cry when she decides to bring you a stuffed mouse to show just how smart she is. This is her gift to you. Her vocal range is unique and adorable.

Rolling over in front of you and following you from room to room is another wonderful part of her personality.

A small Russian Blue mix, Fuzzy has thick grey/lavender fur and golden eyes, and the cutest slate gray nose and distinctive cheeks that sit above a sweet grin. Her expectant gaze as you find her waking from sleep is totally endearing. As an adult cat, she has a great combination of peaceful reserve, combined with playful frolic time. Did we mention how beautiful she is? Well, she hears that every day and deserves all the attention and love she receives.

Rolling over in front of you and following you from room to room is another wonderful part of her personality. Have a little computer work to do? Well, Fuzzy can help out there too with a stroll across the desk and keyboard. This is a kitty who wants to be with you, and love you. Blues are this kind of cat and her best placement will be a quiet and gentle home where she can connect, relax and enjoy all of her favorite activities with an owner who has the time to spend giving her a warm and wonderful life filled with attention. And that lucky person will receive just as much in return. It is quite a privilege to tell Fuzzy's story this week, as she has been fostered by this writer and it has been a joy.

Please call Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902 for more information and to arrange and appointment to see FuzzyBear. You may leave a message at 781-925-3121 and also, view all of our wonderful available pets at: HSAR.org. There are many eager and loving felines featured on Petfinder who are sure to make your house a home. They are just waiting for that chance.

COHASSET RECREATION

Red Sox tickets with transportation to the game

What better way to see a Red Sox Game than a $38 ticket price that includes a round trip ride to Fenway? No worries about traffic or parking, let the bus driver focus on driving while you talk with friends and maybe make some new ones. It's the perfect way to gather a large group and enjoy a summer night at the Park.

Cohasset Recreation has tickets available for the following Red Sox games which are all on a Tuesday night, bus leaves from Cohasset High School for all games at 7:10 and returns to Cohasset at 11 p.m. There are anywhere from 55-100 tickets available for each game so it's the perfect time to get a large group of people together for a friend's night out.

"This is a great opportunity for a larger group to sit with each other, as we can keep families and friends together in several rows, directly above and below one another, instead of being seated in one long row, in which they lose the ability to interact and truly enjoy the game as a group," says Cohasset Recreation Director, Ted Carroll. "It's a great time for family reunions, team get togethers or just a large group of friends who all want to enjoy a summer night out at Fenway."

Not in its 5th season of bringing Cohasset and Friends to the Red Sox, this season's tickets includes two National League games. Fans might be especially interested in seeing Jonathon Papelbon and his Philadelphia Phillies return to Boston for this month's game on the 28th.

- Red Sox vs. Philadelphia Phillies (May 28)
- Red Sox vs. Colorado Rockies (June 25)
- Red Sox vs. Tampa Bay Rays (July 23)
- Red Sox vs. Baltimore Orioles (August 27)

Children under 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Register On-line at cohassetrec.com or call the office at 781-383-4109 if you have any questions.

BRIEFLY

Plant sale is May 18

Plant lovers take notice. The hustle and bustle at the parking lot of the Historical Society will peak between the hours of 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on May 18, when the Community Garden Club of Cohasset holds its plant sale. In case of rain, the sale will take place inside the Pratt Building, 106 South Main Street.

The perennials and shrubs on offer are from the gardens of club members and friends, which make the plants tough, climate hardy and suitable for our soil, wind, and temperature extremes. In addition, there will be a variety of annuals, herbs, and vegetable seedlings that club members have expertly started from seed. Most of these are organic!

Gardening expertise is not necessary. Experienced garden club members will be on hand to help with selection, to answer questions, and give advice.

The proceeds from the plant sale will help support the many community projects to which the club is committed. These include maintaining the grounds at the Light keeper's Cottage, at Constitution Park and at the Pratt Building. In addition, the club provides monthly garden therapy at Golden Living Senior Residence, a monthly junior gardener program for students at Deer Hill School, and scholarships for deserving high school seniors.

Plant sale at Holly Hill Farm

The Holly Hill Farm Plant Sale will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., on May 18, 19, 25 and 26. There will be organic plant starts for the home garden, with reliable favorites and some new varieties for home vegetable gardens. Organic soil amendments from Vermont Compost will be available for purchase as well as organic fertilizers and pest controls. The farm stand will be open with produce and eggs for sale.

Members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center based at the farm, will have a special opportunity to shop from 4 to 7 p.m., on Friday, May 17, ahead of the general public. Become a new member that afternoon and see what all the excitement is about. In addition to early admission to the plant sale, Friends of Holly Hill Farm members receive other benefits including discounts on all programs and workshops at the farm, free admission to the members' annual spring and fall events, Spreading Roots, the quarterly newsletter, a copy of the Annual Report, and the knowledge that membership supports an organization dedicated to using an organic farm to teach the value of sustainable agriculture, preservation of historic buildings, woodlands and open spaces.

Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool is 'Boston Strong'

Sweet Relief, an Early Education Learning Center in Cohasset, has been an active philanthropic participant on the South Shore for more than 10 years. Recently, the call to action reached far beyond their school town borders, all the way to the Boston Marathon finish line on Boylston Street.

To help the people affected most by the tragedy that occurred at the Boston Marathon, Sweet Relief director, Lyn Congdon Previte, has partnered with Therapy Dogs International to help bring comfort, love and calm to a city shaken by grief and sadness. Previte's dog, and much-loved schoolroom companion, Bear, is a TDI trained therapy dog and has been a valuable presence at the finish line memorial site. TDI trained dogs are specifically trained to handle crowded, noisy environments and to remain calm in that environment, despite the stimulation and chaos. Bear, because of his specific additional training to respond to the needs of children in a classroom environment, is also trained to respond to human emotional need.

"It is amazing to witness the lives that Bear has touched throughout his work at the memorial site."
Lyn Congdon Previte

A nonprofit organization founded in 1976, TDI has more than 24,000 dog handler teams registered in the United States. There are more than 100 teams (dog plus handler) within 20 miles of the City of Boston. Bear has been called to work at the Marathon memorial site for many hours, reaching more than 1,000 men, women and children, all there to honor, remember and grieve the loss and sadness felt by the recent tragic events.

"It is amazing to witness the lives that Bear has touched throughout his work at the memorial site. I will never forget his interaction with a young lady, dressed in a Marathon jacket, kneeling down next to him, enveloped in his softness and sweet, caring eyes – finally finding a peaceful moment to lean her head on his soft shoulders, to sob and let go of the emotion inside of her," said Previte, recalling a moving moment from Bear's work on Saturday, April 20. "It is extremely difficult, as a handler, not to be affected by the intense outpouring of emotion. We want to step in and offer our own comfort and assistance yet, we know our therapy dog is there to do what he is trained to do – we are just there to bring this special connection where it is needed," said Previte.

Although, TDI dogs are typically not supposed to work consecutive days in a row, Bear has been a fixture at the memorial site and has been able to handle the repeated needs of the community. Working alongside many children on a daily basis, combined with Previte's diligence in providing water breaks, walks and moments of peace during his hours on duty, Bear is able to handle his call to service in Boston – providing love, compassion and sweet relief.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 27, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

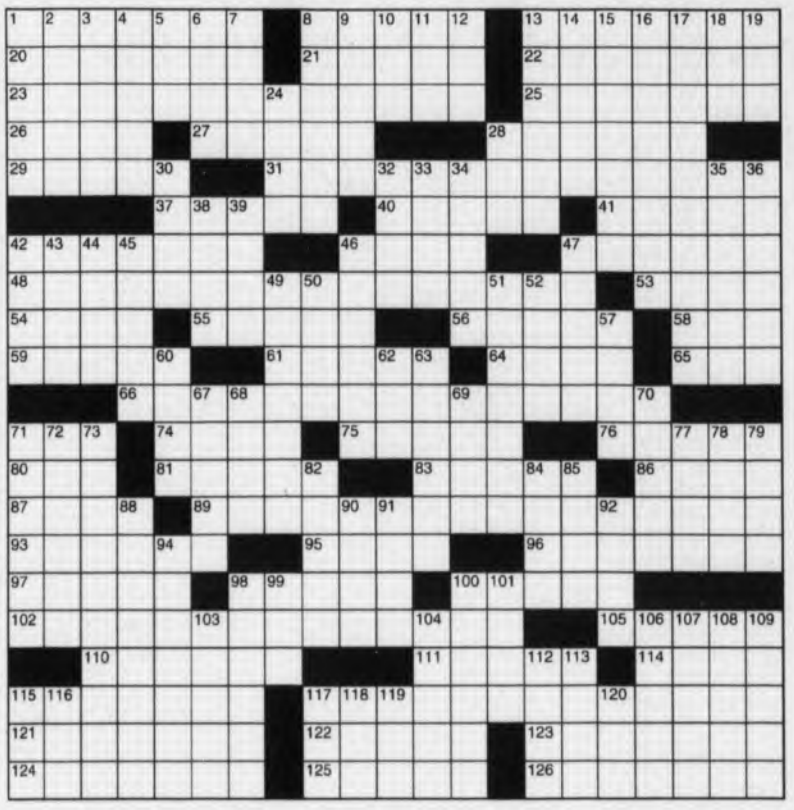
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Planning for your family's Care and Safety is a top priority. Ours Too.

Introducing Compass Aging Services.
A Free Senior-Life Planning Resource for Families

Compass Aging is an innovative new online service that helps families meet the challenges of caring for an aging relative. It's where you'll find expert guidance, helpful tools, and practical solutions to all of your senior care needs.

- Build personalized care plans that address their conditions and your concerns
- Interact with experts in senior care to help guide and inform your decisions
- Search senior living communities and select one they'd be happy to call home
- Find qualified and top rated local senior care providers
- Enlist and coordinate the help of family and friends
- Assess their ability to live independently and safely at home

For the first time, it's now all available on a single, complete website - localized in a way that provides help when and where you need it most – close to home.

Come visit, register, and experience the benefits of senior-life planning. We'll help you and your family get a plan underway, care under control, and life on track.

DeLuca seeks reinstatement

Former police chief says his removal is void

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

If former police chief Mark DeLuca and former town manager Michael Coughlin have their way – then they would both be getting their old jobs back.

In the next chapter of a continuing saga in Cohasset government, DeLuca has sent a letter through his attorney to the Board of Selectmen chair, Fred Koed, demanding reinstatement and threatening redress in court if the town does not take action.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski suspended DeLuca in May 2012 following several allegations made by Cohasset's police union. DeLuca was placed on paid administrative leave; his original employment contract was not renewed when it expired on January 24, 2013. When DeLuca's contract with the town ran out, he had been receiving his yearly salary of $136,000 along with compensation for 25 unused vacation days.

DeLuca was hired as Cohasset's police chief in January 2010 for a three-year term set to expire Jan. 24, 2013. Prior to his suspension, DeLuca and the town had agreed to extend his employment to August 1, 2014 in an agreement signed by former town manager Michael Coughlin on Feb. 7, 2012. Coughlin, who is suing the town for reinstatement, was removed without cause in March 2012 by the then Board of Selectmen.

Kate Bosworth donates new red carpet for pre-prom gala

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Tonight, Cohasset High School promgoers will walk the red carpet in style. And this year's pre-prom gala red carpet was donated by a CHS alum who also happens to be a Hollywood star.

Actress Kate Bosworth, who graduated from CHS in 2001, donated a new 50-foot red carpet for this year's prom, contributing to a time-honored tradition in Cohasset.

Bosworth issued a statement for Cohasset students. "Make this memory great. Make every moment count. The more great memories you stack next to one another, one day you will turn around to find a successful life. Today, it is my absolute pleasure to celebrate with all of you."

Thanks to Bosworth, CHS students get to "walk down their first red carpet," said Diane Herth, Cohasset SEPAC president who is also on the prom planning committee.

CHS students have been walking the red carpet and posing for photos as a pre-prom activity since 1990. Adoring fans, from proud parents and grandparents to awestruck younger siblings and friends, gather on the town common to watch the promenade each year, cheering on the "stars" of the community.

If you come to the common this evening, you'll see "dozens of little kids sitting on the ground wide-eyed and adoring, looking at all the beautiful girls and handsome boys walking in front of them," Herth described the scene. "They don't know any of these seniors, but they're there looking up to who they will be at some point in their lives."

Animal Control gets calls on loose bird

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset has a new resident — but he may have already flown the coop.

This week, Animal Control received several concerned calls over a peacock – technically a "blue peafowl" – that was seen strutting around town, from Beechwood and Virginia Lane to Pond Street, and even near Shaw's along Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

The appearance of the exotic-looking bird took many Cohasseters by surprised.

"I was stunned," said Susan Chase of Holly Lane. "It's one of those things that you look at and think, 'That shouldn't be here.'"

John Chapman of Virginia Lane said that he first saw the peacock on Friday afternoon, "peering through my office window from the deck. He hung around all day Saturday then wandered off with a roaming turkey on Sunday afternoon in the direction of Woodland. We haven't seen him since."

Susan Chase said that she had a run-in with the bird in her driveway on Saturday.

Ed Graham

Name: Colonel (Retired) Edward S. Graham, Jr.

Occupation: Retired (34 years) and now president of the Association of United States Army Mass Bay Chapter #1401.

Best day of your life: The day of my wedding (45 years ago).

Best vacation: Positano, Italy on the Amalfi Coast.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite junk food or meal: A bacon cheeseburger or baked stuffed lobster.

Best book: "Marshall: Hero for Our Times," by Leonard Mosley.

Best movie: "Sound of Music."

Best TV show: "NCIS."

Best music, group or artist: Barbra Streisand and Andrea Bocelli.

Pet peeve: Men wearing a hat when eating in a restaurant.

Most embarrassing moment and dumbest thing I've ever done: While sponsoring a new colonel in my home in Naples, Italy, I attempted to demonstrate how to relight the oven. I proceeded to blow myself across the room, requiring him to drive me to the local hospital.

Goal: To continue to be a volunteer in support of veterans of all services who reside in our local communities.

Person you would most like to meet: Pope Francis.

Biggest worry: What the future holds for my four grandsons.

Best part of Cohasset: Its coastline and the people.

Brush chipping

Residential Brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area on Saturday, June 1 from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

No trees over 10 inches in diameter. No stumps, firewood, briars or weeds. No contractors.

Paint collection

Paint collection days will be held at the Recycling Transfer Facility on the last Saturday of the month from May through October from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Residents are encouraged to dry out latex paint using cat litter, sand or paint hardener, which can then be thrown out with regular trash. Empty cans may then be thrown into the tin can container.

Lobster rolls at Arts Festival

Lobster rolls at the South Shore Arts Festival are a Cohasset tradition – Father's Day weekend, Friday, June 14, through Sunday, June 16. Lobster rolls at First Parish, strawberry shortcake at the Second Congregational Church, and a showcase of crafts and fine artists from New England and beyond make the Festival weekend a terrific family event.

Order lobster rolls early and consider holding a family picnic or treating office staff to a "Thank You Lunch." First Parish, adjacent to Cohasset Common, has held its price for the all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips at $13 for several years.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is highly recommended, and walk-ins will be welcome as long as supplies last. They have sold out on Saturday three years in a row. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of 1,200 lobster rolls in the past few years.

Order lobster rolls early and consider holding a family picnic or treating office staff to a "Thank You Lunch."

There are several ways to place a lobster order: Pick up an order form at the Parish House, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday; call Diana Kornet at 781-383-6576; or email firstlobster@verizon.net. Mail checks to First Parish Cohasset, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Preorders will be accepted until 6 p.m., on Wednesday, June 12.

Hours for order pickup at the Parish House, 23 N. Main Street, Cohasset: Friday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

COMING SOON

Farmers' Market back in June

The Cohasset Farmers' Market opens for its 22nd season on June 20 and will continue every Thursday from 2-6 p.m. through October 17 on Cohasset Common.

POLICE BEAT

Elderly lady victim of grandparent's scam

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

An 89-year-old Cohasset grandmother is the latest local victim of the infamous "grandparents' scam," police said. A man claiming to be her grandson, who explained he had been in a drunken-driving car crash in Florida and needed bail money, contacted the woman on Friday. He pleaded with her to keep the incident a secret and explained that an attorney would be calling her to explain the details. The person claiming to be the attorney told her she needed to wire $1476 for bail to a number in the Dominican Republic that had a cheaper bail rate. The woman's daughter drove her to Shaw's where she sent a money gram to the number. The woman also paid a transaction fee.

A short time later, the woman then received another call from the person claiming to be the attorney saying another $1400 was needed because the judge had raised the bail for her grandson. After sending another money gram, the woman's daughter became suspicious and decided to call the grandson who was fine and was in New York where he is employed. The woman was able to cancel the second transaction and called police. While the officer was at her house, the person posing as the attorney called to say there had been a problem with the second transaction. The woman gave the officer the phone and the caller hung up.

Cohasset detectives are investigating. The victim was told to monitor her financials and to notify police of any further phone calls or suspicious activity. Acting Chief William Quigley said police would be stopping by local supermarkets where money grams can be obtained to alert the clerks to potential scams.

Dog bite

Police responded to a report of a dog bite in the Avalon complex on Monday (May 13) around 5 p.m. Police said a 27-year-old Avalon man was walking his 4-year-old greyhound-shepherd mix with his girlfriend who asked the neighbor's 10-year-old daughter if she wanted to pet the dog. The girl leaned over from her scooter and the dog bit the girl on her right wrist creating two puncture wounds, police said. The ambulance responded but the parents decided to transport the girl on their own.

The owner said the dog has no history of being aggressive, was licensed and up-to-date on its shots. The girl was treated and released from the hospital after getting two stitches on her wrist. The incident was forwarded to the animal control officer for investigation.

Machete

An electrical worker on Doane Street found a machete on the side of the road on Tuesday morning (May 14) around 6:45 a.m. The item is at the police station. Police think it may have dropped off a landscaping truck as it is used for beating back brush.

Checks out

Police interviewed a 67-year-old Hull man after the principal of the Osgood School provided the plate number of the 2008 Toyota Camry he was driving after seeing the man in the car look as though he was staring at children at the playground at the school on Tuesday (May 14) around noontime.

Police located the man, who said he had picked up his grandson from the preschool at the community center, had 45 minutes before meeting his daughter so his grandson was showing him where he would be attending school. Apparently the boy was too small to be spotted in the car, police said.

Rear-end MVAs

• At 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday (May 14), police responded to a two-car accident near the Deer Hill School off Sohier Street. A 2002 Toyota, operated by an 18-year-old Cohasset woman, was turning right from Sohier Street into the rear parking lot of the school when the Toyota was hit from behind by a 2000 BMW, operated by a 20-year-old Cohasset man. Both vehicles had been traveling in the same direction on Sohier Street. There were no injuries, neither car was towed and no one was cited, police said.

• At 10:09 a.m. on Thursday (May 16), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near the Gulf Station. Police said a 2011 Chevrolet Traverse, operated by a 52-year-old Hanover woman, was headed north on 3A and had stopped at the red light at Beechwood when hit from behind by a 2005 Ford Explorer, operated by a 22-year-old Duxbury man. Police said the operator of the Explorer told them he had not been paying attention and was looking at the Gulf Station. When he looked up, the Traverse was right in front of him. The Explorer was towed. There were no injuries but the Duxbury man was cited for following too closely.

• At 12:53 p.m. on Saturday (May 18), police responded to a two-car accident in the Avalon complex driveway. Police said a 2008 BMW, operated by a 52-year-old Cohasset man, was exiting Avalon when he pulled out too far into King Street. He put the car into reverse and hit a 2007 Honda, operated by a 57-year-old Cohasset woman that was waiting behind the BMW.

The Honda had to be towed. There were no injuries and no citations because the driveway is a private way, police said.

• At 6:13 p.m. on Saturday (May 18), police responded to a two-car accident on King Street by Sohier Street. Police said a 2010 Honda, operated by a 56-year-old Cohasset man, was stopped in traffic when hit from behind by a 2004 Chevrolet, operated by a 40-year-old Cohasset man who had not been paying attention. There were no injuries; the Chevrolet was towed and the operator of the Chevy was cited for following too closely.

Dogs in car

Police responded to complaint from a concerned citizen last week about dogs being left inside a motor vehicle. In this case it was not that warm out and the dogs were fine. However, police remind dog owners that as summer approaches, it does not take long for a dog to become overheated in a hot car.

Parking issue

Police received several complaints again over the past week about vehicles being parked on the sidewalk outside a business at West Corner (corner of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street). When vehicles are on the sidewalk, pedestrians are forced into the street. The police safety officer and the DPW are working on coming up with a solution, police said.

Diamond missing

A Cohasset woman reported to police last Friday (May 17) that the diamond in her diamond ring was missing and was lost near South Main Street and Westgate Lane. The missing stone is 1-1/2 carats, police said.

Missing jewelry

At 9:36 am. on Friday (May 17), police went to a home on Beach Street to investigate a report of missing jewelry. The resident said she had noticed three pieces of jewelry missing that morning: a diamond flower pendant on a gold chain (valued at $1200); a 16-inch gold rope with pearls interspersed (valued at $500); and a pair of gold hoop earrings (valued at $400). Police are investigating the possibility that a new house cleaner may be involved.

Summonsed

A 32-year-old Cohasset woman is being summonsed to court on the charge of shoplifting by asportation following an investigation last Saturday. Police went to Stop & Shop on a report of a past shoplifting where the manager explained he had noticed a female shopper that he had caught allegedly shoplifting at the Braintree Stop & Shop two months ago. He watched the woman exit the Cohasset store without paying for her cart that had 34 items valued at $163.40. He stopped her outside and she gave him her driver's license and plate number. He recovered the items and gave her a verbal no trespass order and let her leave. Police went to the woman's home with a no trespass order and will summons her to court on the alleged shoplifting offense.

U-Turn

On Thursday (May 16) at about 9:30 a.m., police observed a vehicle make an illegal U-turn on South Main Street to pull into a parking space. The operator, a 33-year-old Rockland woman, did not have a valid license. She was issued a citation for an improper U turn and will be summonsed to court for operating without a license. Her car was towed.

CERT appoints manager, seeks volunteers

Cohasset's Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) is seeking volunteers to train to be emergency responders. The CERT also recently appointed a new Team Manager.

Cohasset Director of Emergency Management, Glenn A. Pratt, has selected Rich Hynes to be the new CERT Team Manager. Hynes is a retired electrical engineer with over 40 years in the computer manufacturing industry. He is a Vietnam combat veteran and currently serves as the Commander of the Ralph Peroncello VFW Post in Cohasset.

In his role as CERT Team manager, Hynes will be responsible for the development, training, and deployment of Cohasset's CERT Team. Hynes has also been certified by FEMA as a CERT Training Instructor.

Pratt said of appointing Hynes, "A lot of towns have a CERT manager. We think we're at that point and we believe Rich will do a fine job."

CERT is composed of local volunteers who are trained in disaster response and equipped to assist during emergencies in coordination with the Emergency Management Team. Currently, Cohasset Emergency Management has 18 CERT Team members and Hynes will lead the effort to train another group of volunteers this summer.

The Town of Cohasset Emergency Management is continuing to increase the number of trained volunteers under the CERT Program, to help respond during emergencies.

Emergency service personnel are the best trained and equipped to handle emergencies. However, following a catastrophic disaster, the community may be on its own for a period of time because of the size of the area affected, lost communications, and/or un-passable roads. To address this we are currently seeking volunteers in Cohasset, MA, to become a CERT volunteer.

Those interested in joining CERT should "be in touch with us if they want to volunteer; we're going to start another training class this summer," said Pratt.

He explained CERT training is designed to prepare us to help ourselves, families, and neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. Because emergency services personnel will not be able to help everyone immediately, CERT trained volunteers make a difference by using skills learned to save lives and protect property.

CERT training covers basic skills that are important to know when emergency services are not available. With training and practice and by working as a team, we will be able to do the greatest good for the greatest number after a disaster.

CERT training will begin this summer. The training will be nine weeks, one night per week, day and time to be determined. For more information or to volunteer email Glenn Pratt gpratt@suburbanresources.com.

Relay moves from Cohasset to Hingham

By Erin Dale

The American Cancer Society's (ACS) Relay For Life for Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate will be held this year on Friday, June 28 through Saturday, June 29 at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. This is a change from being held at Cohasset High School for many years.

ACS staff partner Rebecca Ybarra said that the move to Hingham was an executive decision of the society's to get even more people involved in the event.

"We're excited" about the move, said Ybarra. "It's going to be a really fun family event."

This year also marks the 100th anniversary of the ACS, which is officially May 22, 2013. "Happy Birthday" will be the theme of the night during the June 28-29 event. The campsite will be decorated with the theme, which will include noisemakers, said Ybarra.

"It's a great opportunity to get our mission out as well, and a great way to show all the strides we've made over the past 100 years and how we can keep going," Ybarra said.

Relay For Life events unite communities with the ACS by supporting its efforts to create a world with less cancer and more birthdays. The ACS is leading the way to transform cancer from deadly to treatable and from treatable to preventable.

While the relay is usually held on a school track, Ybarra said that Wompatuck will be an ideal location for the overnight camping.

"Wompatuck is a central location, right near the [Hingham] high school," Ybarra explained.

The event was originally going to be held at Wompatuck's South Field but will be at the Visitor Center instead. "In order to bring in more people, we decided to move into the visitor center. People can stop by and see what's going on and partake in the event if they want to," said Ybarra. "We're mapping everything out and think it's going to be great there."

Relay For Life events are held overnight so that at least one team member remains on the track or pathway at all times throughout the evening.

Teams do most of their fundraising prior to the event, but some teams also hold creative fundraisers at their campsites during the relay. Fundraising can continue through August 31, 2013. This year's fundraising goal is $45,000.

Ybarra said that both Cohasset and Hingham high schools have teams that participate in the relay each year.

"We have a few new volunteers in the student council at Hingham High School and they're very excited, trying to do a purple day, or purple week to get posters up and sell bracelets," said Ybarra.

CHS also has a team, headed by team captain and senior Kristin Alexander. Ybarra said that Alexander "has been absolutely amazing over the years. We're very excited to have her onboard."

How to volunteer

Relay for Life is seeking volunteers – walkers, cancer survivors, caregivers, community leaders, anyone wanting to make a difference – to organize and recruit fundraising teams, garner community support, coordinate logistics, seek refreshments and prizes, plan entertainment and lend a hand to ensure the success of the 2013 event in your area.

Volunteers and participants who are willing to give their time and energy to this exciting event are making a commitment to let the local community know that cancer can be defeated.

If you would like to join the Relay For Life of Cohasset/Hingham/Hull/Scituate as a volunteer or team participant, please call your local American Cancer Society staff partner Rebecca Ybarra at (508) 897-4343 or rebecca.ybarra@cancer.org or committee member Jacqui Vitello at (781) 383-2668 or pjvit@aol.com.

For more event specific information, please visit: relayforlife.org/CohassetMA. You can also pick up a team captain packet or more information in your local community at two locations, Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum at 100 Sohier St., Cohasset, or at the Hingham Public Library at 66 Leavitt St., Hingham.

UPDATE

Cohasset sells bonds, gets new rating

Cohasset bonds sold for a lower interest rate than anticipated due in large part to a bonding upgrade.

As of May 2, Cohasset was expecting to refinance its outstanding callable bonds of $5.1 million that would generate an estimated budget savings of $402,000 net of all costs.

The new bond rating for the town was issued by bond rating agency Standard and Poor's on May 21; on May 22, town bonds were sold that yielded 20 percent more savings than anticipated.

Standard and Poor's upgrade from a negative outlook to a stable outlook for the town's AA+ bond rating helped Cohasset realize an additional 20 percent savings ($485,000 net of all costs).

The true interest cost (TIC) was 1.81 percent for the refinanced debt and new debt for a total offering of $8,184,000.

Acting Town Manager and Chief Financial Officer Michael Milanoski stated, "For our financial team, it is rewarding to see the hard work and steadfast resolve for financial transparency has directly paid off for the taxpayers of Cohasset with the additional saving to the town as we continue to improve our financial management system and add integrity to the process."

Standard and Poor's revised its outlook on the financial management of Cohasset to stable from the negative and affirmed its AA+ long-term rating to the town's general obligation debt. According to Standard and Poor's, the stable outlook revision upgrade reflects in their view the improved financial results and that the town's financial management has solidified, driven by strengthened financial procedures and a more permanent financial management team in the recently completed fiscal year.

Cohasset's financial performance has been inconsistent in recent years. The management letter from Power's and Sullivan, auditor for the town's fiscal 2012 audit, identified three material weaknesses in the financial management including questioning the prior finance team's ability to fulfill their assigned functions plus complete lack of any significant internal controls.

However, a recent update from Power's and Sullivan indicated that two of these issues were fully resolved and that they believe the last material weakness will be fully addressed by the time they complete the fiscal 2013 audit. Further, P&S commended the new finance team for addressing these material weaknesses in a short period of time and consider this a major accomplishment.

In addition, Cohasset also received an unqualified opinion from P&S for their fiscal 2012 audit. Standard and Poor's also believes that the town has recently improved its financial management and its financial position.

Milanoski took office in February 2012 and said that he is guided by the strengthened financial management policies he developed as one of his first acts with the original Board of Selectmen he served under.

"It was a team effort from not only the staff but our advisory committee, capital budget committee, budget planning group and selectmen working together to develop new policies, adopted by my first board of selectmen and town meeting," said Milansoki.

The May 2012 Annual Town Meeting voted to adopt these policies. Standard and Poor's considers Cohasset's financial policies and practices "good" under its financial management assessment methodology.

Standard and Poor's also supported the following initiatives by the Acting Town Manager:

- $300,000 in savings negotiated with the Town's Health Care Provider that will be allocated annually to the OPEB Trust Funds that was established by Management at the Annual Town Meeting in 2012;
- $50,000 to $100,000 is included in Management's five-year pro forma to be invested in the OPEB Trust Fund each year;
- The Town's Fund balances grew from $865,515 to $2,295,670 under the Leadership of Management;

Further, all union labor contacts have been negotiated by Management and ratified by Unions and Town Meeting without arbitration through 2015.

The general fund balance has increased to $2.3 million or 5.9 percent of operating expenditures. General fund liquidity strengthened to $3.6 million of cash, a current ratio of 4.4x and equal to 34 days' expenditures.

Milanoski stated, "I was appointed to this job because I had strong financial background in running quasi-government economic development organizations and a track record to turn around organizations, but I must say it is this incredibly strong team we have developed that pulled this effort together and the town employees involved deserve the credit for their hard work. Together, we have created long-term financial stability for the town with financial policies that have been institutionalized for our future generations."

The town manager further noted that managing and refinancing the town's debt has saved Cohasset taxpayers nearly $2 million, including $1,338,500 from our last refinancing that will result in lower debt exclusion taxes (due to prop 2 ½ override). "Also, we have significantly increased the Town's Fund Balance by $1,429,000 in less than 15 months all without reducing town services – in fact we increased town services and significantly invested in our infrastructure and schools during a down economy," Milanoski added.

Overall, Cohasset managed to go from a negative outlook to a positive one in the eyes of the bond rating agency.

"All of this happened in a down economy. We were able to save money, increase services, and fix our financial system," said Milanoski. "In addition, we as a town survive on the active engagement of our citizens to volunteer and get involved. As a resident of the town, I learned a lot from everyone who has been involved. This was a real team effort and for someone who gets to works in the community they love, call home, and raise a family, it is especially fulfilling to me to have been involved."

Cohasset's health agent honored

Cohasset's Board of Health Agent and Administrator Felix Zemel was inducted as a Fellow of the Local Public Health Institute of Massachusetts on April 30, 2013 at Tower Hill Botanical Garden in Boylston.

Fellows, who are selected from health departments across the state, are honored for their demonstrated mastery of public health practice, commitment to their own professional development, and willingness and ability to share their expertise with the next generation of public health practitioners across the state and the country.

The mission of the Local Public Health Institute is to provide and ensure a competent workforce by strengthening and sustaining the capacity of local boards of health to prepare for and respond to public health issues and emergencies and to promote the health of residents of the Commonwealth.

This honor recognizes Zemel as a teacher and mentor to other public health practitioners throughout Massachusetts. On a daily basis, Zemel demonstrates superior abilities in public health on behalf of Cohasset citizens.

Zemel wrote a state grant for tobacco control compliance checks and vendor education and recently published an article in the Journal of Environmental Health on medical marijuana dispensaries.

At 29, Zemel is among the younger health professionals to receive this prestigious award.

"I'm really humbled by the opportunity to be elected as a fellow," said Zemel. "It's a very big achievement for people to earn, and I feel really humbled by the fact that I was able to do it at such a young age. I look forward to mentoring the future public health professionals, and providing education and quality public health services to the residents of Cohasset."

Board of Health survey

Cohasset's Board of Health is shifting its focus "to not just be looking at inspections and permitting issues but looking at overall health of the community," Zemel said. "One of the first steps is we launched an online survey as a first step toward identifying public health issues to be addressed in the future."

The Board of Health is seeking public input to improve the health of the Cohasset community. Those who would like to be heard are encouraged to go online and complete a brief health questionnaire. The information provided will be used to guide health-related policy and community programming in Cohasset.

This survey is available to the public at: bohsurvey.cohassetma.org.

Milanoski started as a volunteer acting town manager in February 2012 and was given an employment contract in March 2012. His current contract is through December 2013.

The May 20 letter, sent by DeLuca's attorney Gregory Aceto of the firm Aceto, Bonner & Prager, states that nothing Milanoski has issued is legally binding because he is, according to DeLuca, an illegal town manager under the Town Manager Act because he held an appointed office in town within a year of being appointed Acting Town Manager. Milanoski stepped down from the Conservation Commission and Governance Committee in March 2012. However, the April 2013 Town Meeting voted to amend the Town Manager Act through a Home Rule Petition. The retooled Act would allow for town volunteers – appointed or elected officials – to be considered for the town manager job.

Milanoski stated on Thursday that he reviewed the letter but disagreed with the claims.

"We have received the document, had an opportunity to review it along with his settlement agreement, yet it now appears he seeks to rescind the agreement after reaping the rewards of it — we deny his specious allegations and look forward to the facts being aired," Milanoski said.

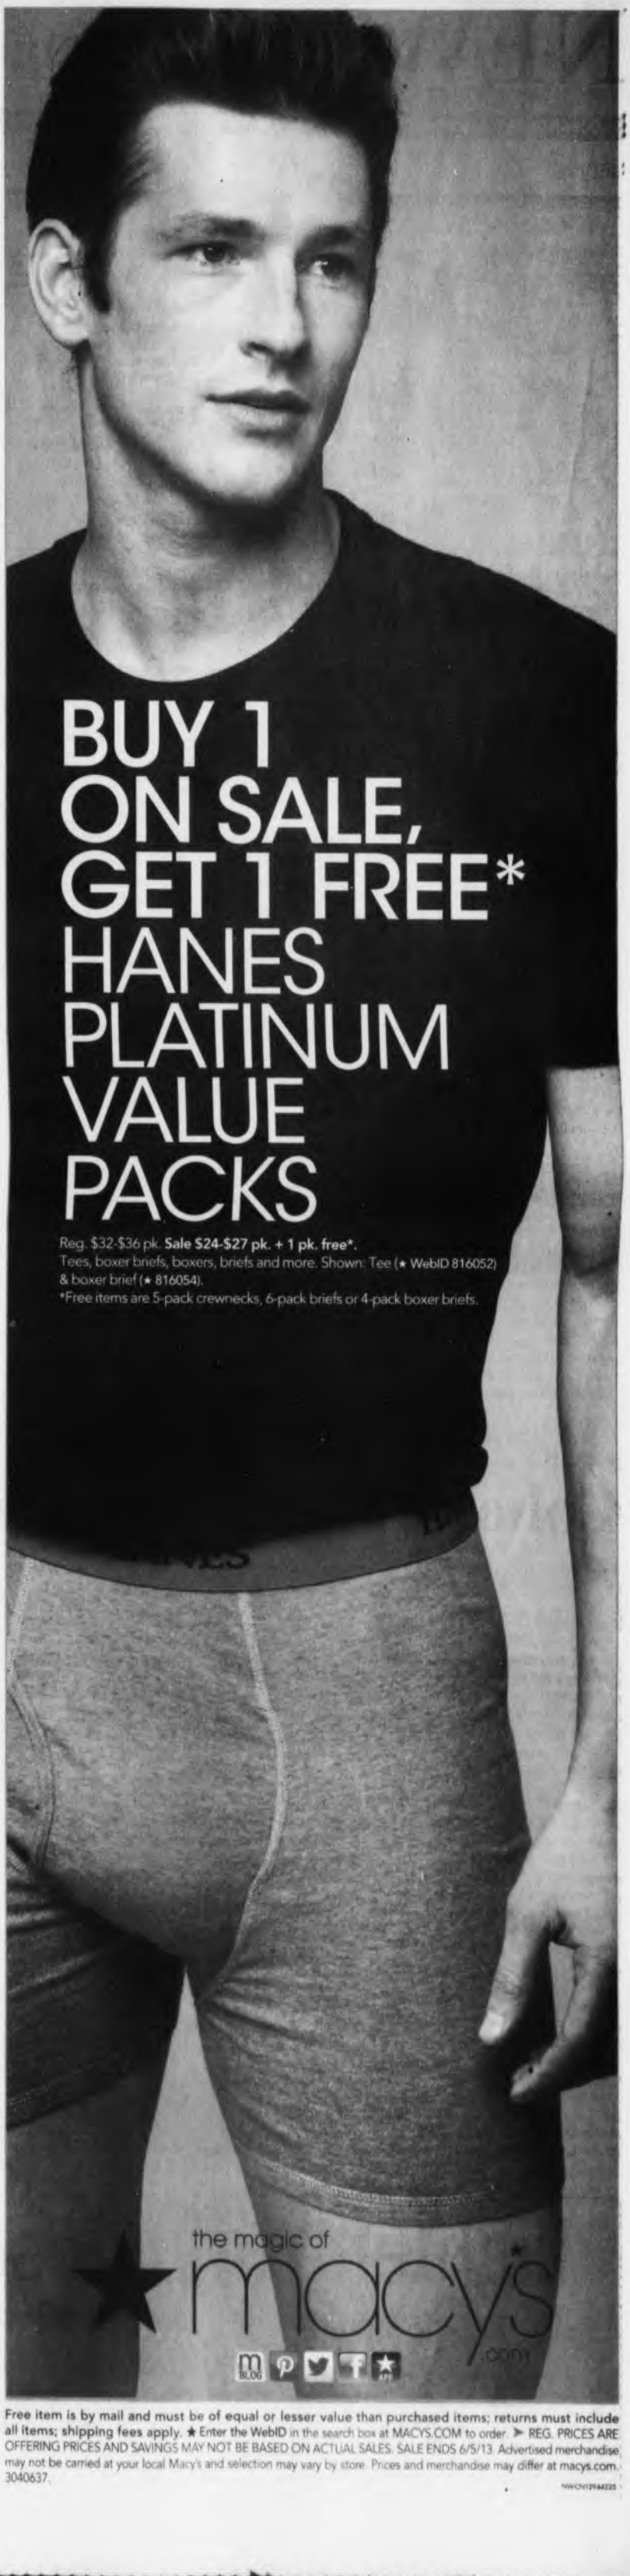
DeLuca's letter also states that he believes the reason he was removed as police chief was because he supported Coughlin throughout the controversy that led to Coughlin's dismissal. Coughlin is seeking reinstatement through his lawsuit against the town.

Coughlin considers his a whistleblower suit against the town and Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio, whom Coughlin believed had a conflict of interest when the water department was going out to bid for a new water contractor. DeCaprio at the time said he was ex officio on the contract and would not vote on the operator; he also stated that he had no conflict of interest.

DeLuca's letter claims that Milanoski "set his sights on Chief DeLuca" because the former chief stood up for Coughlin. The letter further alleges that Milanoski "fabricated frivolous, false and slanderous charges against Chief DeLuca with the assistance of others in the Cohasset Police Department" and shared this information with the media, "damaging Chief DeLuca's reputation in the law enforcement community."

The letter further states that Milanoski went against the Town Manager Act by not seeking selectmen approval before disciplining DeLuca. This renders "any negotiations and resulting agreement void," according to DeLuca's counsel.

DeLuca is thus seeking reinstatement through the terms stated in the Feb. 2012 agreement signed by Coughlin, which would see him employed through August 2014. Alternatively, DeLuca demands reinstatement "until a legal Town Manager is appointed to negotiate a valid settlement" between DeLuca and the town.



Police chief search update

Cohasset is conducting a search for a new police chief. Deputy Police Chief William Quigley has worked as acting chief since Mark DeLuca was suspended in May 2012.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski initially posted the position on March 26, but the Board of Selectmen felt the job had not been advertised properly. The board voted in April 2013 to re-launch the search with a new advertisement.

The search is still underway. Milanoski said in a phone call Thursday morning that he was meeting with the Advisory Committee that evening to discuss a reserve fund transfer to pay for the search activity.

Memorial Day

Hi there Cohasset and Happy Memorial Day Weekend. I know that despite the tricky weather reports being made, many plans are being made for cook-outs, parties with family and friends, I hope that you all take some time to remember the men and women of our country who have lost their lives, been injured or continue to fight for our freedom and honor them and their families on Monday, Memorial Day.

Red carpet

I would like to also congratulate this years CHS Class of 2013 on their last day of school today, May 24th and wish them a fun, memorable and safe Prom this evening. If you are reading this before 6 p.m., please come down to the Common by Town Hall for the Pre-Prom Red Carpet Gala, a favorite event of so many each year. I will have my Kleenex and camera ready as Cody heads down the carpet with his date, celebrating his final day as a Senior and his 18th birthday too. I still want to know how it all happened so fast...sigh. Congratulations to one awesome class and a really great group of parents. Next up...the Graduation! Speaking of graduations, I have a few to share.

Proctor

Please join the Weissman family in congratulating Alexandra Weissman who is graduating from Proctor Academy in Andover, N.H. on June 1, 2013. While at Proctor, Alexandra was elected one of the school's student leaders by her peers and also became editor of the yearbook. Over the past few years, she also studied abroad in Segovia, Spain and in Aix-en-Provence, France. Next year Alexandra will be attending DePaul University in Chicago, Ill. as a freshman. Congratulations Alex on this wonderful news and best of luck next year.

BC

Another young lady to share some news about is Brittany Dunn, who graduated from Boston College with a bachelor of science in Biology at the under-graduate commencement on May 20, 2013. She is a third generation BC graduate from her family and everyone, including her family and friends are so proud. Best of luck to you Brittany, congrats!

Master's

I received some news about Diana Remlinger of Cohasset who has been directly accepted into the (MGH) Massachusetts General Hospital's Institute of Health Professions master's degree program.

Diana's studies will focus on the discipline of achieving the degree of Nurse Practitioner, Life Span, and Psychiatry. Diana will begin her studies for this master's level program in early fall of this year. This is certainly exciting news Diana and something you must be so proud of. I know your family and friends are and we all wish you the best.

Wild birds

The Cohasset Elder Affairs wanted to share that on Wednesday, May 29, Pam and Steve French, owners of Wild Birds Unlimited in Hanover, will present an informative session on hummingbirds and orioles. Two of the most heavily anticipated arrivals each spring, both birds are unique in their behaviors and habitats. Learn about nesting, feeding, migration and most importantly, how to attract these colorful birds to your backyard. The presentation will occur at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St. at 11:00 a.m. Lunch will follow at noon. Call 781-383-9112 for reservations and/or transportation.

DVDs

Shaun Galvin would like all CHS Senior parents to know that he will be videotaping the 2013 Senior Pre-Prom Red Carpet Gala for the 8th straight year today. DVD's of the 2013 CHS Senior Pre Prom Red Carpet Gala will be available for sale for $20 per DVD and they make great graduation gifts. To order a copy please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197(cell) or email your request to galvin_shaun@yahoo.com. Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to Shaun Galvin P.O. Box 526 Hingham, MA 02043.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

LIFE AT CHS

Last week full of excitement

WHITNEY MALONE

Today, we seniors fulfilled our last day of classes at CHS, finally being dismissed at 10:40 and rushing to the student parking lot in celebration.

This week at CHS started off in excitement, as the Girls' Tennis team won their match against Martha's Vineyard at home on Monday afternoon, continuing their undefeated record. Also having a great season, the Boy's Baseball team held a six game winning streak up until Tuesday in their game against Mashpee. Congrats to both teams!

Thursday, family and friends enjoyed viewing student artwork displayed throughout the senior lounge at CHS Arts Night, spotlighting the work of senior art students over the past four years. The Jazz Band commenced the night of music with renditions of "Summertime" and "Born to be Wild," followed by performances from the Chorus Ensemble and Concert Band. Before closing the night with a senior awards ceremony and a performance of "The Stars and Stripes Forever" (as tradition), the Concert Band students collectively decided this year to perform "Sweet Caroline" in honor of the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings. On behalf of the other senior band and chorus students, I'd like to thank our teachers Mrs. Moriarty and Mr. Mahoney for dedicating their time and effort into organizing all our rehearsals, concerts, and performances to make a perfect final year for us at CHS!

Today, we seniors fulfilled our last day of classes at CHS, finally being dismissed at 10:40 and rushing to the student parking lot in celebration. This afternoon, as we ladies are prepping ourselves for Prom Night with nail and hair appointments, and senior guys with napping, watching some television, and quickly hopping in the shower, our generous teachers and parents are preparing an unforgettable night for the Class of 2013. We cannot be thankful enough for our Senior Advisors, Mrs. Moriarty and Ms. Berkowitz, and our parents on the Prom Committee who have gone above and beyond to make this special time in our lives a memorable one.

While it is difficult to imagine that in just a couple of weeks I will be free from most obligations to CHS, I feel confident in the choices I've made and memories I've collected over the past four years, including my time dedicated to this column. Thank you to the Cohasset Mariner for this amazing opportunity, and to everyone who takes a minute or two out of the day to read about Life at CHS through my lenses.

Taking over for Whitney Malone with the Life at CHS column will be Matt MacCormack.

PEACOCK

"I just walked out to change my sprinkler around, and I almost ran right into it — it was in my driveway," she said. "It was right in front of me and it had to be six or seven feet long."

After her 13-year-old daughter, Peri, took photos and video of the peacock, he wandered up to a neighbor's house on Virginia Lane. The bird shocked everyone by flying high up into a tree and staying there. A concerned neighbor called 911 and the information was relayed to Animal Control. The dispatcher said they had already received several similar calls.

Calls about the brightly colored bird started coming in on Wednesday, May 15 and continued over the weekend.

According to the police log, the Animal Control Officer said that the peacock belonged to a resident on Bowker and should wander home.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said that he has no idea who owns the bird or where it came from, but that he hopes to find out because the peacock must be listed on the state barn inspection list.

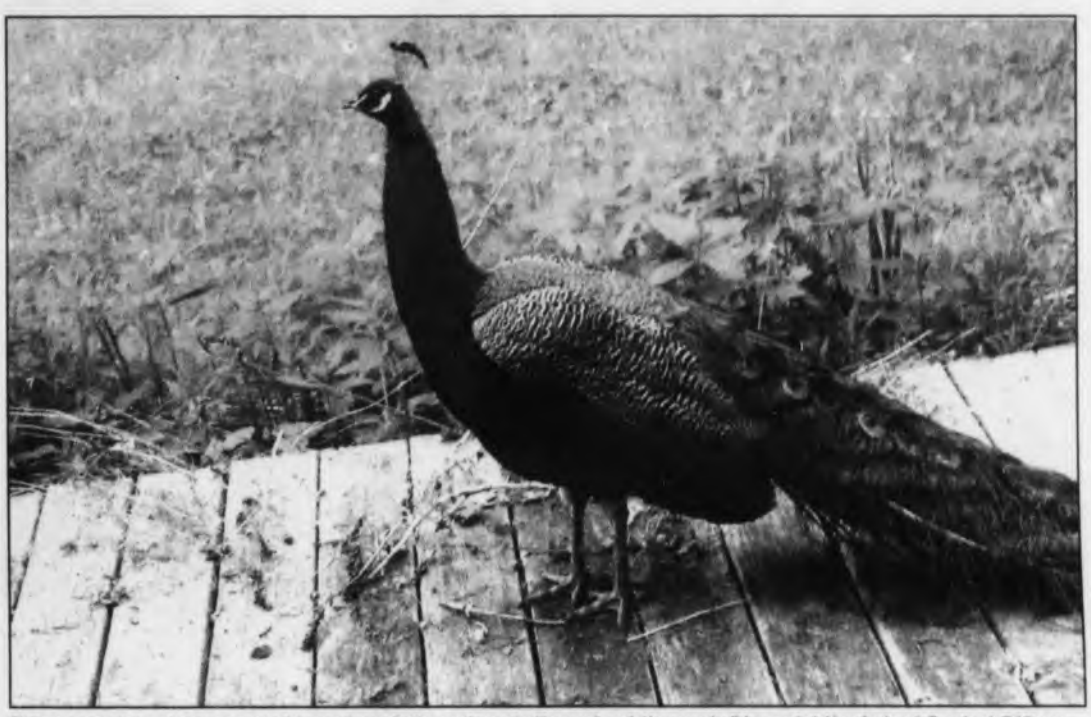
Murphy explained that he also works as an animal inspector for the state Dept. of Agriculture Division of Animal Health, and that the department keeps an inventory of all non-domesticated animals – animals besides cats, dogs, hamsters and gerbils, such as horses, pigs, cattle, chickens, rabbits, turkeys and other barn animals.

Peafowls (peacocks are the males) are native to India but are considered domestic animals in Massachusetts, according to MassWildlife, a division of the state Department of Fisheries and Wildlife. Any animals on the Domestic Animals list may be possessed, propagated, maintained, imported, bought, sold, or otherwise disposed of without the need for a MassWildlife permit or license, according to the department.

When it comes to the barn inspection list, however, the animal inspector said that peafowls are not considered domestic.

"A case of a peacock would be called an exotic animal," Murphy said. "It's not a normal domestic pet."

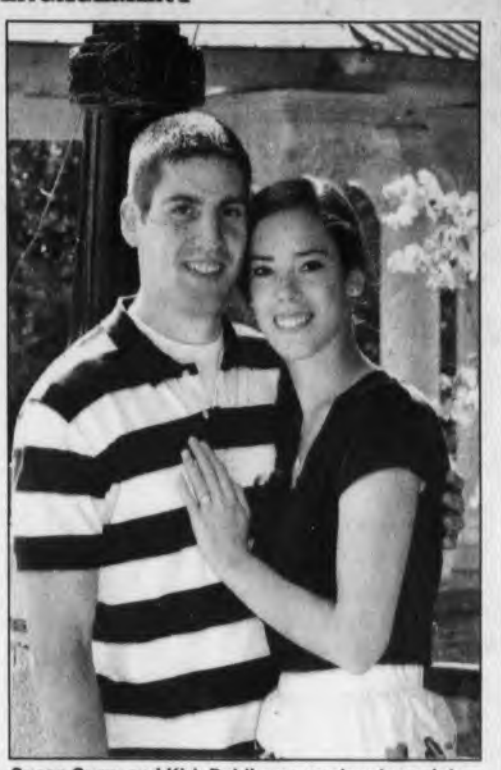
The animal control officer said that whoever owns a peacock or something other than a domestic animal should inform him so that he can conduct an inspection on how the animal is being kept.



Susan said that she checked Sunday morning to see if the bird was still there, but he was gone. Susan's sister-in-law, Sharon Chase, heard about the peacock from a neighbor wondering if the birds were native to Massachusetts. Sharon later saw the bird herself and decided to investigate.

"It was so weird, so beautiful, and so cool to look at," said Sharon. "I went on Facebook and said, 'Anyone lose a peacock?' I got all these responses, and someone said that Dalby Farms in Scituate loses peacocks. I called them and they said all of their peacocks were accounted for."

Dalby Farms confirmed that they have six peafowls, some male and some female. A Dalby staff member also said that a woman came to the farm last week with a peacock and asked the farm to take him, but they said, "As much as we would love to take them in, we have no more room at this point."



The farm gave the woman contact information for someone who wanted to take in a peacock. The Dalby staffer said that she hopes the peacock roosting in Cohasset is not the same bird. She is concerned about the exotic-looking bird's fate outdoors with many potential predators, and hopes someone will claim the peacock.

Anyone who spots a missing pet or unusual animal should call Animal Control at 781-383-1055 x 1014.

This peacock has been spotted in various Cohasset yards throughout the week. Please let the Animal Control Officer know if you spot him around town. COURTESY PHOTOS

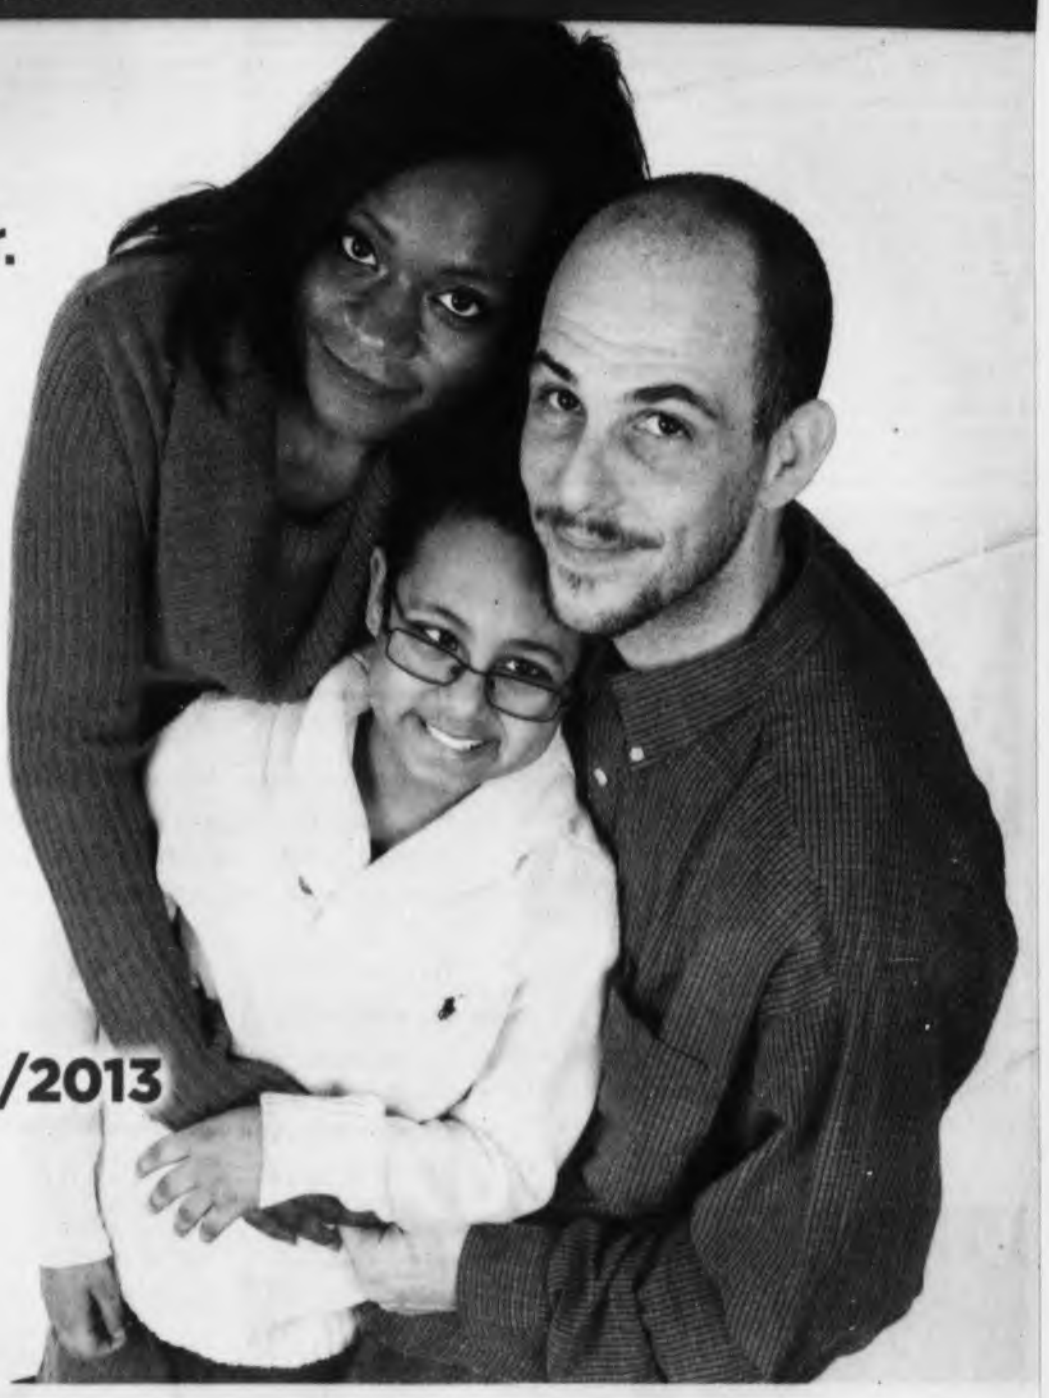
ENGAGEMENT

Susan Curry and Kirk Dahlberg are planning a July wedding in Cohasset. COURTESY PHOTO

Curry – Dahlberg

Mary Beth and David Curry of Norwell, formerly of Cohasset, are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter, Susan, to Kirk Dahlberg.

Susan's educational journey in Cohasset started at the Carriage House Nursery School, continued with attendance at the Joseph Osgood, Deer Hill, Cohasset Middle School and she graduated from Cohasset High School in the Class of 2006. Kirk's early childhood was spent in Florida and Virginia but his family moved to Friendship, Maine, when Kirk was in middle school. Kirk graduated from Medomak Valley High School in the Class of 2005. Susan and Kirk met when they were undergraduate students attending the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta, Ga. Susan graduated from GA Tech in 2010 with a bachelor of science degree in industrial engineering. Kirk also a 2010 GA Tech graduate, earned a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering. Susan works for Majure Data Inc., a small software company in Milton, Ga., as an implementation consultant. Kirk joined the Coca Cola Company as a staff engineer after graduation. Kirk actually started his career with Coke as a GA Tech Co-op student.



A July wedding in Cohasset is planned. The couple will make their home in Atlanta, Ga.

'Band of sisters' graduates from NDA

Rear Admiral delivers keynote address

By Mary Ford

Keynote speaker Rear Admiral Margaret DeLuca Klein said she remembers the address at her Notre Dame Academy graduation as having been brief but memorable.

The 1975 NDA graduate and Weymouth native promised to do both at Friday's commencement.

However what Klein said was both to the point and full of advice for what she described as the "band of sisters" sitting before her in their long white gowns and gold medallion necklaces.

Klein, who is also a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, was wearing a crisp white Navy uniform. She drew both laughter and applause when she noted she had been wearing some form of uniform ever since she graduated from the Catholic girls school in Hingham some 38 years ago.

She advised the graduates to be passionate about their life's work – regardless of what that is. "Be passionate about each day," she said.

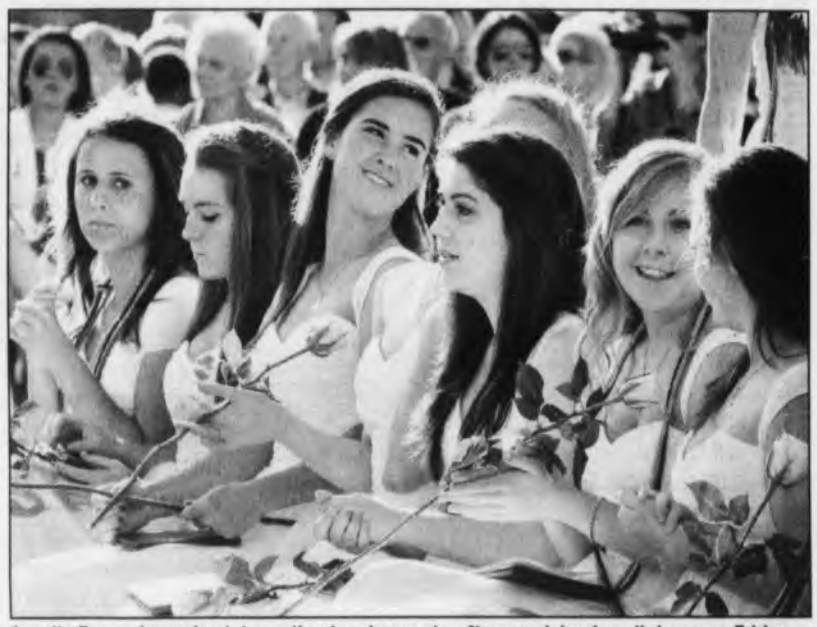
"Get up each day and apply yourself to the task at hand."



Klein urged the young women to find balance in their lives among personal, spiritual, professional and civic responsibilities.

In what was described by the school as a "wonderful coincidence," Klein's niece Julia MacDougall of Weymouth delivered the student address. Julia was selected for the honor through an anonymous essay contest at the school.

Julia used candles as a metaphor in her speech. "Today, our candles are shining brightly," she said. "We are here beaming, closing one chapter in our lives, excited to bring our light to whatever the future holds for us.

"Though some of us might be somewhat uncertain about what the future does hold, we can be sure of some things. We can be sure that our best friends will always be a Skype session away, that we have indeed been well prepared for this journey, and that we are amazing enough to let our lights shine before others and light the darkest corners of our world."

The setting for the academy's 160 graduation was perfect on the athletic field in front of the school with emerald green grass underfoot, a brilliant blue sky overhead. Each of the 142 members of the Class of 2103 was handed a single yellow rose after being presented with her diploma.

Amelia Brown leans back to smile at a classmate after receiving her diploma on Friday.

"Be passionate about each day. Get up each day and apply yourself to the task at hand."
Rear Admiral Margaret Deluca Klein, NDA Class of 1975

Graduation celebrations officially began Thursday evening with the Baccalaureate when each soon-to-be-graduate was presented her Notre Dame Academy medallion by her alumnae sponsor – sisters, mothers, family members, friends or beloved faculty members. Alumnae of Notre Dame academies around the world recognize the medallion as a symbol of a graduate of a school sponsored by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur.

Located at 1073 Main Street in Hingham, Massachusetts, the Academy enrolls approximately 600 students in grades nine through twelve from more than 40 communities.

Graduates from Cohasset include: Abigail Carrier, Jenna Conte, Marissa Gildea, Caroline Lengyel, Mary McKelvey, Catherine Pitts, Grace Pozniak, and Kiana Shipp.

GIMME SHELTER

Helen is looking for her forever home

PAULA J. FATERSIK

When Helen, pictured here, is relaxed and enjoying your petting and love she will purr away, and if you are not paying enough attention she will give you a little chatting up. COURTESY PHOTO

Looking for a sweet young girl to join your family? Someone who will bring smiles and entertainment to your loving home? Helen may be the perfect new addition and a fresh breath of Spring for you and your family. This petite, buff and dark brown tiger is just a year old and will be ready to adopt shortly after her spay procedure next week.

She is a delightful and feminine feline who enjoys gentle petting and has a beautiful face that is made more exotic looking with big, bright, sparkling green eyes. Two-toned whiskers and a rose colored nose set in a pale beige muzzle and gently rounded ears add to her engaging looks. Helen will be a fairly small cat when she is grown, a perfect lap size!

When Helen is relaxed and enjoying your petting and love she will purr away, and if you are not paying enough attention she will give you a little chatting up. Yes, she has a vocal side and when you add this to her "come to greet you" welcome as you enter the room, you can't help but love this little girl. Playtime is something she craves and since she shares a room with other cats who are bigger than she is, it will be great for her to have her very own home and family to enjoy fun activities with.

This is a wonderful time to consider adopting a beautiful cat like Helen, or one of our other wonderful companions who are just waiting for a forever home. The change of season and new growth can lead to open hearts and homes for these felines who have found themselves lost or abandoned. If you have room in your home for a new family companion, please call Judy at 781-534-4902.

Open Hours at the shelter at 50 L St. in Hull are Mondays, from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. You can view all of Hull Seaside Animal Rescue's available felines by going to www.HSAR.com and click on Available Pets. Connecting to Petfinder will give you information on the latest arrivals to the shelter. We have many new additions, including kittens who are looking for the perfect match. You can see updates, reminders and information on our Facebook page as well.

Next Tuesday, May 28th is the monthly Spay Waggin date and if you have a cat who needs spay or neutering, please call the office line, 781-925-3121 and leave detailed information. Your call will be returned and appointment confirmed. This is a great time to consider helping to control the feral population in your community.

We are filling up with kittens at the shelter and in our foster homes and appreciate any and all donations that can be used for their specific needs. Fresh bedding, wet and dry kitten food, powdered kitten milk and toys are always needed. Clay litter and adult food is also on our wish list and your help is appreciated.

As we are an all-volunteer shelter, if you are interested in joining a group of hard working animal lovers, please contact Nancy, Volunteer Coordinator at 781-925-3638. There is a lot that goes into keeping a safe and healthy home away from "forever home" for our residents.

One of our recent and ongoing activities has been the painting and refreshing all of the HSAR donation bins in Hull, which our supporters keep filled with bottles and cans, helping us to cover costs. A big thank you to board member and volunteer Cindy Nickerson and her son for getting this project going. There are many opportunities to help out so if you have a few hours a week please call the shelter and inquire about more volunteer opportunities.

Thank you to all of the local merchants who display our HSAR shelter houses at your checkout and to all of you who share your change and donate to us. We are very appreciative. This is what keeps our shelter going and makes it possible to help animals who need a chance at finding happy, loving homes.

Flower girls

Flower girls, ages 5 through 12, are needed for the water service for veterans who died at sea. The event will take place at the Veterans Memorial. Parents and siblings can also walk, as well as past flower girls – the more the merrier.

Girls should meet at the Common across from the POW/MIA Square at 11 a.m., on Memorial Day, May 27. Girls should bring flowers from their gardens, and will walk from the Common to Veterans Park.

Anyone interested can call Dee Wigmore at 617-281-6128.

OUR VIEW

Missing them still

Editor's note: several readers asked that we republish this editorial for Memorial Day 2013.

On Memorial Day, as always, I remember two young men: John Lazarovich and Joe Hunt. They were classmates of mine at Scituate High School and members of the SHS Class of 1966.

In our sophomore year, I recall our English teacher asking the class if anyone knew anyone serving in Vietnam. No one raised his or her hand. Soon, that all changed.

John (known affectionately as "Laz") was killed on Dec. 4, 1967. He was a lance corporal with the US Marines. He was just 19 years old. His name is on wall panel 31E, wall line 036 on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C.

A little more than a month later, on Jan. 27, 1968, Joe was killed. He was a corporal with the Marines. He was just 20 years old. His name is on wall panel 35E, line 047 on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Laz and Joe still live within the hearts and minds of the SHS Class of 1966. They had ready smiles and were full of fun. In our class yearbook and in our memories, they are still young. We miss them still.

All wars carry a heavy toll. Many of the members of the Scituate High School Class of 1966 had fathers that served in World War II and/or Korea. We knew about war, but we had not experienced it ourselves until Vietnam.

The nightly news brought the Vietnam War into our homes, but the loss of our classmates made it all too real.

During the Vietnam War, the Town of Cohasset lost eight men: including Peter J. Albiani Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone and Dennis J. Reardon. The worst eight months of Vietnam for Cohasset were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals.

As a mother, I had the experience of many sleepless nights while both my sons served with the US Army in Iraq, one in 2003 just after the invasion and the other during the surge in 2007. My nephew, a Marine, served in the years in between. I will be eternally grateful that they all came home safely.

It is hard to believe so many years have passed since my high school graduation in 1966 until one realizes a first-class stamp was just 5 cents back then.

The families of the 58,000 whose names are on the Vietnam Memorial have had an empty chair at the dinner table on holidays and at family gatherings all these many years.

On Monday, many people like me will be thinking about their classmates, friends or relatives who were killed in wartime.

We need to always remember those we have lost; we need to honor them; and we need to miss them still.

Selectmen's meetings more harmonious with new selectmen on board

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Please return posters removed from poles

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset recently advertised its Plant Sale by hanging posters on poles at various points in town. Prior to doing so, we went to the Town Hall and obtained their consent and guidance as to which poles could be used for this purpose. Regrettably an unknown person saw fit to remove many of our posters. We spoke to the police about the matter to be told that this has been happening under cover of dark for several years. Despite many complaints the person has never been discovered. It is believed that the person concerned takes these actions as they wish to maintain the integrity of the historic part of town.

Every point of view should, of course, have an opportunity to be heard, but if it is not voiced in an open manner then the argument quickly loses its integrity. Instead of sneaking around in the dark, perhaps the person concerned would like to raise their argument in the letter pages of our local newspaper — an honest and time honored method of discussion and debate. It might well be the case that many of us local citizens agree with whoever you are and a means of managing the placement of these notices to the satisfaction of the majority might be found.

In the meantime, we would appreciate it if the notices could be returned to us. We are not a wealthy club and our members work very hard to raise funds to finance a program for children at Deer Hill School, another for the elderly at Golden Living, three scholarships for High School seniors, donations of trees and plants for Arbor Day and Plant Something MA, and the maintenance of and materials for three gardens in town.

Gjesteby's conduct called into question

I want to thank the Mariner for setting the record straight regarding allegations against Mr. Milanoski (ATM), Mr. Bonnell, the town's IT Manager, the Board of Selectmen as a group and former Selectman Paul Carlson individually. Selectman Gjesteby accused them of criminal hacking activity. As you confirmed in your article last week the accusations were untrue, and void of merit. When you looked into the matter and checked with her computer technician, Mrs. Gjesteby's e-mail "problem" had been resolved to her satisfaction. (Why didn't she check her facts first)?

That's just fine for Mrs. Gjesteby but I'd like to know about the people she maligned? After her false accusations and humiliation, are they fine? Has she nothing to say or to be held accountable for? What about the public she dragged into the fray? Has she nothing to say about the conduct she exhibited to our hard working employees who are her subordinates and others (former Selectman Carlson and the rest of the Board whom she accused of approving the criminal acts). What about an apology or two, or three?

The FOIA regulations that started the process are a matter of law to whom all are accountable no matter what privilege Mrs. Gjesteby thinks she deserves.

It seems to me if Mrs. Gjesteby does not verify her facts, (and thus defames others), if she cannot control her temper, if she still thinks it's okay to treat subordinates the way she did, Mrs. Gjesteby should step down.

Public apologies however, with meaning, to those who were touched by this incident would be a good way to return a sense of civility to board proceedings.

Again, thanks to the Mariner for a well researched, fair, truthful piece of reporting.

Tana Carlson,
18 Old Coach Road

COMMENTARY

Selectman Quigley off base on Town Manager search

PETER DICAPRIO

In last week's story on "Campaign Signgate" Karen Quigley was quoted saying her "first order of business as selectman would be to ask her fellow board members to publish a request for proposals (RFP) to search for a new town manager." In the same article, Quigley is also quoted saying "whether Coughlin comes back to Cohasset is up to a court of law, not the current board of selectmen."

The question for all of us then is this: if the outcome of Coughlin's filed litigation presents the possibility that he could be reinstated, does it make sense for Ms. Quigley to recommend a search for a permanent town manager? Surely Selectman Quigley understands that the litigation itself is material information that must be disclosed to applicants thereby making it difficult for Cohasset to attract a pool of qualified candidates willing to take the risk of being replaced by Mr. Coughlin were he to win his lawsuit. Conducting such a search under the conditions she describes would knowingly expose the town to double jeopardy whereby a newly hired town manager is forcibly displaced by a prior one. In my opinion, such a course of action is indicative of rash thinking and not in the best interest of the town.

Selectman Quigley is on record supporting Mr. Coughlin and his lawsuit against the town (which is another issue altogether). Selectman Quigley said that she was against Coughlin's removal because of the way he was treated by town officials. "It was the process and the behavior, the way they [the selectmen] treated an individual that was so unprofessional and unnecessary to me." In contrast, while supporting Mr. Coughlin resolutely, Ms. Quigley has, in her many public writings and utterances, consistently called for a "new" Town Manager, which means she is not willing at all to consider keeping our current Acting Town Manager, Mike Milanoski. Ms. Quigley claims Mr. Milanoski is "unqualified." How she comes to this conclusion is unclear, as are her credentials to reach it.

Let me be clear: I worked with Mike Coughlin, Ms. Quigley did not. In Coughlin's short tenure he routinely overspent his budget authority, turned a cash flow surplus into a deficit in three months, tried to raid an enterprise fund to cover that deficit, created departments without the authority of town meeting, issued illegal contracts, and generally made a mess of things. None of the resistance to Coughlin was personal.

Mr. Milanoski on the other hand has pursued a budget discipline that has resulted in a million dollar surplus and the rebuilding of the town's stabilization funds. He has reduced our debt burden, negotiated union contracts more favorable to the town than any previous manager was able to, and presided over a bond rating upgrade that was largely the result of his being steadfast in following the budget processes that were established collaboratively with the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory and Capital Budget Committees. In short he has been exactly what the town needed: a competent, disciplined and effective manager willing to work with town committees as dictated by our bylaws.

The conclusions reached by Selectman Quigley, and the evaluations she apparently has already made are cause for concern. The inherent conflict in conducting a Town Manager search when the job could be forcibly filled by the courts makes no sense and exposes the town to untold future legal entanglements. Furthermore, by immediately closing the possibility of retaining Mr. Milanoski, and merely searching for a "new" town manager rather than the best available candidate, suggests a motivation on Ms. Quigley's part at odds with reason and closer to summary judgment.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Gun control and the senate race

While Massachusetts may have among the nation's strictest laws regarding firearm sales and possession, on a national level the issue is far from resolved...

MATT GREGORY

In 1994, former presidents Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford, and Jimmy Carter composed a letter advising Congress to pass a nationwide ban on the production and proliferation of assault weapons in America. The former chief executives urged congressional leaders to "listen to the American public and to the law enforcement community and support a ban on the further manufacture of these weapons." The law ultimately did pass, by a margin of two votes, and for the next 10 years, rifles such as the AK-47 were banned from the nation's streets. However, the effectiveness of the measure remained a source of dispute, with Republican leaders and the strong firearm lobby condemning the measure as failing to achieve any crime reduction while encroaching upon fundamental constitutional rights. The prevalence of such sentiments contributed to the expiration and subsequent non-renewal of the law in 2004. Now, 18 years after the three former presidents' strong show of bipartisan support for assault weapon restrictions, debate over this issue has again returned to national prominence in the wake of recent mass shootings involving military-style firearms, most notably the Newtown, Connecticut massacre. And as the contest between Democrat Ed Markey and Republican Gabriel Gomez in the Massachusetts Special Senate Election intensifies over the next few weeks, the nationally divisive issue of gun control will inevitably prove central to each candidate's campaign and the policies they would seek to enact if elected to office.

Twenty-term Congressman Ed Markey has a long history of advocacy for firearm restrictions and a well-defined stance supporting background checks on gun purchasers and a national ban on assault weaponry. Over the course of his tenure in Congress, Markey has supported and/or sponsored gun control legislation including the Brady Bill, the 1994 Assault Weapons Ban, the Gun Show Loophole Closing Act, measures that allow victims of gun violence or their families to conduct lawsuits against gun manufacturers, and a ban on large-capacity ammunition; for these actions, Markey has received a grade of "F" from the powerful pro-gun National Rifle Association, illustrating the group's negative perception of Markey as a staunch advocate of restricting the rights of firearm owners and manufacturers in America. Markey's 2013 campaign has emphasized his commitment to continuing such activism in the Senate, and he has maintained the necessity of addressing multiple facets of the nationally polarizing issue: "We need a comprehensive gun control bill that bans deadly assault weapons and high-capacity magazines while expanding universal background checks, and if elected to the Senate I will stand up to the gun lobby and fight for stronger reforms."

On the other hand, Republican Senate candidate Gabriel Gomez, a political newcomer, does not have a track record of legislative activism and voting; thus any analysis of his position regarding firearm policy must be based solely on the stances portrayed in his recent press releases, speeches, and advertisements. On his website, Gomez states his desire for the government to, "forge consensus and compromise to close the gun show loophole, and to keep weapons out of the hands of those with mental health issues." Such a statement is in keeping with his declared support for the bipartisan efforts of Senators Toomey and Manchin to pass legislation expanding mandatory background checks for firearm buyers at guns shows. However, regarding a federal ban on assault weapons, Gomez has repeatedly stated his opposition to any restrictions on the types of firearms Americans are allowed to purchase; he has declared his support for the Second Amendment and refused to "take away freedom for law-abiding citizens." Reflecting the view of many Republican leaders, Gomez was quoted as remarking: "It's not the weapon, it's the person who has the weapon that's the problem."

From a distance, the disparity between the stances of Gomez and Markey on the controversial topic appears tangible: both support background checks, yet Gomez has vowed to oppose the magazine capacity limitations and assault weapons ban for which Markey has consistently fought. However, Gomez's position on firearm restrictions has been challenged in light of a recently released letter sent from the Cohasset businessman to Governor Deval Patrick. In the letter, Gomez asked Patrick to consider him for temporary appointment to the Senate to replace Secretary of State John Kerry until the special election in June. Gomez pledged to "support the positions that President Obama has taken [on gun control]" and assured, "I will keep my word and work on these issues as I have promised." Considering Obama's call for a "ban on military-style assault weapons" and Gomez's campaign pledges to oppose legislation of that nature, Markey supporters have suggested that the Republican candidate has rapidly reversed his ideological course on this issue.

In addition to allegations of a possible flip-flop, a recent Markey televised advertisement contrasting the candidates' views on assault weaponry has proven to be a source of controversy. The ad, which states that Gomez "is against banning high capacity magazines like the ones used in the Newtown school shooting," has been condemned by Gomez as "low and despicable," reflecting the tension and animosity which have come to define the character of this campaign, partly as a result of the candidates' diverging views on firearm legislation. The hostility illustrated by this recent episode has been further exhibited by Gomez and Markey's inability to agree to the "People's Pledge" campaign spending limit and their difficulty in negotiating a schedule for televised debates.

While Massachusetts may have among the nation's strictest laws regarding firearm sales and possession, on a national level the issue is far from resolved, as Congress has failed to pass any form of legislation relating to background checks, magazine capacity limitations, or assault weapon proliferation. As the battle in Washington between gun control proponents and NRA-backed firearm advocates wages on, a similar struggle will continue in the Bay State, with both Senate hopefuls attempting to convince voters of the national benefit of the policies they seek to enact. The decisions of Massachusetts citizens in favor of or against provisions such as a federal assault weapon ban will likely play a significant role in deciding the victor in this tightly contested campaign, and, by consequence, the character of federal action regarding this controversial issue for the foreseeable future.

GROWING ON THE FARM

No need for lawn chemicals

The common sight of yellow flags, not gas line indicators, with warnings to stay off show up on lawns throughout the South Shore, even on lawns that abut organic gardens.

JON BELBER

There are plenty of reasons to think green each year. Thousands of seedlings adorn greenhouses and windowsills. Every April holds Earth Day and Arbor Day. Garden centers play host to truckloads of shrubs, bushes, plants and trees. And each year, far too many people think the answer to green lawns is found in an application of unseen chemicals and synthetic fertilizers and weed killers. The common sight of yellow flags, not gas line indicators, with warnings to stay off show up on lawns throughout the South Shore, even on lawns that abut organic gardens. And so each year, and often more than once, I will put out a plea to pause and thin about the ramifications to our water supply and signal to the environment.

Having spent far too much time recently at South Shore Hospital, visiting a close relation, the impetus to continue protesting hit me again. The doctors, nurses, transport staff and concierges are kind, knowledgeable, hardworking and thoughtful in the care they provide. I had occasion to sample a cookie and a coffee while waiting out procedures. Since the new hospital cafe serves organic coffee from Jim's Organic coffee in Wareham (sourced fairly from shade grown farms, directly from farmers), I sampled a hot cup in the new courtyard. On the newly laid sod, below a flowering tree, there waved a yellow flag telling me and any baby to stay off the grass. In a column over a year ago, I wrote of a terrific organic landscaper in Marshfield, Summit Landscape, who grows grass without the benefit of chemicals, rather with compost tea and other sustainable practices. After caring for the lawn, his flags of a different color ask people to Play On the grass.

The drives to and fro the hospital led me past too many yellow flags. There are many ways to go green and seek a weed free yard. Back at the farm, we continue to teach about what healthy compost and fertilizers plants do need, rather than what four step plans kill weeds and harmfully affect the water system. It is certainly not easy, affordable and full proof to always go organic. But it is possible to sip coffee or drink a glass of water without wondering about the possible next time you might have to visit the hospital.

His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

FOR THE RECORD

Smile, you could be on camera

With taxed police departments and an increase in laws to enforce, state and local officials are looking to surveillance cameras to assist with policing these common safety concerns.

GREGORY MATHIS

Running red lights is commonplace. It's happening every day at practically every traffic light.

If you're not pausing before proceeding when your light turns green to check both ways, you're looking for trouble.

Stop signs appear to be mere suggestions to motorists who are obviously in a hurry and need to keep their wheels moving at all times. Maybe we should change the term to rolling stop sign.

Even the flashing red lights on a school bus and the red stop sign that swings out from its side aren't enough to slow down those who don't have the time or patience to obey basic traffic laws even when it concerns a child's safety.

With taxed police departments and an increase in laws to enforce, state and local officials are looking to surveillance cameras to assist with policing these common safety concerns.

There have been studies and discussion regarding placing cameras at key traffic light locations to catch motorists racing through red lights, as well as having surveillance near stop sign areas to identify drivers disobeying that traffic law.

And now there is legislation being considered by the Joint Committee on Transportation that would allow video cameras to be attached to school buses to catch those who don't stop for those flashing red lights.

According to a recent State House News Service report, Tom O'Connor, president of RedFlex Student Guardian, told the legislative committee that the average number of deaths related to children being hit by passing motorists while getting on and off buses is 21 per year nationally.

O'Connor also cited a recent study that showed an average of 0.88 illegal passes per bus per day.

Committee members also are entertaining a bill that would allow cameras to monitor traffic in school zones to identify vehicles exceeding the posted speed limit in those areas.

Clearly the safety of children should be a priority at all costs, but is there a price to pay for people's privacy?

Let's face it - surveillance cameras are everywhere. If you didn't know that before the Boston Marathon bombings, you certainly realize that now. And it's not just stores and street scenes being monitored. If you're familiar with the television shows "24" and "Person of Interest," there's an unsettling feeling that our every move could be watched if someone wanted to watch.

George Orwell may have gotten the year wrong when he penned his chilling science fiction novel "1984" back in 1949, but with 2014 not far away, his idea of Big Brother and an omnipresent government looking out for the "greater good" is more real than ever.

We are living in trying times with terrorism on our doorstep, threatening not only our national security, but also our personal security. The Boston Marathon bombings remind us just how close these threats are and no one is safe.

We understand these surveillance measures are designed to protect us, but don't want Big Brother looking over our shoulder. We appear to be at a crossroads with regards to how far to push the envelope. But then again, maybe our fate already has been sealed and it's best to just keep smiling.

Let me know what you think about surveillance cameras. Good for protection and safety, or bad for privacy? Send an e-mail to gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

Absentee ballots for special election

Absentee ballots for the Special State Election on June 25, 2013 are available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, June 24, 2013 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election.

You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
- Physical disability.
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by June 25 to be counted.

Last day to register to vote

Wednesday June 5, 2013 is the last day for citizens to register to vote in the Special State Election on Tuesday June 25, 2013. The Town Clerk's Office will be remaining open until 8 pm on this day to accommodate applications. Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before June 25, 2013 can participate.

Pilgrim Bank congratulates newly elected Corporators

Pilgrim Bank would like to congratulate, David Farrag, Michael Kearney and Robert Grant on their recent election to the Board of Corporators of Conahasset Bancshares MHC, the parent company of Pilgrim Bank. These three new Board Members were selected based on their long-term relationships with the Bank and their commitment to the community. In addition, Mr. Kearney, a CPA and Mr. Farrag, an attorney, are both lifelong residents of Cohasset and prominent businessmen in the town.

The Board of Corporators was formed to represent the depositors in the mutual holding company structure, which was created to ensure the best possible mutual banking institution for the bank depositors as well as to provide for new opportunities to grow and expand. Pilgrim Bank has been serving Cohasset and surrounding communities for almost 100 years. Join us on Facebook or visit bankpilgrim.com for information about locations, hours and services.

Another look at African art

The South Shore Art Center brought African adink ra block-printing to Cohasset sixth graders.

Students received hands-on learning about a rich historical, artistic tradition from African culture. It teaches them about the language and universality of adink ra symbols, which are still widely used in modern African culture. For more photos, see page 30.

COHASSET RECREATION

The Gentile and Froio families enjoyed a family and friends night out at the ballpark last summer. COURTESY PHOTO

Take a ride to Sox games!

What better way to see a Red Sox Game than a $38 ticket price that includes a round trip ride to Fenway? No worries about traffic or parking, let the bus driver focus on driving while you talk with friends and maybe make some new ones. It's the perfect way to gather a large group and enjoy a summer night at the Park.

Cohasset Recreation has tickets available for the following Red Sox games which are all on a Tuesday night, bus leaves from Cohasset High School for all games at 7:10 and returns to Cohasset at 11 p.m. There are anywhere from 55-100 tickets available for each game so it's the perfect time to get a large group of people together for a friend's night out.

"This is a great opportunity for a larger group to sit with each other, as we can keep families and friends together in several rows, directly above and below one another, instead of being seated in one long row, in which they lose the ability to interact and truly enjoy the game as a group," says Cohasset Recreation Director, Ted Carroll. "It's a great time for family reunions, team get togethers or just a large group of friends who all want to enjoy a summer night out at Fenway."

Not in its 5th season of bringing Cohasset and Friends to the Red Sox, this season's tickets includes two National League games. Fans might be especially interested in seeing Jonathon Papelbon and his Philadelphia Phillies return to Boston for this month's game on the 28th.

- Red Sox vs. Philadelphia Phillies (May 28)
- Red Sox vs. Colorado Rockies (June 25)
- Red Sox vs. Tampa Bay Rays (July 23)
- Red Sox vs. Baltimore Orioles (August 27)

Children under 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Register On-line at cohassetrec.com or call the office at 781-383-4109 if you have any questions.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of May 13-17. There were no roll calls in the Senate.

$300 MILLION FOR LOCAL ROADS AND BRIDGES (H 3379)

House 156-0, approved a bill providing $300 million for maintenance and repair of local roads and bridges in cities and towns across the state. The money would be borrowed by the state through the sale of bonds. This represents an increase of $100 million above last year's $200 million funding.

Supporters said this funding is crucial for cities and towns for many local projects and to help them keep the roads and bridges safe.

Following expected Senate approval, the bill will go Gov. Deval Patrick for his signature. That, however, will not quite open the spigot for the money to go to local communities. A second bill to authorize the specific terms of the sale of the bonds still has to be filed by Gov. Patrick and approved by both branches. Local officials fear a reoccurrence of last year when a delay resulted in the funds not being distributed until August, missing several months of prime construction time in the spring and summer.

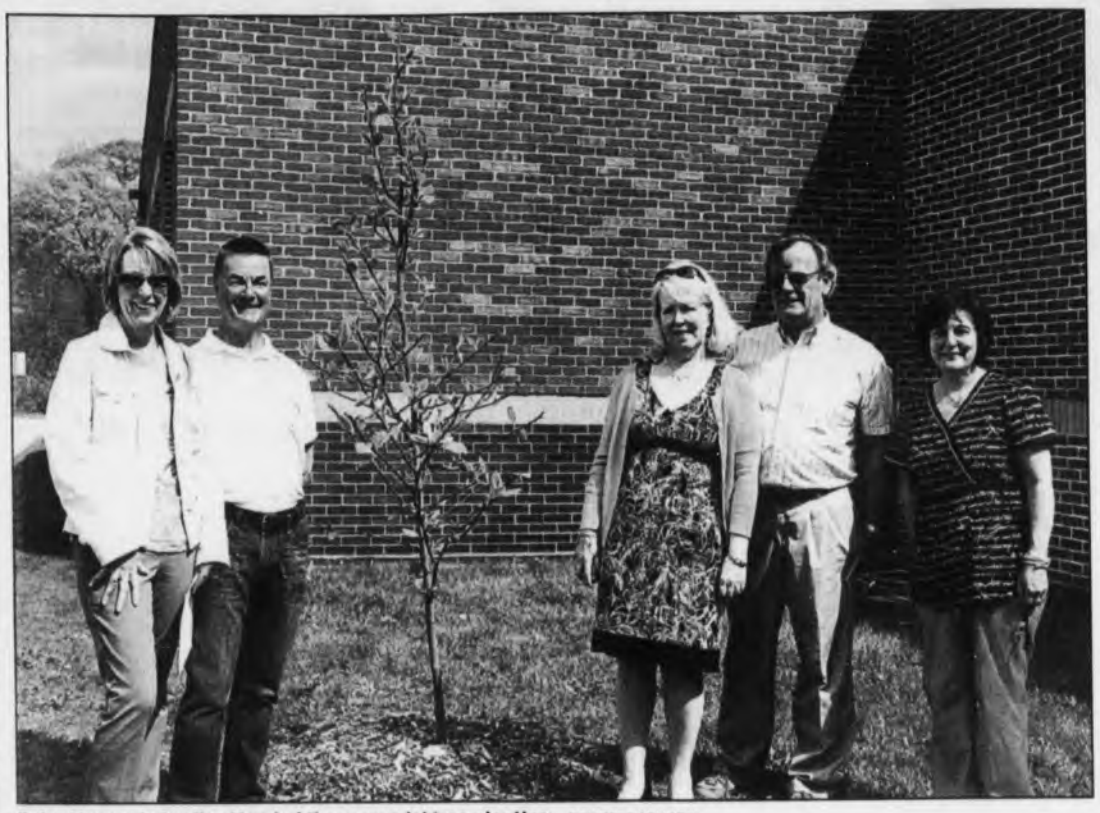
Lt. Gov. Tim Murray responded to municipal leaders' concerns. "I certainly think the governor would be willing to consider some type of effort in terms of getting some money out the door this spring so we can take advantage of the spring season on a pro-rated, tentative basis," said Murray.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $300 million.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ELECT PRESIDENT VIA NATIONAL POPULAR VOTE (H 591) - The Election Laws Committee held a hearing on a bill that would repeal a 2010 law that made Massachusetts a member of the Agreement Among the States to Elect the President by National Popular Vote. The agreement would require states that join the pact to cast all of their electoral votes for the presidential candidate who wins a majority of the national popular vote in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. The pact would become effective when states representing at least 270 electoral votes — a majority of the 538-vote Electoral College — join this compact. States currently have a number of electoral votes equal to the number of senators and representatives that the state has in Congress. This endeavor is led by Fair Vote, a national group that says California, Hawaii, Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, Vermont, Washington have already joined the agreement. These states possess 132 electoral votes — 49 percent of the 270 necessary to activate the agreement.

OTHER ELECTION LAW CHANGES - The Election Laws Committee's agenda also includes bills that would require the use of paper ballots in Massachusetts and prohibit the use of all electronic voting machines (S 324); allow voters who do not speak English to have a translator accompany them into the voting booth (H 577); allow 17-year-olds to vote in local city and town elections (H 583); and give voters the option of voting for "none of the above" on all election ballots (H 642).



HEALTH AND SEX ED - An Education Committee hearing focused on health and sex education. The agenda included legislation that would provide child exploitation awareness education, including education about child abduction and child sexual abuse, to students in grades 2 through 8 (S 274); require health education classes to cover eye health and exercises (S 201); and make an exemption to the current state law requiring parental notification of any sex education classes and allowing parents to excuse their children from them (H 509). This bill would exempt from the notification "any material designed to promote tolerance and respect, including difference in sexual orientation, when sexual implications are not discussed."

NO SMOKING IN CARS WITH YOUNG KIDS (H 1984) - The Public Health Committee heard testimony on a proposal that would prohibit smoking in cars in which there is a child who is required to be in a child passenger restraint. Under Massachusetts law, children must use a restraint until they are at least eight years old or at least 57 inches tall. Supporters said that second-hand smoke causes respiratory problems, ear infections and mental health disorders including depression. No one testified against the bill, but Richard Smith, a representative from cigarette manufacturer Reynolds America, observed the hearing. He did not testify, noting that company does not take a position on smoking bans.

OTHER TOBACCO RESTRICTIONS - The Public Health Committee's hearing also included measures that would prohibit smoking in all condominiums, apartments and multi-family homes and allow it only in single-family, stand-alone residences (H 1897); prohibit smoking anywhere in senior multi-unit residences where an inhabitant uses oxygen (S 1028); and prohibit the possession of cigarettes and other tobacco by anyone under age 18 (H 1904).

TAX DEDUCTIONS AND EXEMPTIONS - A Revenue Committee hearing included bills that would provide up to a $5,000 tax deduction for the cost of gluten-free food that is in excess of the cost of food containing gluten (S 1388); establish a 5-day meals tax free holiday in 2013 during which diners would not be required to pay the state's 6.25 percent meals tax (S 1384); and exempt from the state's 6.25 percent meals tax any liquor served in private rooms, not open to the public, at veterans organizations and other fraternal organizations (H 2493).

ARBOR DAY

Celebration of life at Deer Hill School

By Joan Carlo
Special to the Mariner

In April, the community of Deer Hill School lost a dear friend, Peter Hannon. Peter was a member of the custodial staff for the past six years.

The first Arbor Day was celebrated on April 10,1872, in the state of Nebraska. J. Sterling Morton encouraged the planting trees as an act of kindness to our neighbors, friends and future generations. The trees we plant clean the air, create places of recreation, beautify our neighborhoods, provide dwellings for wildlife, conserve energy and topsoil. The celebration of Arbor Day is a priceless time for children to take positive action to make the world a better place.

In April, the community of Deer Hill School lost a dear friend, Peter Hannon. Peter was a member of the custodial staff for the past six years. He was known by his colleagues to be a person of character well respected for his intellect, creativity, warmth and sense of humor. He was an outstanding employee with strong work ethics and a clear sense of priority. So well liked and respected the school came together for a dedication in his memory attended by his beloved family. He too made challenging efforts to make the world a better place.

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset donated two Yellow Magnolia Trees, one to honor Peter Hannon, and a priceless opportunity to continue the vision of J. Sterling Morton for future generations, the celebration of Arbor Day.

The Massachusetts Nursery and Landscape and Massachusetts Flower Growers' Associations are encouraging a new program for everyone to "Plant Something!" On May 15, tools were picked up; their motto, "Don't Just Stand There, Plant Something!" Chris Kennedy, Kennedy Country Gardens, added hydrangeas and low shrubs for the completion of the entrance at Deer Hill School. We need your help, if 1 million trees were planted 141 years ago we too can make it happen.

"Acts of creation are ordinarily reserved for gods and poets. To plant a pine, one only needs a shovel!" by Aldo Leopold.

Mal McCunney, who chaired this year's prom planning committee, said, "I have a picture of my daughter in the Mariner when she was six, looking up at these girls like they were rock stars. Now, this is her first year" attending prom and walking the red carpet.

"It's a beautiful tradition in Cohasset," McCunney added. "It really is unique. People in a lot of other towns gather in one spot [for pre-prom photos] but this is different."

Cohasset's prom kicks off with the red carpet walk before the main event, held at the Venezia Waterfront Restaurant and Banquet Facility in Boston, culminating with a post-prom party at a top-secret location. Those attending post-prom simply bring their changes of clothes with them to Town Hall, where they line up for the pre-prom gala, leaving their stuff with parent volunteers who make sure that everything is waiting for the kids at the post-prom party.

It's clear that a lot of planning goes into Cohasset's one-of-a-kind prom night. Herth credited the prom planning committee, which has many volunteers.

Part of the extensive planning for the night includes striving to keep the students safe. That's what all the supervision – from pre-prom to post – is about.

"We want to keep them safe, keep them off the roads, and give them another type of venue where they can continue celebrating into the night," Herth said of post-prom. The party location "is absolutely top secret," she added. "Kids do not know till they're dropped off by the trolleys where it is or what the theme is, but the place is transformed, and the food and activities will reflect the theme."

The committee also works to transform the town common into a red carpet photo op that would turn Tinsel Town green with envy.

"We try to transform the common into a magical place," said Herth. "Lucky for us, the Village Greenery is extremely generous and lets us take whatever plants we want for the night... dozens of plants, trees, shrubs, grasses to transform the place so that when the kids walk out, it's like being in a garden."

It all adds up to an "only in Cohasset" kind of prom night.

"Cohasset goes all out," said Herth. "The community really embraces the kids."

Prom night activities

Cohasset High School's prom includes activities before and after the night's main event: the prom held at the Venezia Waterfront Restaurant and Banquet Facility in Boston.

Pre-prom starts at 5:30 p.m. on Friday. Students are to arrive around 5 p.m. at the back of Town Hall. If they have not turned in permission slips, they are not allowed to attend the event or post-prom party. This policy is strictly adhered to for safety purposes. Students drop off their changes of clothes with parent volunteers; their items will be labeled and waiting for them at the post-prom party later that night.

The pre-prom precession begins between 5:30 and 5:45. The pre-prom gala is the perfect photo op for family and friends before students board trolleys bound for the Venezia.

The trolleys later pick students up and take them to the top-secret location for the post-prom party.

The rain date is June 20, same times.

All returning swimmers and divers can register now at www.cohassetswimteam.com. The deadline for sign ups is June 1. For more information about swim team, contact Patrice Smith at plsmith68@comcast.net.

For more information about dive team, contact Lynda Parks at glparks@comcast.net.

BOYS TENNIS

Skippers win

The Cohasset boys tennis team picked up another victory, beating Scituate 3-2 in a non-league tilt Monday.

Cohasset No. 2 singles player Eric Weinstein beat Scituate's Matt Logue 3-2 to seal the victory.

"It was very close," Cohasset coach Ann Thomae said.

Cohasset will be playing in the MIAA Tournament soon.

SAILING

Navigation Course

The Cohasset Sailing Club is sponsoring an Introduction to Navigation course on two weeknights during the month of June. The course is taught by the US Coast Guard Auxiliary and includes use of navigation tools, chart features, plotting a course, measuring distance, speed-time-distance, and positioning.

Navigation tools and charts will be provided.

Please call T.J. O'Brien at 781-383-2234 if you are interested in attending (space is limited).

Skippers win tournament invitation

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset baseball team accomplished a big goal last week when it beat Monomoy 9-4 to clinch an invitation to the MIAA Div. 4 South Sectional Tournament.

Connor O'Brien pitched four scoreless innings and Brendan O'Connell chipped in two shutout frames.

Colin Gideon-Murphy knocked in four runs and the Skippers made the cut.

The turnaround from sub-.500 team to tournament worthy had some reasons.

"We have been cutting down on errors, we've gotten more consistent pitching, and we're getting more players on base," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We're getting timely hitting, all good things. The one constant despite winning or losing is the kids have and continue to work hard and have stayed positive."

With the tournament invitation secured, Afanasiw said his team will work on playing

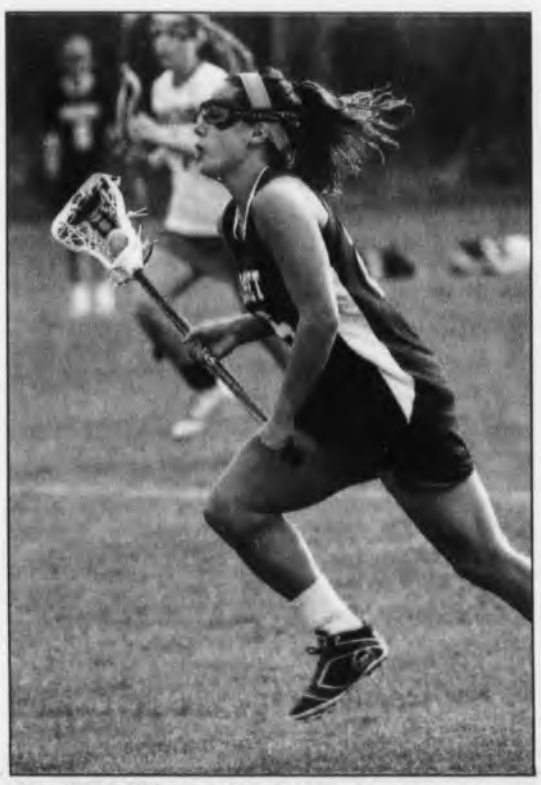
Girls close regular season with win

The Cohasset Mariner



The Cohasset girl's lacrosse team had a busy week with some great games, crazy weather and a record breaking senior night.

The week started with a trip to Weston last Thursday on a beautiful but very warm day to play the always tough Wildcats. The 16-13 win was a great tune-up for the upcoming MIAA tournament as the first half was a tightly contested match. Weston started out quickly with a goal in the first minute before Hope Kissick answered back with the first of her six goals on the day. The final goal was a historic one for Kissick as she tied the CHS all time scoring record of 248 total points (goals and assists).

Following the first two goals by Kissick, Corey Golden scored her first of four goals on the day on a hard, low shot. Callie O'Neill then made a great move by switching from her right to left hand and firing one home. The final goal of the half for the Skippers was scored on a great pass from Ally Leahy to Madigan O'Neill to make the score 9-8 Weston at the break.

The Wildcats started fast again with the first two goals of the second half to push the lead to 11-8. Cohasset tightened up their defense in front of goalie Taylor Frederick

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team continues to roll, winning several big games down the stretch to with the South Shore League title, and help solidify their standing as one of the top teams in Division 3 with a 13-3 record.

Wednesday night, the Skippers made Senior Night a memorable one with an 8-7 win over visiting BC High.

The defense led the charge in the BC High win, playing an outstanding game against a strong opponent.

Junior Will Golden led the charge with four goals over the Div. 1 Eagles, and Nick Tangherlini added a goal and three assists.

A game earlier, Cohasset beat Div. 2 Scituate 14-8, slowing the Sailors' bid for a spot in the tournament.

Colin Whelan scored three goals and added four assists, and John Mills added a pair of goals and three helpers.

its best baseball to prepare for the tournament.

"Now that we have secured a tourney berth, our attention is to try and win out, so we can possibly tie for a share of the league crown," Afanasiw said.

That didn't happen, as Cohasset lost a tough 6-2 game to East Bridgewater Wednesday, dropping Cohasset to 11-9.

East Bridgewater won the South Shore League title.

Afanasiw credited a number of players for outstanding effort.

"Offensively, Connor Goetz, Terence Doonan and Colin Gideon-Murphy have really been the most consistent week in and week out," he said. "Each has numerous mulitple hit games already. Pitching-wise, Shane Haggerty has been fabulous, but Connor O'Brien and Brendan O'Connell have thrown a lot of quality innings and whenever they are on the mound, they give us a chance to win."

and make things very difficult for Weston the rest of the way.

Defenders Molly and Megan Fitzgerald repeatedly stopped Weston scoring bids and Frederick made key saves to stem the tide. The Skippers got their offense going as Mackenzie Axelson rushed up the field and rolled the crease before squeezing between two Wildcat defenders to score the first of three straight Cohasset goals to tie the game at 11. Kathryn Dunn followed Axelson's goal and Kissick finished the run with her fifth of the day.

Weston took their final lead at 12-11 with 14 minutes left in the game before Golden tied the game again with her third goal on a great pass from Leahy. Cohasset completely dominated the rest of the game as Leahy took the ball behind the cage and threw a laser pass to Kristin Alexander who quick sticked the ball home for her first of two goals in the final 10 minutes. The Wildcats started running out of gas as the Skippers gained strength over the final stretch and Molly Fitzgerald took the ball away three times to thwart Weston scoring threats. Kissick and Golden scored the final two goals as Cohasset extended the lead to 16-12 before a desperation score with no time left by Weston made the final score 16-13.

The Skippers then travelled to Hanover on Tuesday and completely dominated the first 22 minutes of the game before a delay was called due to thunder and lightning. The weather would not relent and the score of 12-1 would be erased and the game canceled due to the regular season ending on Wednesday with the home finale against Martha's Vineyard.

Thankfully the weather cooperated on Wednesday and the cloudy skies didn't deliver any thunder and lightning on a wonderful Senior Night.

Tri-Captains Hope Kissick, Kristin Alexander and Kylie Coffman were honored before the game with their parents and a player tunnel made up of excited youth players and their teammates.

Kissick made it a night to remember as she scored five goals and broke the all-time scoring record for CHS with her 253 career points.

It was only fitting that Alexander would make the pass to Kissick as the lifelong friends finished their regular season CHS careers in style. Coffman made several highlight reel stops in the cage and finished the night with 10 saves. Alexander scored two goals of her own and added four assists as the Skippers rolled to a 21-8 win. Coach Kully Reardon was proud of the seniors.

"Tonight was a great celebration for three great leaders and teammates," she said. "They have really rallied their team in the last half of the season to play our best lacrosse and peak at the perfect time."

Cohasset finished the regular season at 7-6-2.

Tournament seedings were released yesterday.

beatable sophomore Emma Davis at the top of the ladder.

In the meantime, coach Gigi Meehan will continue to try out some different combinations, knowing that the Skippers have the depth to win with a variety of lineups.

"Oh my gosh, it's an abundance of wealth," said Meehan, in her 22nd season. "Emma (Smith) should slide right back in because her fitness is so good. She's played so much tennis that a couple of weeks off might be a good thing for her."

Until Smith is ready, Meehan noted, "It's nice to see other kids be able to slip in."

The highlight of the Hopkinton conquest came at No. 1 doubles, where senior captains Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford rallied, 7-6 (7-3), 3-6, 6-4. The pair trailed 4-1 in the first and third sets. On Tuesday they fended off two match points in rallying for the decisive win in a 3-2 defeat of Notre Dame Academy.

"On any given day they can beat anyone," Meehan said.

Cohasset also won at No. 2 doubles – a 6-2, 6-4 victory by freshman Caroline Van Etten and junior Caroline Evans.

Davis, the defending state individual champ, posted a 6-1, 6-1 win at No. 1 singles. She has yet to lose a high school match.

Cohasset lost the other singles positions, although No. 2 Sara Corry (6-3, 6-4) and No. 3 Emily Livingstone (6-1, 6-1) played well. Corry, a senior captain, dropped ice hockey this year to concentrate on tennis, and Meehan seems impressed.

"She's been playing lights-out," the coach said. "She's been a very good utility player for the last two years, but I never thought she could step up and play at this level."

ROWING

Row this summer with Cohasset Maritime Institute

Want to spend some time on the water this summer? Registration is now open for youth rowing at Cohasset Maritime Institute.

Youth entering 8th grade and higher, experienced and beginners, are welcome to row with CMI.

Most kids row for twice a week, for the 8-week season (June 24-August 15). The 8-week season runs June 24-August 15. The first week will be modified hours because Cohasset and Scituate schools are still in session.

Experienced rowers will row Mondays and Wednesdays afternoons.

New rowers will row Tuesdays and Thursdays with afternoon and morning sessions offered.

If you aren't sure about rowing, have plans to be away for much of the summer and/or considering rowing as a fall sport, you can try a 4-day program. These Try It weeks will be offered three times this summer: June 17-20 at 3-5pm, July 15-18 and August 12-15 at 845-1045.

Spots are limited so act now.

GIRLS TENNIS

Learning about themselves

Tennis team builds character through season

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

As the Cohasset girls tennis team raced to a 14-0 start that included both one-sided wins and hard fought battles against top competition, Cohasset assistant coach Deb Beal took the time to share her thoughts on this season's outstanding squad.

"The girl's tennis team sits at 10-0 (now 14-0), quite an impressive record for a team that had so many unanswered questions coming into the season," Beal said in a note to the Cohasset Mariner. "With the return of defending State Champion Emma Davis the ?rst singles position appeared to be sewn up, we never anticipated her needing some down time due to an ankle injury. She is perfectly healthy and has just hit a speed bump."

The next spot in the lineup also looked to be set.

"Second singles also appeared to be a no contest with Emma Smith who has really shown her true colors as an athlete through her four year career here," Beal said. "Emma has matured and has made the commitment to take her tennis just one step higher and her accomplishments have been very impressive. We never anticipated her needing some additional rest days dues to a tight lower back."

The team has tried a few things at the third singles spot.

"Third singles has been a revolving door only because the options are so rich," Beal said. "We have junior Bri Crough who has emerged as a tough competitor coming off a very successful varsity soccer season, we have Caroline Evans who has been studying tennis for two years and is now clearly ready to compete and win, then there is Gabrielle LeMoine who has been a proven workhorse and more than capable of this position. What we didn't realize though was Gabrielle was going to need a few weeks of rest to recover from an illness, then to add insult to injury we had senior captain Meredith Spofford get hit with an illness that sidelined her for a match.

"Despite all that adversity we were able to adjust and tweak and still remain undefeated. As the season began we knew we had some serious tennis talent, we were returning a large number of varsity starters. Our ?rst doubles team of Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford was returning and they were senior captains. That's a strong combination that has a lot of experience."

Second doubles was a chance to test different players in different combinations.

"Our second doubles spot was open and has been tested all season long, Beal said. "I am very con?dent that we have been creating and studying combinations. The one most impressive thing about this group of girls is that although tennis can be a very individual sport there is not one kid here that wouldn't step aside for a teammate. They train together and they play together, win or lose they are united as one very strong unit. This is a group of very unique individuals, there are kids like Emma Davis who play tennis year round and there are kids who represent their high school in three different sports and ?nd a way to balance it all."

Deb Beal is an assistant tennis coach as well as the long-time varsity soccer coach and girls varsity hockey coach.

BAY STATE GAMES

Registration open for the 2013 Bay State Summer Games

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation is pleased to announce that registration for the 2013 Bay State Summer Games is now open. The annual Olympic-style amateur sports festival features 26 sports for athletes of all ages and abilities.

The Bay State Games involves participants from over 300 communities in Massachusetts and over 7,000 participants annually. The Games are now in its 32nd year and over the past three decades more than a quarter of a million participants have competed. Bay State Games offers the opportunity for athletes to showcase their talents whether they are beginners or future Olympians.

The 2013 Bay State Summer Games is scheduled for Friday, July 5 through Sunday, July 21 with regional qualifiers and tryouts held through the month of June. The competitions are held in top-level sporting facilities such as Bentley University, Harvard University, Regis College, Wentworth Institute of Technology, Worcester State, University of Massachusetts Boston and the New England Sports Center.

Competitions are offered in archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, juniors basketball, baton twirling, diving, fencing, field hockey, 6v6 field hockey, ice hockey, judo, lacrosse, pistol shooting, rifle shooting, rugby, soccer, 7v7 soccer, softball, swimming, synchronized swimming, table tennis, track and field, trap shooting, volleyball, weightlifting and wrestling. Masters divisions are also available in swimming and track and field.

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation also offers the opportunity for student athletes to receive a college scholarship. The Future Leaders Scholarship awards six $2,000 college scholarships to Bay State Games participants who demonstrate leadership through community service, academic excellence and athletic achievement. High school students, who are Massachusetts residents in the 11th grade during the 2012-13 academic year, register and agree to participate in the 2013 Bay State Games, which they qualify for, are eligible for the Future Leaders Scholarship. The registration deadline for the scholarship is Wednesday, June 12.

Walk to benefit Marathon victims

For 39 years Interfaith Social Services has been hosting the South Shore Walk to benefit South Shore families in need of food, counseling and emergency assistance. This year a portion of the proceeds will also benefit Marathon victims and their families.

Only a few days after the devastating tragedy in Boston, over 300 local residents participated in Interfaith Social Services' South Shore Walk on April 20. Since 1974, Interfaith's walkathon has generated funding and awareness about poverty on the South Shore. This year the event will also help families affected by the Marathon bombing.

Participants came from all over Massachusetts, including some who ran and volunteered at the marathon. As walkers gathered many people in the crowd could be overheard discussing the events of the previous week.

The spirit of celebration and community permeated every aspect of the event. The scenic 3-mile route around the Quincy neighborhood of Squantum culminated with a party at Quincy's Kennedy Center. Walkers enjoyed lunch courtesy of Stars on Hingham Harbor, Tedeschi's Food Shops and Atria Marina Place. For kids, young and old, there was a variety of activities such as raffles, a silent auction, face painting, a bouncy house, a photo booth, frozen treats donated by New England Ice Cream, an inflatable soccer game provided by the New England Revolution, and massages provided by Facilitated Healing Center.

Interfaith Social Services operates a variety of programs designed to help the community. Each year Interfaith's food pantry serves over 18,000 South Shore residents.

This year's South Shore Walk raised $18,000 for Interfaith's crucial community based programs and The One Fund - Boston.

Cushing takes home Mass-ALFA Award!

Cohasset resident Wayne Cushing, fitness and activities assistant, Allerton House at Central Park Assisted Living Community in Weymouth, was recently honored at the Massachusetts Assisted Living Facilities Association (Mass-ALFA) annual Awards Dinner at the Boston Marriott Burlington. Mass-ALFA President Emily Meyer along with Kiss 108 & TV Diner Boston's Billy Costa presented Cushing with the Program Innovation Award for providing a variety of unique and entertaining resident services programs focused on physical health and education at the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group assisted living community in Weymouth. Welch Group was a Silver Table Sponsor for the event, which honors those who make a difference in the lives of seniors.

Cushing has been with Allerton House at Central Park since 2003 and has instituted programs such as:, Tai-Chi, Chi-Gong, Yoga and the popular program, "Deliteful Dining", which focuses on educating seniors on healthy food choices.

Olivia Coveney of Athens works on her Greek Mask during Greek Day.

Ciara Carlyle, right, jumps in the arms of Caroline Patterson after they placed first with Patrick Hagearty to represent the Syracuse team in the teamwork event.

Cal Osten of Argos rears back before hurling the javelin as far as he could during the Olympics event of Greek Day.

Cyclops is played by Sam Gainey of the Corinthians during a dramatization of the Odyssey. The costumes were made by Lindsay Stelljes.

Seventh-grader Will Bowen of the city-state Argos throws the javelin while they practice for Greek Day which consists of six events: philosophy, theatre, olympic sports, science/ teamwork, Greek masks, and mathematics. The teachers wanted to have the students think about what it means to be an ancient Greek.

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Call before May 31st!

SAVE $250 ON EVERY WINDOW

NO MONEY DOWN NO PAYMENTS NO INTEREST FOR 1 YEAR[1]

Our Fibrex® material is 2X STRONGER THAN VINYL

We use the most stress-free installation method offered by Andersen Windows.
Because our windows are custom-built to fit precisely into your home, we don't disturb your home's interior or exterior. Our Master Installers are craftsmen who are as detailed about their window and patio door installations as they are about their clean up.

Choose your window styles, colors—and even your financing![1]
Choose a program where you don't pay anything for an entire year. Or maybe a low monthly payment feels good to you.[1] Tell us what works in your personal economy.

BUSINESS NOTE

Dependable Cleaners receives environmental award

Dependable Cleaners was awarded with the City of Boston's Mayor Thomas M. Menino's Greenovate Business Award for its commitment to sustainability. The company was recognized Tuesday, May 14, along with 18 additional businesses, at Boston University's new Center for Student Services, a LEED-Gold building.

Dependable Cleaners has spent more than $1 million to eliminate its use of perchloroethylene, which is hazardous to human health and the environment. The company has switched twice to new solvents in order to ensure they are using the most eco-friendly cleaning solutions. Dependable Cleaners also wet cleans garments, which uses no hazardous chemicals. They also have an outside trainer that comes in regularly to develop its team's ability to consistently increase the amount and types of garments that are wet cleaned. Lastly, for every wedding dress cleaned, Dependable Cleaners donates $3 to Carbonfund.org, which more than offsets any carbon created through the cleaning and preservation process.

Dependable Cleaners has spent more than $1 million to eliminate its use of perchloroethylene, which is hazardous to human health and the environment.

"At Dependable Cleaners we take pride in providing our customers with the highest quality of dry cleaning care. Part of that quality is making sure the solutions we are using are environmentally friendly," said Dependable Cleaners' president and chief executive officer Christa Hagearty. "As a mother of three children, it is very important to me that this world is going to be safe for them and their children. With the many innovations there have been in dry cleaning and dry cleaning solutions over the years, it's a no-brainer for us to instill those 'green practices' in our facilities."

BRIEFLY

Read To Ride Program starts

Dependable Cleaners announces its annual Read to Ride program has begun. The program is designed to encourage student to keep up with their reading during the summer months. Students from ages 6-15 will have the chance to win a bike or an exciting prize for every book they read. Since the program's inception in 1999, more than 61,000 books have been read.

"We created the Read to Ride program 15 years ago to make sure children continue to read outside of school throughout the summer months, said Christa Hagearty, president of Dependable Cleaners. "The program could not be possible without our partners – Country Ski & Sport, Farina's Bike Shop and The Patriot Ledger – as well as local schools, organizations, libraries and stores. I also want to thank the parents who have instilled the importance of reading to their children during the summer months."

Participation in Read to Ride is easy. For every book a child reads, they fill out an entry form and submit it at any of the 16 Dependable Cleaner locations or with Dependable Cleaners' Home Delivery Drivers. Entry forms are available at all Dependable Cleaners locations, delivery routes, Country Ski & Sport locations, Farina's Bike Store in Watertown, local libraries, bookstores and online at DependableCleaners.com/Read-Ride.

One grand prizewinner will be drawn each Monday beginning June 3 until Aug. 12, (except for July 1). The grand prizewinners will receive a new bike and helmet. Two additional winners will receive a runner prize. A full list of Read to Ride partners, terms and conditions, and a printable entry form are accessible at: DependableCleaners.com/Read-Ride.

Introduction to navigation

The Cohasset Sailing Club is sponsoring an Introduction to Navigation course on two weeknights during the month of June. The course is taught by the US Coast Guard Auxiliary and includes use of navigation tools, chart features, plotting a course, measuring distance, speed-time-distance, and positioning. Navigation tools and charts will be provided. Call T.J. O'Brien at 781-383-2234 if you are interested in attending (space is limited).

Maggie Lucier paints her block with vivid reds and oranges.

Sixth graders Lilly Patterson, back left, and Jessica Adley, back right, make block impressions for adink ra style printing, which they are learning during their Africa curriculum in social studies. The symbols were worn at funerals and would represent the wearer's feelings towards the deceased.

Isabella Russell cuts out her symbol during her class about African symbols on Thursday.

Kate Nee is focused on cutting her block carefully.

Jonathan Kripke applies paint on his roller to put on his block while learning about adink ra symbols from Ghana.

African art

The South Shore Arts Center brought African adink ra block-printing to Cohasset sixth graders.

This printmaking project is an opportunity for students to learn about a rich historical, artistic tradition from African culture. It teaches them about the language of adink ra symbols, which are still widely used in modern African culture, and the universality of the messages represented by these symbols. The students choose a symbol to reproduce and create their own unique symbol that expresses a facet of their personality. The print they make representing these two symbols side by side is a wonderful expression of their learning across the curriculum, using the arts.

Bradley Albanese makes an impression in foam while making his symbol during his class.

Odysseus Deligiannidis, front with glasses, is at the front of the line while his classmates wait for him to be finished with the roller.

HONORING HEROES

MEMORIAL DAY

"How important it is for us to recognize and celebrate our heroes and she-roes!"
– Maya Angelou

"As we express our gratitude, we must never forget that the highest appreciation is not to utter words, but to live by them."
– President John F. Kennedy

"In the beginning of a change, the patriot is a scarce man, and brave, and hated and scorned. When his cause succeeds, the timid join him, for then it costs nothing to be a patriot."
– Mark Twain

"Courage is contagious. When a brave man takes a stand, the spines of others are often stiffened."
– The Rev. Billy Graham

Patriotic words

Quotes that honor fallen soldiers

By American Profile

"This nation will remain the land of the free only so long as it is the home of the brave."
– Elmer Davis

"Regard your soldiers as your children, and they will follow you into the deepest valleys. Look on them as your own beloved sons, and they will stand by you even unto death!"
– Sun Tzu

"My heroes are those who risk their lives every day to protect our world and make it a better place — police, firefighters and members of our armed forces."
– Sidney Sheldon

"Courage is almost a contradiction in terms. It means a strong desire to live taking the form of readiness to die."
– G.K. Chesterton

"A hero is someone who has given his or her life to something bigger than oneself."
– Joseph Campbell

"Without heroes, we are all plain people, and don't know how far we can go."
– Bernard Malamud

"I dream of giving birth to a child who will ask, 'Mother, what was war?'"
– Eve Merriam

"Never give in — never, never, never, never, in nothing great or small, large or petty, never give in except to convictions of honor and good sense. Never yield to force; never yield to the apparently overwhelming might of the enemy."
– Winston Churchill

Taco tips

The inspiration for a great taco can be found in many places. This summer, enjoy a global taste experience with these taco and margarita ideas:

Tex-Mex

Create your own puffy taco shell, widely served at restaurants. The make-at-home secret: flour tortillas transformed into puffy shells by cooking in oil.

Chipotle Chicken Puffy Tacos: Puffy taco shells stuffed with pulled rotisserie chicken in chipotle sauce, topped with fresh guacamole, salsa and favorite toppings like lettuce, tomato and queso fresco.

Citrus Margarita with Smoky Chile Salt: A triple citrus (orange, lemon, lime) margarita with a smoky chile salt rim. Chile salt is hand mixed with fine sea salt, ancho and chipotle chile powders.

Thai

This taco features the unexpected flavor of green apple, matched with a margarita that's light on calories.

Coconut Curry Chicken Tacos: Grilled tortillas filled with coconut curry chicken, green apple and Thai basil, topped with mango chile sauce and crunchy peanuts.

Mango Thai Basil Margarita: A mango margarita infused with the flavors of lime and Thai basil.

Vietnamese

Try this combination of flavors that takes its cues from the popular Banh Mi sandwich.

Banh Mi Pork Tacos: Spicy, honey-glazed pork wrapped in warm tortillas, topped with carrot daikon slaw, Sriracha mayo and fresh toppings like jalapenos, cilantro and cucumber slices.

Cucumber Cilantro Margarita: Muddled cucumber and cilantro add fresh flavor to a lime margarita.

Middle Eastern

This gluten-free, vegetarian taco highlights spicy harissa and sweet potatoes, along with a "skinny" margarita.

Harissa Roasted Sweet Potato Tacos: Warm corn tortillas filled with harissa roasted sweet potatoes, topped with herbed feta, Greek yogurt and crunchy quinoa.

Honey Lemon Margarita: A fresh, light and lemony margarita sweetened with a touch of honey.

White chocolate lightens up spring desserts

By Lisa Messinger

SXC.HU COM

Everything lightens up for spring, and chocolate should be no exception. Want to give your seasonal baby shower, wedding, graduation, tea or potluck an airy look and flavor? Prepare recipes that feature white chocolate, or just substitute it for milk chocolate in favorite recipes.

White chocolate is originally a European term and, technically, not a true chocolate because there is no chocolate liquor.

However, it gets its name from the cocoa butter (32 percent in extremely fine versions) in the product, which often gives it a light chocolate flavor. It also contains milk, sugar and vanilla and is made in the same manner as chocolate. Less expensive versions often use vegetable fats instead of cocoa butter and still usually taste rich and creamy.

These days, white chocolate is just as readily available as dark chocolate in bars, morsels and frostings in the baking aisles of most major supermarkets, yet it's still often perceived as exotic and gourmet.

And, just as a home's living room looks dramatic when done in all white fabrics, carpets and furnishings, so does a dessert that's engulfed in bright white.

"In the aftermath of the glitzy ... Trump-dominated, more-is-better 1980s, chefs around the country became enamored of decadent white chocolate in cakes and cheesecakes, cookies and ice creams," notes Judith M. Fertig in "All-American Desserts."

One of her examples, an incredibly rich White Chocolate Ice Cream, shows how easy this elegant touch is for busy cooks. To yield a quart, just substitute 10 ounces white chocolate, broken into small pieces, into your favorite ice cream maker recipe that calls for melting first with 3/4 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 2 cups heavy cream at room temperature. The richness that results is a far more indulgent treat than even many of the best vanilla ice creams.

But what's really fun as we lighten up during spring are the highest-impact desserts that are draped with the chic white, like a glorious white fudge that hides dried apricots, crystallized ginger and melted marshmallows within, or this triple-layered, extremely moist Austrian white chocolate torte with lemon-accented powdered sugar frosting:

Lisa Messinger is a first-place winner in food writing from the Association of Food Journalists and the author of seven food books.

Austrian White Chocolate Torte

Ingredients:
- 2 1/4 cups chopped walnuts
- 1 1/2 cups white chocolate morsels
- 3/4 cup biscuit baking mix
- 3 3/4 cups, plus 3/4 cup powdered (confectioners') sugar
- 6 eggs
- 1 stick (1/2 cup) butter, softened
- 2 to 3 T lemon juice

Yields 8 to 10 servings.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Coat three (8-inch) round cake pans with nonstick cooking spray. Dust with flour to coat; shake out any excess.

In the work bowl of a food processor fitted with a metal blade, combine the walnuts, white chocolate morsels, biscuit mix and 3/4 cup of the powdered sugar. Process for about 2 minutes, or until the nuts are finely ground. Add the eggs. Process for about 1 minute, or until smooth.

Pour into prepared pans, spreading evenly. Bake for about 20 minutes or until the torte springs back when lightly pressed. Let stand on a rack for 10 minutes. Turn the layers onto a rack to cool completely.

To prepare frosting: In the bowl of an electric mixer, combine t he butter, 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice and the remaining 3 3/4 cups of sugar. Blend on low speed for about 1 minute or until moistened.

Beat on high speed for 3 minutes longer, or until smooth and fluffy. Add up to 1 tablespoon more lemon juice, if needed, to make spreadable frosting. Frost the torte between layers and on the top, but not on the sides.

White Chocolate Fudge with Ginger and Apricots

Ingredients:
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
- 1 t ground ginger
- 2/3 cup (5 fluid-oz can) evaporated milk
- 2 T butter
- 2 cups miniature marshmallows
- 2 cups white chocolate morsels
- 1 1/4 cups sweetened dried apricots, coarsely chopped
- 1/2 cup crystallized ginger

Yields about 50 pieces fudge.

Line an 8- or 9-inch square baking pan with foil.

Combine sugar and ground ginger in medium, heavy-duty saucepan. Add evaporated milk and butter. Bring to a full rolling boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil, stirring constantly, for 4 to 5 minutes (to 234 F). Remove from heat.

Stir in marshmallows, white chocolate morsels, apricots and crystallized ginger. Stir vigorously for 1 minute, or until marshmallows are melted. Pour into prepared pan; refrigerate until firm, about 1 1/2 hours. Lift from pan; remove foil. Cut into pieces.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Beware of hidden fat in sauces

Many sauces, gravies and dressings tend to be high in fat and sodium.

Watch out for foods that are prepared with a lot of oil, butter, or topped with heavy condiments, such as mayonnaise.

You don't have to do away with sauces and condiments all together, however — just use less or put them on the side.

Reducing extras will help you manage your weight.

Hot dog! Rolling machines back by popular demand

The hot dogs roll round and round. Perhaps the Swallows are singing on the juke, "It ain't the meat, it's the motion."

Every diner, every lunch stand had a stainless-steel hot-dog roller, usually on the counter, so aromatic, so tempting.

You didn't order a dog, just point.

The better machines had a bun warmer on top to complete the nirvana.

Of course, our mothers were concerned. It was the era of polio. The dogs could be rolling for, you know, hours, out in the open germs, people sneezing on them.

JIM HILLIBISH

We were willing to take the chance for a 25-cent lunch, Coke extra.

Off to the side were the condiments. We'd pig out on them, trying to extend our quarter lunch. After all, the onions, relish, mustard and catsup were "vegetables."

Dog rollers began disappearing in the 1960s. There were rumors they displeased health inspectors. The dogs went back into the boiling water in the kitchen, leaving us longing for that taste.

Rollers heat the sausages, causing the fat to ooze out. The skins fry in it, becoming crisp. Even skinless hot dogs will develop a pleasant crust unattainable by boiling or steaming.

Well, dog lovers, take heart. Roller machines are on a comeback. You could spend $200 to $800 for commercial ones down to $29 for home use, including bun warmer.

Walmart, Amazon and other retailers have them. A five-roller unit cooks four dogs.

Nostalgia Electrics' Vintage roller cooks eight dogs over adjustable heat while warming the buns in a tray on top, list $65, $40 online and $27 when in stock at Walmart.

Chili Dogs

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 garlic clove, minced
- 1 cup tomato juice
- 1 can tomato paste, 6 oz
- 2 T chili powder
- Dash hot pepper sauce
- 1 t sugar
- Salt and pepper to taste

Brown beef, add other ingredients and simmer 10 minutes. Enough for eight hot dogs.

Downtown Dogs

(aka "The Works")
- 1 1/2 cups mild cheddar cheese, shredded
- 3/4 cup tomato, chopped
- 3 T onion, chopped
- 2 T sweet pickle relish
- Mustard
- 8 hot dogs
- 8 hot dog buns

Serve on the side; allow your guests to choose.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 3, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An apparent act of injustice might turn out to be either an error in judgment or just plain stupidity. So calm down and cool off, and let the explanations roll out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's upsetting when someone you trusted might have failed you. But with new opportunities ahead, you'll soon be too busy to feel even a wee bit sorry for yourself.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A sense of uncertainty could be a good reason to change your position on an important matter. Someone close might try to talk you out of it, but it's your decision to make.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Being too zealous in pursuing your goal could create some resistance. Try to be more mindful of what you ask people to do, and they'll be more likely to do it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Things change as you go from being ignored to being Lionized once again. This is a good time to reintroduce those previously rejected ideas to a more receptive audience.

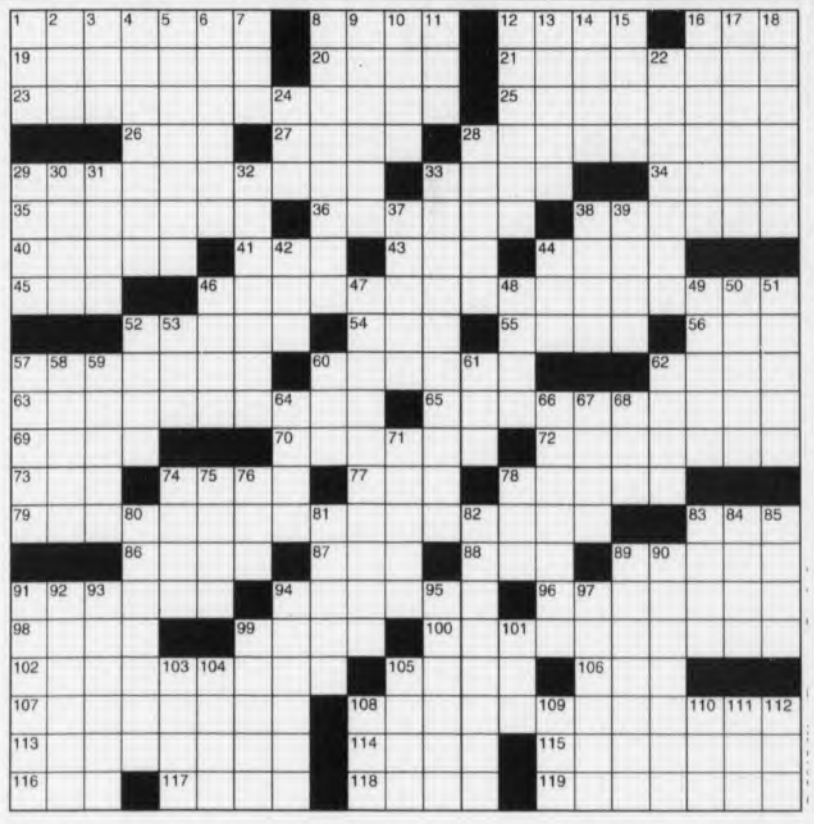
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone new in your life creates both anticipation as well as anxiety. Avoid the potential for misunderstandings by watching what you say and how you say it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch your budget so that you don't overspend now and have less to invest when the time is right later on. Arrange to share your weekend with someone special.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The temptation to involve yourself in a friend's or family member's personal problems is laudable. But get the facts before you make a firm commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to keep the faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You've reached an important point in your ongoing pursuit of your goals. You might now want to consider letting someone you trust join you on your journey.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You've been going through a spate of uncertainty involving people you care for. But it might be time to take a stand on a position you feel sure you can defend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Treading water keeps you busy, but it won't get you where you need to go. Time to stop making excuses and to start moving ahead toward your goals.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Honeymoon over for new board

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The last two Board of Selectmen meetings were a study in contrasts.

While the five-member board regrouped in its meeting just a few days following the annual Town Election – that unseated an incumbent, returned a former member to the board and elected a new selectman – Tuesday's meeting revealed the potential for more controversy ahead.

A few sparks flew over financial matters and launching a search for a permanent Town Manager.

The first meeting the reorganized board held since the May 11 election was short and sweet, wrapping around 8:30 free of vitriol or verbal sparring. The new board appeared to present a united front during the May 14 meeting, welcoming newcomers Karen Quigley, who had been a selectman before, and Steve Gaumer, a longtime Capital Budget member. The board agreed to discuss goals and objectives for the year at their next meeting.

The May 28 meeting, however, started off with a 6:30 p.m. executive session that lasted over an hour, pertaining to litigation between the town and fired Town Manager Michael Coughlin and ex-police chief Mark DeLuca, both seeking reinstatement.

The regularly scheduled selectmen meeting, slated to Perfect ending to weeklong observances

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Monday was a warm, sunny day in Cohasset — a perfect day for families and friends to gather at the harbor and honor the service men and women who have given their lives to protect the nation. Crowds gathered at the harbor to pay tribute to America's soldiers during an uplifting ceremony at noon on May 27.

Cohasset's annual Memorial Day observance includes a week of ceremonies capped off with a parade on Monday. It has grown over the years from a one-day event to a full-blown week of activities, according to Tom Wigmore, head of Cohasset's Sons for the American Legion. Wigmore organizes the event each year along with his wife, Deirdre, who heads the Cohasset chapter of the Daughters of Local businesswoman pens first children's book

Special to the Mariner

Cohasset's own Diane Danielson has an ambitious bucket list and a full career involving everything from being a lawyer to having her own business That list also included writing a book, of which she has already published several, but the one she most recently authored was close to her heart, specifically, her desire to write a children's book. Her to do list was made a little shorter now that she has recently published "There Is a Mouse That Is Haunting Our House," a children's book with illustrations by Danielson's niece, Ayana LaSalle of Marshfield. The book, as Danielson describes it, is a way to "capture a special time" in the lives of both she and her son Andrew Sullivan, when the two moved from Brookline to the South Shore to be closer to family back in 2005.

"Moving to the suburbs from the city was a big transition for us both. The quiet of Cohasset was a sharp contrast to the activity and noise in Brookline Village," says Danielson. "The 100 plus year old house that we moved into here had been

Clash on TM search

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's reorganized Board of Selectmen could not agree on when to launch a search for a permanent town manager.

Cohasset has had four town managers in the past three years. Michael Milanoski has been Cohasset's acting town manager since March 2012, replacing Michael Coughlin. Milanoski's current employment contract is through December 2013. Coughlin is suing the town for reinstatement.

Over the past year a majority of the selectmen supported Milanoski and seemed intent in keeping him onboard for as long as possible. Selectman Martha Gjesteby has been asking her fellow board members to issue a Request for Proposals (RFP) to search for a permanent town manager, stating that Milanoski is not qualified.

Newly elected Karen Quigley (who previously served on the board) said during her selectman campaign that her first order of business would be to support Gjesteby's request; Quigley made good on that promise during her first selectmen meeting on May 14 and again this week.

However, the rest of the selectmen were not quick to jump onboard with Quigley and Gjesteby. The board could not agree on when and how to start the search.

Both Gjesteby and Quigley urged the rest of the board to vote to start the search, while selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy argued that they were not ready and that a vote that night "doesn't define anything." Newly elected Steve Gaumer insisted that the board set its objectives first.

After a long, contentious discussion, the board decided to continue the discussion to their June 4 meeting and take a "symbolic vote" on whether they should launch the search.

PICTURE THIS

Charles Coe

Name: LTC Charles Coe, OD, PhD.

Occupation: US Army Officer.

Best day of your life: Well since my wife doesn't read the Cohasset Mariner, I will say, after being a Patriots fan all my life, seeing the Patriot's beat the Rams to win their first Super Bowl. More seriously, it was after the second date with my wife when I knew she was the one.

Best vacation: Skiing down Mount Blanc in France; living and skiing in Colorado for three years was better, though.

Favorite season: Depends on where I am living... Cohasset: Summer. Fort Hood in central Texas: most definitely not summer.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Favorite food, meal or dessert: Anything involving ice cream.

Favorite book: Mmm... Tough choice. I prefer non-fiction and anything by Stephen Ambrose, so "Band of Brothers."

Best movie or actor: "Braveheart."

Best TV show: Nature, NOVA

Best music, group or artist: Bob Dylan...with Bruce Springsteen a close second.

Pet peeve: Being late.

Fun fact: I didn't get married until the age of 50. So there is hope for all you single folks out there!

Person you would most like to meet: Saint Paul so I could ask him what really happened on the Road to Damascus.

Goal: Strive to live my life according to the U.S. Army core values of: Loyalty, Duty, Respect, Selfless Service, Honor, Integrity and Personal Courage.

Biggest worry: The continued polarization of the American political parties resulting in gridlock and the inability to govern.

Best part of Cohasset: The colonial homes, stonewalls, and lots of trees. Very serene. Very special.

Car wash this Saturday

The St. Anthony and St. Paul Youth Group will have a car wash from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., this Saturday, in the parking lot of St. Anthony Parish in Cohasset. People are encouraged to stop by and have cars washed for only $10.

Proceeds will help the youth on their mission trip to New York, where they will rebuild a home for a family who lost everything during Hurricane Sandy.

Head-on crash on Forest Avenue

On Wednesday (May 29) about noontime, there was a head-on collision on Forest Avenue.

Witnesses reported that the 18 year-old driver of a 1999 BMW was speeding north on Forest Avenue when he lost control of his car and crossed the centerline and crashed head-on into a 68 year-old woman, who was operating a 2004 Volvo.

Both operators are from Cohasset and both cars were totaled in the crash. The 18-year-old was issued a citation for speeding and failure to drive in marked lanes. Cohasset Acting Chief of Police William Quigley said that the woman was transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth with non-life threatening injuries.

Blood drive June 7 in Cohasset

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 16 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health.

The American Red Cross hopes residents of Cohasset will take some time out of their busy lives to give the Gift of Life. A Red Cross Blood Drive will take place from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m., on Friday, June 7, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St. At this time, donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals as well as those throughout New England.

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 16 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or for more information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, Red Cross Blood Services at 800-448-3543 or visit: givelife.org.

For more information on the blood donation process, current eligibility guidelines, or to find out if one is eligible to donate, call the American Red Cross nursing line at 800-462-9400, ext. 2210 or visit: newengblood.org.

Cohasset assists Hingham with underage party incident

Bottles thrown at Hingham officer

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Five Cohasset officers responded to a house on East Street in Hingham on Saturday night (May 26) after receiving a call that an officer was in trouble. A Hingham officer, who was responding to a disturbance call, had driven up to the house and when he exited the cruiser was nearly hit by a beer bottle allegedly tossed by a party-goer. The Hingham officer quickly got back into the cruiser as the second bottle was tossed. The incident occurred near the shift change at midnight, so Cohasset officers, who were either about to go on or off duty, responded to help.

Hingham police ended up making 17 arrests, including Hingham and Hull minors and a 21-year-old. The party host, a 51-year-old Hingham man, is being summonsed by Hingham police on 16 counts under the Social Host Law of providing alcohol to minors, among other charges.

Unruly

On Monday (May 20) at about 3:30 p.m., police received a call about an unruly customer at the liquor store in Cohasset Plaza that refused to sell to him because he did not have a proper ID with him. The customer was asked to leave but was upset because he had purchased alcohol there before and felt the manager should have recognized him. The store refused to serve him without a Massachusetts license and he left without further incident.

No-trespass

The Dunkin Donuts on King Street obtained no-trespass orders last week against a now former employee and his friend. Police said the manager caught the then employee stealing a Coca-Cola and wanted him and his friend banned from the establishment.

Trench

A detail officer was able to help an 89-year-old Stoughton woman in a 2011 Lincoln sedan after she went around a gas company detour at Church and Doane streets at about 11:15 a.m. on Tuesday (May 21) and nearly drove into the trench. The car did not have to be towed as the situation was rectified and the woman was able to drive away. She was unfamiliar with the area, police said.

MV vs. tree

Police responded to a single-car accident at 5:13 p.m. on Tuesday (May 21) on Lamberts Lane. Police said a 2012 Volkswagen Passat, operated by a 26-year-old Marshfield man, had driven into a tree. The car had heavy front-end damage. The driver was unconscious but soon came-to. He believed he had suffered a seizure while driving on the roadway, police said. Paramedics arrived and transported him to the hospital. His car was towed. He was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes. Police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to conduct a medical evaluation of the driver to see if he should be driving.

Road rage

A about 9 p.m. on Tuesday (May 21), police received a report of an apparent road-rage incident at the new Stop & Shop gas station. By the time, police arrived those involved had left the area.

2-car MVA

At 1:06 p.m. on Wednesday (May 22), police responded to a two-car accident at South Main and Summer streets. Police said a 21-year-old Scituate man in a 2000 Nissan Altima did not stop at the stop sign on Spring Street. As he attempted to cross South Main Street , he drove into the path of a 2008 Ford truck, operated by a 26-year-old Scituate man. The driver of the Nissan was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. He was cited for failure to stop at a stop sign. Both vehicles were towed.

Vandalism

A 52-year-old Wheelwright Farm resident reported an apparent case of vandalism last Thursday (May 23). A box that she had been expecting from Amazon was ripped and damaged. She had received a phone call from a neighbor saying her package was all torn up and was on the neighbor's lawn. The merchandise she ordered was still in the box and was not damaged, police said.

Fell asleep

Police said a 39-year-old Cohasset man apparently fell asleep at the wheel around 11:23 p.m. on Thursday (May 23) on North Main Street between Cedar Street and the train station. He was headed south in a 2006 Nissan pickup truck when he swerved and struck a tree. He did not have any apparent injuries but was transported to the hospital as a precaution. He was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes.

Squirrel

A 14-year-old girl, who was home alone, called police about a squirrel inside the house on Beach Street on Monday afternoon (May 27). She opened the doors and windows but he was still hanging around. By the time the officer arrived, the squirrel had apparently made an exit.

Gone fishing

Police checked on a group of teens on the rock in Lily Pond after a call from a concerned King Street resident on Monday (May 27). The teens had fishing poles and a small boat. The officer used the loud speaker to call out to them and they said they were fine.

Civil matter

Police were unable to assist a 56-year-old woman last week who wanted to gain access to her deceased husband's apartment in the Avalon complex because it is a civil matter. She was referred to the courts. A constable or deputy sheriff can enforce civil matters but police enforce criminal law. She told police Avalon had changed the locks to the unit.

MEMORIAL DAY

the American Legion.

This year's event kicked off on Saturday, May 18 and continued through Monday, May 27. The wreath-laying Saturday at Healing Field was followed by an overnight honor guard from Sunday until Monday morning. A breakfast was held at the American Legion post before Monday's parade. On the way to Cohasset Veterans Park, American flags were placed on the graves of veterans.

The event's featured speaker was Lieutenant Colonel Charles Coe, an Iraq War veteran and recipient of the Bronze Star. Coe's speech touched on Cohasset's unique Memorial Day celebration, owing it in part to the fact that Cohasset lost eight men in the Vietnam war and had a population of 6,000 at the time.

Coe noted, "in a town of 6,000 everyone knew either the father, mother, brother, sister, uncle, aunt or cousin of all the fallen. The Memorial Day parade was an opportunity for the town to come together and remember these and other young men who have died for this great Nation. I think Cohasset, despite its reputation as a rich town, had a strong legacy of serving this great nation in its time of greatest needs."

Coe continued, "It is because of this legacy and the young men full of promise that lost their lives in service to this nation that Cohasset has never suffered the malaise of other towns of this nation who began to think of memorial day as the beginning of summer sales, trips to the beach, a day for beers and barbecues, but forgot the true meaning of memorial day."

He also quoted President John F. Kennedy: "For of those to whom much is given, much is required."

Coe said by way of conclusion, "As I look around today and see the natural beauty of Cohasset: the beautiful green grass and white colonial homes of Cohasset Common, the ocean of Cohasset Harbor and Sandy Beach, the blooming and colorful azaleas, rhododruns and lilacs in the yards of Cohasset residents, I am struck how these images are contrasted with the solitary, quiet graves of Cohasset veterans, my fellow veterans and I visited this morning. And, I am reminded that Memorial Day offers us not only a somber time of remembrance, but more importantly, it provides all of us a spiritual and physical rebirth. Often in literature, winter is used a metaphor for death. Given the difficult winter of 2013, I think all of us can understand that metaphor. However, that the cold solitude of winter always turns into the promise and beauty of spring.

"This is what we should appreciate about Memorial Day. Memorial Day offers us both the opportunity to honor the sacrifices these men made for their great nation, but it allows us to look forward, appreciate, and recognize the freedoms and beauty we enjoy as Americans and Cohasset residents today. Their spirit is all around us today."

Coe said after his speech, in between shaking hands of people who thanked him for his address, that Cohasset's annual observance is "touching."

"Cohasset has always had a really strong Memorial Day," he said. "Part of it is our legacy of losing eight guys in Vietnam. It really is a very patriotic town."

Members of the Board of Selectmen complimented the town's Memorial Day observance during the Tuesday, May 28 meeting.

Selectman Karen Quigley thanked the Wigmore family for their hard work and dedication, noting that the women of the auxiliary "prepared a really wonderful breakfast for all the marchers and veterans. It was a great day and great event."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that in her family, Memorial Day is like Christmas. "Cohasset does it better than anybody," she said. "The entire Wigmore family goes all out. It's one of the best days in Cohasset."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby complimented Coe's speech and said she agreed with him that Memorial Day "isn't a fun day," adding that it was important to stress that. "People have to remember what Memorial Day is for."

The Healing Field at the harbor, where visitors can pay their respects to America's servicemen and women and observe an array of 500 flags, will be open to the public until Sat., June 1.

CHILDREN'S BOOK

renovated into condos back in the 1980s but still had all the creaks and noises that you could imagine."

At the time Danielson had a company, Downtown Women's Club, a national women's networking organization that launched the first social network for businesswomen in the US. That experience transitioned Danielson into consulting where she worked with businesses to integrate technology platforms and social media strategies with traditional marketing and business development plans. In 2012, Sperry Van Ness International Corp., a commercial real estate franchisor headquartered in Irvine, Calif., offered her an in-house position. Danielson currently serves as their Chief Platform Officer, where she works virtually from her home office here in Cohasset.

As the author of two business books, she had not fully achieved her publishing goals until several months ago when she finally published a book for children. It was her son Andrew who served as an inspiration to put her fingers to keyboard with their story.

"Writing this book, a book for young children, was a true departure from business writing," says Danielson. "It gave me a chance for my creative side to come out...my 'inner Dr. Seuss,'" she says. "It was strictly for fun, not for profit."

The story idea about a mouse haunting their house began as a poem Danielson made up for her son when she would tell him about the noises she would hear when she was working late at night in her home office.

"Night after night the sound was always there and it became like a little friend, keeping me company with it's scratching and scurrying in the walls," she recalls.

Danielson would ask Andrew, then only seven years old, what he would do if the noises were actually being made by ghosts. The tale of overcoming the fear of ghosts and sounds of the darkness came out in rhyme, similar to the style of books Danielson loved as a child and enjoyed reading as a mom. Once she sat down to write it, it just sort of "wrote itself" she says.

The following is a synopsis from amazon.com.

For one young child, moving from the bright lights of the city to a tiny village by the sea means leaving behind familiar sights and sounds. Now in the dark hours of the night, in the quiet of the old house perched up on a hill, even the smallest noise can spark his imagination. Those scratching sounds that come from the walls, they couldn't be ghosts ... or could they? Diane K. Danielson brings young readers this fantastical tale of a young boy and his mother settling into their new home, where they discover an unexpected and unusual house guest. Written in whimsical verse, "There Is a Mouse That Is Haunting Our House" is an original spooky tale that will appeal to imaginative minds of all ages.

The illustrator, LaSalle, is Danielson's niece who was living in Marshfield at the time and attending Marshfield High School. The young artist took the finished poem and made a simple coloring book out of it for her cousin Andrew's class at the Osgood School. After that was completed and was received with great feedback from Andrew's classmates, and others who found it useful for young kids who are worried about moving to a new home or town, Danielson and LaSalle wanted to take the project a step further. It took about two more years before it was completed. All are very happy with the results and the work of SDP Publishing in East Bridgewater who published "There is a Mouse in This House," in December of 2012.

"The book was an opportunity to show that I was serious about pursuing art as a commitment rather than a hobby," says LaSalle. "Up until my aunt approached me with the concept, I dabbled in making online comics and doing a lot of sketch work for personal projects, but nothing really serious. It was a daunting challenge but I accepted it head on, with the intent of showing what I can accomplish."

The story idea about a mouse haunting their house began as a poem Danielson made up for her son when she would tell him about the noises she would hear when she was working late at night in her home office.

Though the story flowed easily from Danielson's mind, the process of creating a tone and consistent look for the illustrations was a bit more challenging for her niece who wanted it to be just right. It was "challenging but fulfilling" says her niece, as are so many rewarding things in life.

When asked how complicated it was to actually publish her book Danielson said that once they found the publisher things went smoothly. SDP did the editing and they hired someone to format the illustrations for the book. All told it was about five years from putting the story on paper to having a finished book in hand.

The acknowledgement of the book gives "A special thank you also to the great friends we've made in Cohasset. Who knew this city gal would find her true home in a small town by the sea?" And luckily for her readers in Cohasset and beyond, she put her story in print. "There is a Mouse That is Haunting Our House" is available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; Buttonwood Books & Toys, Cohasset and amazon.com. Danielson has already donated multiple copies to children's literacy programs like South Shore Day Care's Stars' RISE (Reading is So Exciting) Program (a literacy project funded by a grant from the J Jill Compassion Fund which runs a series of events designed to encourage SSDCS parents to promote reading as a fun family activity.

If any school or non-profit organization for children is interested in receiving free copies of Danielson's book, please email her at dkdsocial@gmail.com.

Enjoy lobster on a roll!

Lobster rolls at the South Shore Arts Festival are a Cohasset tradition – Father's Day weekend, Friday, June 14, through Sunday, June 16. Lobster rolls at First Parish, strawberry shortcake at the Second Congregational Church, and a showcase of crafts and fine artists from New England and beyond make the Festival weekend a terrific family event.

Order lobster rolls early and consider holding a family picnic or treating office staff to a "Thank You Lunch." First Parish, adjacent to Cohasset Common, has held its price for the all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips at $13 for several years.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is highly recommended, and walk-ins will be welcome as long as supplies last. They have sold out on Saturday three years in a row. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of 1,200 lobster rolls in the past few years.

There are several ways to place a lobster order: Pick up an order form at the Parish House, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday; call Diana Kornet at 781-383-6576; or email firstlobster@verizon.net. Mail checks to First Parish Cohasset, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Preorders will be accepted until 6 p.m., on Wednesday, June 12.

Hours for order pickup at the Parish House, 23 N. Main Street, Cohasset: Friday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Learn Live Love celebration and fundraiser

There no tickets required and no fee to attend. All that's necessary is a desire to celebrate life, have fun, and raise funds for Learn Live Love, a local grassroots cancer outreach organization. Join Learn Live Love at Atlantica Restaurant on Thursday evening, June 13, beginning at 6:30 p.m. All who walk through the door are encouraged to give what they can, and to participate in the live and silent auctions, that will take place throughout the night. No tickets required.

The night will include comedian John Turco, fashions by Pink Tulip and Luiabelle, live music, dancing, and live and silent auctions.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization, a charity founded by Scituate residents Rosie Lonborg, wife of former Red Sox player, Jim Lonborg, Pam Ahl and Amy Ferrie.

Their mission is to provide confidential financial assistance to women and families in New England communities who are affected by a diagnosis of cancer. Learn Live Love doesn't have any "red tape." It's a grass roots organization that provides help, almost immediately, to those in need.

It will be a night to gather friends and have fun while doing good for a great cause. Visit on Facebook or at learnlivelove.org.

Coffee with the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host its semiannual event Coffee with the Authors, at 9:45 a.m., on Tuesday, June 4, at the Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset. Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while three contemporary authors discuss their latest work.

Featured authors will be Amy Brill for "The Movement of Stars"; Laurie Edwards for "In the Kingdom of the Sick: A Social History of Chronic Illness in America"; and Elizabeth Hartley Winthrop for "The Why of Things." "The Movement of Stars" is a love story set in 1845 Nantucket inspired by the work of Maria Mitchell, the first female astronomer in America. "In the Kingdom of the Sick," Edwards explores issues of importance to people who are sick or well, and "The Why of Things" is about a family coping after unspeakable loss.

Reservations and tickets ($16 per person) are required. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

Course on Navigation

The Cohasset Sailing Club is sponsoring an Introduction to Navigation course on two weeknights during the month of June. The course is taught by the US Coast Guard Auxiliary and includes use of navigation tools, chart features, plotting a course, measuring distance, speed-time-distance, and positioning. Navigation tools and charts will be provided. Call T.J. O'Brien at 781-383-2234 if you are interested in attending (space is limited).

Ballet

Dancers at the International Ballet Academy of Norwell have been rehearsing for their upcoming performance of "Excerpts of The Sleeping Beauty" to Tchaikovsky's score.

The performance will take place at 4 p.m., on Saturday, June 1, at The Company Theater in Norwell. All tickets for the Company Theater are priced at $20. Tickets for all shows can be purchased online at: ibanorwell.org.

Girls and boys from all over the South Shore, including Liv Garelick, Katie Pitts, Grace Vainisi, Ainsley Allen and Coco Roberts, all of Cohasset, have been rehearsing with their professional counterparts readying for the performance. All of the dancers are under the artistic direction of Melinda Marculetiu and Cosmin Marculetiu.

Northeastern

Hats off to Paige Powers DeSisto, who has been named to the Dean's List at Northeastern University for the spring term. To earn this distinction, students must carry at least four courses and have a 3.5 or higher GPA.

Mark Twain

On Wednesday, June 12, at 11 a.m., Cohasset Elder Affairs will host a Father's Day Celebration featuring performer Richard Clark. As a part of his series Keeping History Alive, this talented actor will present "And Now, Mark Twain." Enjoy a visit with one of America's best-loved writers and humorists. You will be treated to a compendium of Mark Twain's life works; laugh along with him at the foibles, follies and fantasies of a bygone era.This program will take place at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St. Lunch will follow. Please call for reservations. Transportation will be provided if necessary.

This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Union College

Aisling Kearns, Class of 2013, of Cohasset, was a presenter at Union College's annual Steinmetz Symposium Day on Friday, May 10. Aisling presented researched titled "Irish Travellers and the Transformative Nature of Media Representation."

Every year, Union College celebrates its Undergraduate Research program by inviting students to present their creative and scholarly achievements. This year, more than 450 students participated in the festivities that spanned all of the college's academic disciplines.

The symposium is named for one of the college's most renowned faculty members, Charles Proteus Steinmetz, who taught electrical engineering and applied physics. As a chief engineer for the General Electric Co., he was widely regarded as America's leading electrical engineer.

Please send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

Little guys are full of fun

Got love? Lots of love? It's kitten season and we have a number of beautiful, spunky and entertaining little personalities just waiting for the best forever homes. This week we are featuring two brothers, Casey and Max. These fabulous little boys are 7 weeks old and have a brother and sister, Milo and Sasha, who are also available.

This is a great time for a few new additions to families who are ready to open their homes to the pitter-patter of many little paws scampering around the house, up and down stairs, playing and entertaining you until they drop into your arms for well earned slumber. There is nothing quite so special as the big purrs that emanate from the sweet little bundles of fur that we are sheltering now.

Big, twinkling, beautiful eyes, inquisitive natures and silly kitten antics are just the beginning. For these babies everything is new and challenging. Like children, they too need care, love and guidance. Soon, they will be having their spay and neuter procedures and that is a time when they will be very happy to be receive the TLC that a loving family provides. Could it be your home, your family? Smiles, laughter and joy await those who welcome these wonderful little boys into their lives.

Sadie Mae, who is the mom to Casey, Max, Milo and Sasha is a gorgeous tiger and white feline who will be looking for her special family as well. She has worked hard nurturing her little family and deserves a home where she too can be spoiled and treated like a princess. This family of furry felines is enjoying life with their foster parents and can be seen by appointment.

You can call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Casey and Max as well as other kittens who are currently in foster with Hull Seaside.

Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue to see more of our kittens. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets.

A big thank you to all of the shoppers at Whole Foods at Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham for your donations to Hull Seaside Animal Rescue this month. We were thrilled to be selected by Christina Barber, manager at Whole Foods, for the register coupons program. It is this type of outreach that brings in the much needed help that non-profit, animal rescue groups like ours depend. You all make it happen for us and we are so grateful. We have many adopters who live in Hingham and surrounding communities and hope that more families will get to know us and give a chance to our special cats and kittens.

Bottle and can donations continue to be a big help to us and to all of you who continue to drop off your bagfuls to us each week, your consistent support is appreciated more than you know. It is a great way to support our kittens and cats. Donations of kitten and cat supplies are always needed and we are happy to see our supporters at the door on Monday evenings and Saturdays during Open Hours. The caring and love that we feel from all of you is so special.

If you are interested in spending time volunteering at Hull Seaside, please call Nancy, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-925-3638 for details. We are always looking for dedicated people who have a special connection and desire to work with our feline residents.

COHASSET GARDEN CLUB

Pollinator program planned at Osgood

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Second graders should "bee" excited for their upcoming weeklong science program: "Bee a Pollinator Pal Week."

The Cohasset Garden Club, partnering with the Cohasset PSO, South Shore Natural Science Center, and Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm, are presenting a week's worth of educational programming for the second grade class at the Joseph Osgood Elementary School.

The Garden Club has been working on this program with the Garden Club Conservation Committee for 18 months, according to Garden Club member Sandra Durant.

"It's a whole week wrapped around this idea of learning about pollinators, learning about the plants they're attracted to, and learning about how to take care of them so we don't destroy them," said Durant.

The project won an award at a recent Garden Club of America meeting held in Hull. The honor is called the Marion Thompson Fuller Brown Conservation Award for an outstanding conservation exhibit of educational and visual merit that increases the public's knowledge and awareness of the environment.

The Cohasset Garden Club exhibit was titled "Let There Bee Light."

Judges praised the project for its "exceptional educational and visual presentation demonstrating ongoing involvement with elementary students."

The second grade class will have a jam-packed week of pollinator-related activities and lessons.

Monday, June 3 kicks off the program with an all-school assembly featuring Holly Hill Farm and the South Shore Natural Science Center.

On Tuesday, students will view the TED film on pollination. The next day will be more hands on: the kids will be participate in planting pollinator-friendly plants in the school's newly enlarged garden.

"One of our club members is a landscape designer and filled a garden with pollinator-friendly plants; the children in various classes will help plant those," said Durant.

The students will visit the library on Thursday to read pollinator books donated by the Garden Club. Finally, on Friday, the second graders will release butterflies they have been monitoring. The release will take place around the pollinator garden.

Durant said that she hopes the program will be a big hit with second grade students and teachers, and will expand next year to include the entire elementary school.

"We're hoping this will end up as an all-school program next year," she said. "It has tremendous educational value."

Schedule of events:

- Mon., June 3 at 10 a.m.: Full grade assembly with Chris Jacobs from the South Shore Natural Science Center.
- Tues., June 4: Viewing of the "Beauty of Pollinator"
- Wed., June 5: Garden Planting and Instruction
- Thurs., June 6: Snack Discussion: How Pollination May Have Played a Role in Today's Snack
- Fri., June 7: Program Wrap -Up: Marigold Seed and Flyer Distribution

Throughout the week and beyond:

- Library readings — The Garden Club will be gifting three pollinator-themed children's books to the library.

Photo friendly

One of the great aspects about current technology is that everyone is a photographer. Whether using a digital camera or a smart phone – many people are snapping photos all over the place and posting them on Facebook and other social media outlets.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we are receiving more photographs via email than ever before. We welcome the submissions and are happy to have so many citizen journalists among our readership.

However – there is a "but" and a rather large one. It is important that our citizen photographers send the photographs to us in a size and format that we can use. We are frankly struggling with the quantity of submissions that involve our having to get back to the contributor to say the photo is too small and resolution too low to use in the paper.

Some contributors just unload all their photos and ask us to pick which ones we like and to get back to them. These are extra steps for us that we simply do not have the time to perform.

Others send us photographs without captions and identities of those in the pictures. Unless the photo is of a large group of people, we do need IDs from left to right. We also need a solid caption telling us what is happening in the photo. While that information may seem obvious to the sender, it is often not clear. Also, captions are "mini-stories" and our readers need to know in a clear, concise manner what the photo is all about.

We are about to embark on one of the highest picture-taking seasons of the year! Graduations, proms, Fourth of July, South Shore Arts Festival, and so many more events are happening over the next two months. We are happy to be a place where our readers want to contribute and share photographs of their accomplishments, activities, vacations and other events. We consider sharing milestones as part of our role as a community newspaper.

To have a successful partnership between the Mariner and our citizen photographers – here are a few simple steps:

- Pick a few of the best photos;
- Include a full caption with IDs in the body of the email;
- Make sure the photo has high resolution so we can change the size if needed;
- Don't send us to other web sites or photo drop sites to look at your photos;
- Color photos are fine as we can change them to black and white if needed

If your photos are large, it is OK to send them one at a time. We also accept glossy photos that can be dropped off at our office at 73 South Street (above the Peel Pizza Co.) in Hingham Square. Please put your name and address on the back of the photo and we will return it.

Feel free to email editor Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com with questions.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sexuality education and healthy youth

On Tuesday May 14th, I had the privilege of testifying at the State House in support of An Act Relative to Healthy Youth, which will require that Massachusetts schools that choose to teach sexuality education do so in a medically accurate, age appropriate, and comprehensive manner. While I'm encouraged by reports that the teen birth rate in Massachusetts is on the decline, May was Teen Pregnancy Prevention month, and it is an important time to ensure young people stay healthy and stay in school. As a parent, I believe comprehensive sexuality education programs are an essential component of safe guarding the future health and well being of our children.

That's why I hope Garrett Bradley and Bob Hedlund will support An Act Relative to Healthy Youth. Currently, there is no way to guarantee the quality and content of sexuality education and some students are still receiving ineffective abstinence-only sexuality education. Since the Healthy Youth bill keeps the decision about whether to offer sexuality education in the hands of school districts, it is a great way to promote healthy behaviors without a government mandate.

Getting our priorities right

DOMINIC JANSSENS

So it is entirely appropriate and practical that the Selectmen respect the voice of the citizens by executing the search once the new Town Manager Act is fully implemented into law.

The Town has come a long way financially under the stewardship of the last Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager. The recent news about Cohasset's improved debt rating and associated reduction in borrowing costs being an excellent example of good progress.

However, financially there is still a very long road to go. For example, our town has an astounding $48 million unfunded liability for health and retirement benefits to Town employees while also wishing to spend additional monies on expanding or improving important services such as the Senior Center. At the same time, we are already one of the highest taxed towns in the region. Reconciling this financial imbalance affects everyone in Town and should be the Selectmen's top agenda item by far.

Conversely, using their time and energy debating a new Town Manager search now, as Selectmen did on Tuesday, makes no sense at this time for three reasons:

Firstly, our current Acting Town Manager has been the most effective person in the role for a long time so there is no burning platform and continuity is a good thing.

Secondly, our last Town Manager is suing the Town, which would clearly deter high quality candidates until the outcome of that litigation is clear. Hiring a new Town Manager at this time would also create a needless and avoidable risk should the former Town Manager win his suit.

Thirdly, the new Town Manager Act, which has been agreed by the citizens of this town but is pending ratification by the State, provides for a broader set of high quality candidates than the legacy Act currently provides. So it is entirely appropriate and practical that the Selectmen respect the voice of the citizens by executing the search once

Setting clear objectives

PETER PESCATORE

Last year the BOS approved a structured Budget Schedule, an MBO if you will, in the late fall and in the first roll out of this planning tool not all the steps were implemented as planned.

In the private sector Management By Objectives is an old but valued management practice. At the last Board of Selectmen's meeting the Board announced that they would be setting goals for fiscal 2014 at their next meeting on May 28th. I can only hope that the substance of these goals deals with the bigger strategic outlook for the town and not minor tactical initiatives that are better left to the hired help.

Last year the BOS approved a structured Budget Schedule, an MBO if you will, in the late fall and in the first roll out of this planning tool not all the steps were implemented as planned. While the goals for the town are being considered, I sincerely hope that discussions begin to get step 1 of the Budget Schedule, the BOS Budget Guideline, to be followed by Town Manager done in early fall this year. Since 75 percent of the Town's expenditures are for personnel cost, I would think that a firm headcount plan by department and direction regarding any compensation actions for the new year be at the heart of the planning assumptions to avoid the miscommunication we had with the 2014 plan.

The Town actually has a good track record of staying focused on Strategic Initiatives. As a result our AA+ Bond rating was reinstated this week after our annual review by S&P. The removal of our previous AA+ Negative Watch from last year's review means that the upcoming rollover of $8 million in existing debt will have a lower interest rate. In their review, S&P cited the stability of our management, the changes made to the financial staff and the many improved policies and practices put in place by the Acting Town Manager. Over the past 9 months we have consolidated short-term debt that was reissued at a lower, more favorable

Quest to find a water connection

MARY KENNEDY

The Corps of Discovery (Lewis and Clark expedition) - May 1804 - September 1806

The largest land purchase in history, authorized in 1803 by President Thomas Jefferson, had almost doubled the size of the United States. COURTESY ILLUSTRATION

The deal was done. The largest land purchase in history, authorized in 1803 by President Thomas Jefferson, had almost doubled the size of the United States. The Louisiana Territory stretched from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean, a vast uncharted area of land. Now what?

For centuries after the voyages of Columbus (who died still asserting that the continent of Asia lay off the islands of the Caribbean), England, France, and Spain had sought the elusive Northwest Passage: A practical water route that would facilitate trade by cutting travel time from the Atlantic to the Pacific. That was Jefferson's primary goal when he chose his personal secretary, Army officer Meriwether Lewis, to lead the Corps of Discovery in a quest to find that water connection across the continent. "Captain Lewis," he wrote, is brave, prudent, habituated to the woods, and familiar with Indian manners and character."

Lewis then picked William Clark, an Army friend, as his First Lieutenant. The two were also instructed by Jefferson to record plants, animals, and natural resources; and to "treat Indians with dignity." (In their detailed journals they listed 178 plants and 122 animals not previously recorded and described about 52 different native groups encountered during the expedition.)

On May 14, 1804, the 31 men of the Corps of Discovery, including Clark's black slave, York, cast off from Camp Wood, near St. Louis, in a 55-foot keelboat and two smaller pirogues, to begin the journey up the Missouri River.

In November, they hired a French Canadian fur trader Toussaint Charbonneau and his Shoshone wife, Sacagawea, to act as interpreters. Communication was tedious and time-consuming. Both Lewis and Clark spoke only English. Sacagawea spoke the Indian dialects Hidatsa and Shoshone but neither English nor French, so she would translate from Shoshone into Hidatsa for her husband who would then translate into French for a member of the corps who would then translate into English for Lewis and Clark.

In addition to her translating skills and knowledge of medicinal herbs, Sacagawea's assistance often proved invaluable. When a canoe overturned on one turbulent river, she rescued several knapsacks full of instruments and journals written by both Lewis and Clark. Her mere presence, along with her newborn baby, reassured potentially hostile Indian groups. Today, there are more statues of Sacagawea than of any other woman in North America. Yet we don't know what she looked like, where or when she died, or even how to spell or pronounce her name. (In 2001 President Clinton awarded Sacagawea the title of Honorary Sergeant, Regular Army.)

By the time they reached the Pacific Ocean (near present day Astoria, Washington) in November 1805, they were exhausted, hungry, and low on items to trade for provisions. The men complained about rotting clothes and bedding full of lice and fleas. Lewis decided to hold a vote. Begin the journey home? Spend the winter here? Lewis decided that a vote should be taken on a location for the winter camp. That vote was both extraordinary as well as history-making. Recognizing that every member was equal in importance, Lewis decided that everyone should cast a vote. Clark's black slave York voted (more than 50 years before the Emancipation Proclamation), and so did Sacagawea (more than a century before the 19th Amendment).

Wintering on the southern part of the Columbia River from December 1805 to March 1806, at Fort Clatsop (built and named for the local Indian group) was no picnic. The sun shone only six days out of 141; only 12 days were without rain. On Dec. 25, Clark wrote, "Our dinner today consisted of poor elk boiled, spoiled fish and some roots, a bad Christmas dinner."

Upon their return to St. Louis in September 1806, Lewis and Clark became national heroes. Lewis was named Governor of the Louisiana Territory. Clark was named Indian Agent for the West and Brigadier General of the Territory's militia.

It's both ironic and somewhat amusing that their mission could be considered a failure because they never found the Northwest Passage. The expedition, however, did become the stuff of legends and still captures imagination today. Bernard DeVoto, editor of The Journals of Lewis and Clark, wrote: "Theirs was the first report on the West, on that United States over the hill and beyond the sunset, on the province of the American future."

As for that elusive Northwest Passage: In 1905 Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen finally found the path between two oceans, sailing through the Arctic islands of northern Canada, almost at the top of the world. A route often impassable because of ice.

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

Under our own Big Top

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

So, take a look at the schedule; find a show or two that you might like, call a neighbor or a friend, and go.

"Hello, I'm Johnny Cash," and with that it began.

I am almost certain that it was the summer of 1980. I was living elsewhere on the South Shore, and a friend called and asked me to join his family to go see Johnny Cash at the South Shore Music Circus. Having watched the Johnny Cash Show with my parents on TV, I jumped at the opportunity. Afterwards, I found myself totally enthralled by the experience and have never looked back.

Hundreds upon hundreds of concerts later, I still get chills watching a musician play off of the enthusiasm of a crowd, and I still love going to the South Shore Music Circus.

The advantages to living in our little hamlet-by-the-sea are numerous, but one of the coolest has to be the South Shore Music Circus. A 2,300-seat summertime theater in the round, the Music Circus is consistently bringing a lineup of some of the best-known musicians, comedians and other entertainers – to our own backyard. Accessibility to such talent and entertainment is an incredibly unique gift.

So how did we get so lucky? Well, let's dedicate a paragraph to a quick history lesson. Formed in 1932 and originally called the South Shore Players, the organization started with summer theatrical performances at the Town Hall, (insert present day Town Hall joke here). In 1950 the organization moved to its current location, which at the time was part of the Bancroft Estate and changed their name to The South Shore Music Circus. Partnered with the Cape Cod Melody Tent, the names that have performed at the Music Circus are beyond impressive: Bob Hope, Dizzy Gillespie, Rosemary Clooney, Tony Orlando (anyone recall this one?), Johnny Mathis, Alice Cooper (really), Crosby Stills & Nash, Blondie, the B-52's, Vince Gill, Willie Nelson, Hootie & the Blowfish and countless others.

Today the Music Circus operates as part of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, a non-profit organization, and is only one of a handful of venues in the United States left with a revolving stage. An active part of our community, their endeavors include: charitable grants to fund key artistic and educational programs, employing local kids during the summer, hosting the Cohasset High School graduation service, and sponsoring a myriad of youth activities. Furthermore, the Music Circus draws crowds that eat at and support many of the local restaurants; very few, if any, other businesses have been such an integral part of our community.

Johnny Cash may have been my first concert (a sentence that I type with such pride), but it wasn't my first experience at the Music Circus. I recall seeing some of the children's productions the Music Circus puts on each summer when I was four or five, and going with my family to see Bill Cosby when I was in 6th grade. To this day we still laugh and when talk about that show, and I am pretty sure many of you have great memories you could share. That is precisely the point of this article.

With privilege comes responsibility. Okay, I have to admit, I am trying this line out on all of you, and if it works, I am going to use it to get the kids to keep their rooms clean. The gift of the Music Circus is not a one-way street, and I believe that we all, as a community, need to make an effort to go to a few shows each summer.

When the Music Circus began, the number of venues in the area competing for acts was minimal, but today the Music Circus is facing more and more competition trying to fill out a summer schedule. There are more outdoor venues: cities are holding festivals, venues that were typically for the performing arts are switching over to music, and sadly enough – the casinos are coming. All of these are making it harder for our Music Circus (yes, I said our) to draw artists. For example: today the Bank America Pavilion is booking the same acts that the Melody Tent is booking; a few years ago, it was a given that an artist would play both the Melody Tent and the Music Circus.

The bottom line is, the more fannies in the seats, the more attractive Cohasset looks to an artist. So, take a look at the schedule; find a show or two that you might like, call a neighbor or a friend, and go. A show under the tent on a warm summer night is consistently a great take. You'll see me at a number of shows including my favorite, Lyle Lovett.

Now I don't want you to get the idea that I am shilling for the Music Circus. While I think they are great, I also think they could stand to improve on a few things. Number one on my list is the beer selection; seriously, I am not a big fan of the beer choices they offer. Also, just remember it's a small community, so if you really get into a show and decide to rush up to the stage, and grind funky with Seal, there's a chance someone may recognize you.

So with that, I'd like to bring this article to a close by offering three things:

- It's our Music Circus. Very few places are as lucky as we are so let's make sure we don't find ourselves looking back some day and saying 'remember when'.
- Harpoon IPA or Sam Adams Lager (not Sam's Summer) would be excellent selections to serve at a show – just sayin'.
- As always, thanks for reading.

Time to give chair yoga a try

LOUISE SMULLEN

If Zumba isn't your thing, maybe you'd like to try chair yoga. In April, Sue Thomas, yoga instructor demonstrated various yoga exercises. There were movements for neck and eyes, arm and hands, feet and legs, as well as body twists, all of which can be done while sitting in a chair, and of course breathing properly Sue also spoke about the advantages of yoga to good health.

After the yoga presentation, Linda Tolman from Rice Eventide Nursing Home spoke about a new facility to be built at the former naval air base in Weymouth. It will be called Fairing Way. Rice Eventide is a not-for-profit organization and heavily endowed. There will be five different types of apartments plus a clubhouse where one can take part in various activities. On June 27, Richard Vacca, author of "Boston Jazz Chronicles, Face, Places And Nightlife 1937-1962" will present a program at the Fairing Way Welcome Center at 5 Stonehouse Drive, S. Weymouth. The time is 5 to 7 p.m., and cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served. Reservations may be made by calling 781-59-4177. If you have questions about Fairing Way, you may call the Welcome Center at the above number.

Caril Corel, sponsored by Home Instead, was our first presenter in May. Caril is with Hospice Care. Caril explained about aromatherapy. People react differently to certain aromas; some do not like them, others are allergic, and there are those who are really soothed by them. We learned that it takes a great many pounds of buds, leaves, or roots to make a very small vial of the essential oils used. There is nothing added. Strips of paper with various scents on them were passed around for us to inhale. Aromatherapy can be an alternative therapy to support families and patients. It was quite a fragment noon hour.

A Mothers' Day luncheon was served in May. The table settings were lovely, with pansy centerpieces, pretty china cups and a rose at each place setting. We were entertained by Duane Sullivan, who sang tunes from the era of Doris Day, Debbie Reynolds and Patti Page, accompanying himself on the acoustic guitar. He was most entertaining.

On May 9, the subject was long-term-care insurance. Atty. Daryl Cameron Every told about a bill signed by Gov. Patrick, which set standards for long-term-care. Atty. Every discussed important changes in how Medicaid obtains reimbursement from elders' estates, making it possible for more seniors to access community-based care.

This month, another fourth grade class from Deer Hill joined us for lunch. They entertained by reading their favorite poems aloud. Most of them were quite humorous. Our conversations with them are enjoyable. We exchanged information about what our childhood was like compared to theirs. We talked about favorite colors, sports, and books.

We had a visit from Tom Hickey, Superintendent of South Shore VoTech, in which Cohasset has a share. He spoke briefly about opportunities there and services for seniors.

The following Wednesday, the lunch hour was truly enjoyable. Singer Lorie Welch whose career was in music, told about the gifted duo of Rogers and Hammerstein. She interspersed her talk with renditions of melodies from "Sound of Music," "Oklahoma," "Carousel" and others. Some of you may remember seeing these shows at the Music Circus long ago. Lorie was in many of these musicals and remembers the townspeople who offered rooms to the performers during their stay. I remember going about every Wednesday to the matinee.

All those trees I mentioned in my last column have now lost their beautiful blossoms and are thickly covered with leaves, providing cooling shade from the hot summer sun. How quickly the seasons come and go.

FOR THE RECORD

It's not nice to fool Mother Nature

GREGORY MATHIS

The monstrous tornado that ripped through Oklahoma City and the surrounding areas, leaving death and destruction in its path last week, is another painful reminder of Mother Nature's power.

Interestingly, some of the conversation taking place in the wake of the destruction focused on ways to stop or somehow limit natural disasters like tornadoes, hurricanes and mega-storms from happening.

Weather modification is not only a real term describing the act of intentionally manipulating or altering the weather, but is also being tested and in some cases put into practice.

One commonly known example of this activity is referred to as cloud seeding, which is used to increase rain or snow, usually in drought-stricken areas or to increase local water supplies. Weather manipulation has a long history in folklore, including Native Americans performing rain dances to induce rain. But this is a little more scientific.

There was a reported experiment near Al Ain in the United Arab Emirates where scientists, backed by their government, created more than 50 artificial rainstorms between July and August 2010. The manipulated weather caused hail, gale-force winds and thunderstorms, to the surprise of the locals. According to multiple reports in January 2011 by several newspapers and magazines, scientists here used ionizers to create the rainstorms.

Sound far-fetched and more like science fiction?

Well, it's not something just happening on foreign soil.

There's an ionosphere research program being run in Alaska funded by the Air Force, Navy, University of Alaska and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency called the High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program (HAARP).

There's a lot of scientific and technical terminology used to describe the purpose of the project, but the bottom line is HAARP is messing with the ionosphere with a high-power radio frequency transmitter. Some conspiracy theorists contend that HAARP is contributing to the heightened natural disasters such as more powerful tornadoes, hurricanes and snowstorms.

Depending on who you believe and what you believe, it wouldn't be a stretch to theorize that we're not only making our weather worse through the effects of global warming, but we're also purposely using technology that is adversely affecting the situation.

Even the thought of using this science and technology to alter dangerous weather to ultimately save lives and property is disturbing.

What will happen to the delicate balance of nature if we're flying aircraft into hurricanes to destroy them before they reach landfall or come up with technology that will knock out a tornado before it can cause property damage and personal harm?

Talk about playing with fire.

Let's focus on areas we have more control over as it relates to bad weather and natural disasters. We have crumbling seawalls, an eroding coastline and battered homes that stand in the way each time one of these powerful storms pummel our region. We can start there. We can continue the research and debate into global warming to better understand the human contribution to the environment.

Continuing down a road that includes furthering weather modification technology might just be a disaster waiting to happen.

HONEYMOON

begin at 7 p.m., did not start until 7:45. Already off to a late start, contentious arguments caused the meeting to stretch past 11 p.m.

Despite the fact that board members' clothing happened to color coordinate – Quigley matching selectman Martha Gjesteby in the same shade of pink, with selectmen chair Fred Koed, vice chair Diane Kennedy and Gaumer all wearing some green – the selectmen clashed on several topics, including when and how to start the search for a permanent town manager (see related story).

The board's goals and objectives discussion started with a memo Gaumer had prepared outlining what he felt were key issues the selectmen should focus on, including the budget, personnel management, legal services and community communications. Gaumer stressed the importance of setting objectives and goals early on.

"If you don't have goals in mind, any place you arrive is just fine," Gaumer said.

Quigley raised some objections early in the meeting as to how involved the selectmen should be in the budget process. She took issue with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski holding a conference call with the town's bond agency that included Gaumer as a member of the Capital Budget committee and Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio and the fact that the selectmen were informed of the call with a later presentation.

"In the past the board as a whole was involved in bond meetings," said Quigley, adding that she felt the selectmen should be part of the bond rating process because they are the ones who sign the bonds.

Gaumer said that he did not recall past boards of selectmen taking part in bond meetings and added that the ratings agencies prefer to discuss these matters with the town financial staff, such as the Finance Director. The agencies do not even need to know who a town's selectmen are, he argued: "They don't care what five names are on the nameplates; they're more concerned about management."

Gaumer added that if Quigley wanted the board to be able to "monitor the conversation," that would be "perfectly reasonable."

Milanoski asked Quigley if she wanted the board to be part of the conference call, adding that the prior board of selectmen "took a vote to allow us to go forward" as the Chief Financial Officer and finance team to conduct the bond review and come back with a report.

"I need to know what you'd like me to do differently," Milanoski said, asking Quigley for "ground rules" on this matter.

Koed suggested the selectmen consider appointing a subcommittee to be "more involved" with the budget.

Quigley noted later in the meeting that the selectmen should be involved in the budget as soon as the budget process starts. "As we get into the budget area, we need to as selectmen, I'd like to be involved sooner rather than later."

Gjesteby said that she would like a more detailed budget to review. "It wasn't detailed enough for me" this past fiscal year, she explained.

One thing the board had a consensus on was improving communications to the community. The selectmen discussed improving the town website, utilizing social media, and sending out more press releases to local media in order to keep the public better informed. They noted that during the February blizzard most Cohasset residents were checking the police department's Facebook page for updates.

The already tense atmosphere in the selectmen room worsened when it came time to discuss the town manager search process.

SEARCH

"We are a sharp-elbowed town with very little tolerance for who takes that top spot."
–Newly elected Steve Gaumer

Kennedy said that the board needed to consider how long a search would take, whether that would take six months or longer, noting that the town is currently in litigation with its last town manager.

"It makes me nervous," Kennedy said of how the litigation could impact the search. Gaumer agreed that the lawsuit could affect the town's ability to attract a top-quality candidate for the job.

"It doesn't present an attractive prospective to a candidate," said Gaumer, adding that Cohasset has a "reputation on the street."

"We are a sharp-elbowed town with very little tolerance for who takes that top spot," said Gaumer.

Gjesteby said that good town managers "like a challenge."

Kennedy said that Milanoski was given a longer contract in order to keep management consistent, since Cohasset has seen a "revolving door" of town managers in recent years. "We want some stability, and it has paid off," she said, noting Milanoski's success in turning around the town's finances over the past year.

And while Quigley said that she did not want the town manager search discussion to turn into a "performance review" of the acting town manager, Milanoski was inevitably brought into the conversation.

Gaumer asked point blank, "What do you want? A permanent town manager or somebody new?" Adding that the board should "want the best fit for the town," Gaumer asked his fellow selectmen, "Is this board willing to accept Michael Milanoski as a candidate for the position? We can't proceed without asking that question. We have somebody here who's already shown the qualifications."

Gjesteby, however, argued that Milanoski is not qualified and said that interim town managers are not meant to be permanent. "You need somebody there as the gatekeeper," she said. Whoever the next permanent town manager is should have more municipal experience, Gjesteby added.

Quigley suggested bringing in a consultant to help the board start the search, naming the Collins Center at UMass Boston. Kennedy said she was in communication with that firm and would report back to the board. However, she agreed with Gaumer that the board needed to set their objectives first before turning to consultants.

Quigley urged the importance of outlining the search process. "We have to get it right this time."

The board discussed when the optimal time to bring on a new town manager would be. Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed suggested the board hold off until the start of the new fiscal year in July to vote on launching the search. Gjesteby said that would be too late.

Koed noted that the town manager search discussion is listed on the next three selectmen meeting agendas, so the conversation will continue over the next month.

Kennedy agreed that the board should continue the discussion but not take a vote. "We're getting into silly semantics," she said of the lengthy discussion.

After another debate on when to take a vote on launching the search, the board came to a consensus that they would take a "symbolic vote" during the June 4 meeting. If nothing is resolved then, said Kennedy, the board can always take up another vote at a future meeting. "If we go through this circus again, we'll move [the vote] to the next one."

Cohasset's Town Manager Act is also in the process of being amended; a May 2013 Town Meeting vote approved amendments to the Act. The amended Act was sent as a Home Rule Petition to the state legislature. The retooled act would allow for town volunteer board members or town employees to apply for the town manager position, something that is prohibited in the current Act, which was enacted in 1997.

Cohasset hired its first town manager in the summer of 1997, a few months after Town Meeting approved the Act. The selectmen were unsure of the status of the current Home Rule Petition, however. Quigley said that since the amendment is the will of the people, the selectmen should respect that and wait until the changes are made before hiring a new town manager.

"I would like to honor the spirit of that," Quigley said of the Act.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley said that the Home Rule Petition has been filed as a bill and now has a docket number. However, he estimates that it could take "several months" to get a hearing date, after which "all sides of the committee" will have a say on the bill, which Bradley noted sparked debate at Town Meeting.

Overall, it could be a long process, said Bradley.

"The process is set up so that things will be slow and deliberate for any piece of legislation. Some things move quicker, some move slower. We understand it's a priority for the town, but this is what the legislation entails."

When asked why the 1997 Town Manager Act was approved rather quickly, Bradley responded that he was not a state rep back then. However, anything that a town meeting approves is typically given priority, he said, amending, "We don't want to build any false hope."

COUGLIN, DELUCA

Litigation talks in closed session

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The session pertained to litigation between the town and former Town Manager Michael Coughlin and former Police Chief Mark DeLuca.

The Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski held an executive session with counsel before the public selectmen meeting on Tuesday, May 28.

The session pertained to litigation between the town and former Town Manager Michael Coughlin and former Police Chief Mark DeLuca. Coughlin was removed without cause in March 2012 after six months on the job, while DeLuca was suspended with pay in May 2012, over two years into his stint in Cohasset. DeLuca's contract was not renewed when it expired in January 2013.

The closed session was scheduled from 6:30 to 7 but lasted until 7:45. Per the state's Open Meeting Law, what goes on in executive sessions is not released to the public until the board has voted on the executive session minutes. Boards are allowed to convene behind closed doors to discuss matters that may have a detrimental effect on litigation involving the town.

Coughlin's suit against the town came up briefly during a discussion on town finances, however, when Milanoski was discussing the town's legal costs. Milanoski said that the town's insurance company was handling the "Coughlin piece," meaning that the matter will not come out of the town's legal budget.

"Insurance is picking it up and we [the town] have a very, very strong case on that," said Milanoski.

Last week, DeLuca sent a demand letter through his attorney, Gregory Aceto, seeking reinstatement of his position. The letter was addressed to selectmen chair Fred Koed but was not part of the Tuesday night meeting agenda apart from the executive session discussion.

However, the matter was raised by selectman Karen Quigley during the selectmen's comment period. Quigley said that she was "disturbed" to see a quote from Milanoski on the DeLuca matter in last week's Mariner.

Milanoski told the Mariner last week that the town had received DeLuca's letter. He worked with Town Counsel to issue the following statement: "We have received the document, had an opportunity to review it along with his settlement agreement, yet it now appears he [DeLuca] seeks to rescind the agreement after reaping the rewards of it — we deny his specious allegations and look forward to the facts being aired."

Quigley said at the meeting that she was troubled by Milanoski's use of the word "we."

"That was, I thought, unprofessional and perhaps poor judgment," Quigley said.

Milanoski responded that he coordinated the quote with counsel, adding that the "we" did not refer to the selectmen. "The statement was determined appropriate to release," Milanoski said.

Quigley said that she would like the board to be advised of future comments from the town manager to the press. Milanoski took issue with not being able to speak to the press without the board's prior approval. Quigley amended that she meant only comments that are "tied to litigation and could be construed" as coming from the board as a whole.

"At the minimum the chair" should be informed ahead of time, Quigley said.

Planners ask to review senior center project

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The plan is to break ground in the fall of 2013 with the hope of completing the building by fall 2014.

The Planning Board is hoping to give some input on the Social Service League's plan to build a town senior center.

The board voted unanimously during their Wednesday, May 22 meeting to endorse two Form A applications for the to-be-built senior center. The forms indicate that the project can be built as an ANR: approval not required. The privately funded project does not require a subdivision plan.

The applications followed the Board of Selectmen's recent vote to approve a land swap between the Social Service League, which is building the center, and the Cohasset Swim Trust, which owned the land at 91 Sohier Street. The land – parcel 4A – is now considered a build-able lot.

Building Inspector Bob Egan explained that since the two entities swapped land with one another, the center can be built by right.

The planners also discussed parking and traffic issues at the center, and whether the building project requires a Site Plan Review. A site plan review has two criteria, Egan explained: commercial occupancy in a commercial zone or a non-conforming use in any zone. A community facility such as a senior center is an allowed in a residential zone, however.

Glenn Pratt, who is on the town's ad-hoc senior center committee, said that he did not believe the project required a review by the planning board since it is being privately funded by the League and not by the town.

Planning board member Clark Brewer said that since this is a "project with significant impact" to the community, he felt it warranted some level of review. He asked if the applicant would have the architect firm or attorney do an analysis of the town's zoning bylaw and write a letter to the planning board outlining the reasons the project would be exempt from a site plan review.

Planning board chair Stuart Ivimey said that the review would simply give the planners a chance to "weigh in on what our thoughts are on a project that just might improve it." He added that the planners would likely address parking lot access issues, but otherwise thought it would be a simple review.

"This is not on a site running risk of injuring neighboring properties," said Ivimey. "From a civil perspective there's not a whole lot going on here."

Pratt asked, "Then why go through the exercise?" to which Ivimey replied, "Because our function is to ensure access on and off-site is safe."

"It could be more of an informal Q and A," Brewer said of the review. "It would be helpful to see the final plan and make sure there's opportunity" to address any concerns.

This appeared to be reasonable to the senior center applicants. The senior center will be built in two phases; phase one will build the first 10,800 square feet and a basement, while phase two will add up to 7500 feet. The plan is to break ground in the fall of 2013 with the hope of completing the building by fall 2014.

Ivimey praised the project's architect, Joel Bargmann, for his building design, stating that this is the first construction project he has seen in Cohasset that truly reflects the community's aesthetic.

"I've been on the planning board going on 10 years and every year an architect brings in a drawing and says it's going to keep in character with Cohasset," said Ivimey. "This is the only one that does that. Joel did a terrific job."

Town seeking citizens to fill committee openings

If you want to get involved in town government, now's your chance.

The town of Cohasset has several openings on boards and committees for Fiscal Year 2014, which begins on July 1, 2013. These positions are to be appointed by the Board of Selectmen or Troika (a committee comprised of the Advisory Committee chairman, selectmen chair and Town Moderator). The selectmen plan to make committee appointments and reappointments at their Tuesday, June 25 meeting.

Those who would like to serve on a town board should send a letter of interest and qualifications to Tracey Connors in the selectmen's office: 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or email tconnors@cohassetma.org.

The list of openings is as follows:

- Advisory Committee: three positions (Troika)
- Alternative Energy: seven positions (Troika)
- Cable Advisory: three positions (Selectmen)
- Capital Budget: two position (Troika)
- Cohasset Common Historic District Commission: five positions with specific membership requirements (Selectmen)
- Cohasset Cultural Council: two positions (Selectmen)
- Community Preservation Committee: one position, Senior Housing Representative (Selectmen)
- Conservation Commission: three full members and two (non-voting) associates (Selectmen)
- Council on Elder Affairs: four positions (Selectmen)
- Design Review Board: two positions (Troika)
- Historical Commission: four positions (Selectmen)
- Open Space Committee: one position (Selectmen)
- Senior Center Planning Committee: one position (Selectmen)
- Stormwater Advisory Committee: two positions (Selectmen)
- Town Archivist: one position (Selectmen)
- Zoning Board of Appeals: two positions (Selectmen)

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Military, diplomatic outlooks differ greatly

MATT GREGORY

Mr. Gomez and Congressman Markey, have contrasting viewpoints regarding the future of American military and diplomatic policy...

Every year, Memorial Day serves as a tangible reminder of the incomparable sacrifices which have been made for the last 200 years and continue to be made today by the men and women of the American armed forces. From driving the Redcoats out of Boston to providing assistance to the international coalition tasked with removing Libyan strongman Muhammar Gadhafi from power, the United States military has consistently performed its patriotic duty in a consummate and professional manner, working to defend America, its allies, and the ideals upon which this nation was built, from all enemies, foreign and domestic.

This year, Memorial Day carried particular relevance regarding American foreign and defense policy. On the heels of perhaps President Obama's most ideologically significant speech on the subject, as well as the recent terrorist attack on Boston, the imminent return of U.S. troops from service in Afghanistan, and news of deepening international crises in Syria and North Korea, it is apparent that national legislators will soon be mandated to reevaluate and potentially alter the course of American foreign policy and, by consequence, global politics for years to come. As the Senate is tasked with not only confirming ambassadorial appointments but also ratifying treaties and voting upon any significant military or diplomatic initiatives, the contest between Republican Gabriel Gomez and Democrat Ed Markey will assuredly prove impactful not only within Massachusetts and across the nation, but also beyond the borders of the United States.

Of the two candidates, Mr. Gomez certainly has more direct experience with American defense policy. After serving as an aircraft carrier pilot, Gomez enrolled in Navy SEAL training and served for three years in South America, leaving the Navy in 1995 to attend Harvard Business School. However, following his exit from the armed services, Gomez continued his involvement with the military community, serving as a spokesman for the Special Operations OPSEC Education Fund. The organization, consisting of numerous former military officials and registered as a nonpolitical social welfare group, has advocated neoconservative positions and in some instances has directly condemned the actions of the Obama administration. Indeed, as Foreign Policy magazine reported, one of Gomez's fellow group spokesmen issued a statement calling the President "Commander-in-Chief Hussein Maobama." In another well-documented incident, the organization gained national prominence for releasing a 22-minute video titled "Dishonorable Disclosures," which attacked President Obama for taking any credit for the successful targeting and elimination of Osama bin Laden. Gomez appeared on MSNBC where he defended the legitimacy of the video, declaring of the controversial film, "The point of the video is to highlight the difference between the current administration and how they viewed giving credit as opposed to other wartime presidents that have given credit in a different way."

However, Gomez, during the Senate campaign, has assured voters that he no longer has any direct involvement with the OPSEC group, stating, "I just went on [MSNBC] because we overlapped on that issue about the president taking too much credit," and has insisted that he will take a realistic approach to foreign policy if victorious in the June election. Stating on his website his support for a "strong national defense," Gomez also advocates a two-state solution in Israel and the undertaking of "whatever steps are necessary" to prevent nuclear proliferation in Iran. On the Syrian crisis, in which rebel forces have been engaged in a multi-year conflict against dictator Bashar Assad and his ruling B'aath regime, Gomez advocates hesitancy regarding committing US troops to combat but urges "equipment and intelligence" to be delivered to "the people we trust" in the Free Syrian Army. Furthermore, Gomez has, on numerous occasions, stated his ideological support for Senator John McCain, who he declared is a "true American hero." McCain has advocated a more militaristic American presence in the global community, including keeping US troops stationed in Iraq for an extended period of time and potentially undertaking military action against Iran and North Korea.

Ed Markey, on the other hand, has taken a differing position on foreign affairs than that advocated by Senator McCain, Congressional Republicans, and presumably Mr. Gomez. Markey opposed a 2004 proposal authorizing the removal of Saddam Hussein from power in Iraq, and in 2006, he similarly voted against declaring the Iraqi engagement part of the "War on Terror." In addition, the Congressman supported an investigation of President Bush's fallacious statements regarding WMD in Iraq and the potential of these to warrant impeachment. A strong advocate of American troop removal from Iraq and Afghanistan, Markey has also been at the forefront of a continuous effort to impose cuts on the nation's nuclear weapons budget; in 2012, Markey introducing the SANE Act designed to eliminate over $100 billion in what he calls "wasteful spending." Yet while Congressman Markey appears to take similar positions as Gomez on Syria, stating that "the United States should continue to work with the international community to increase pressure on the Assad regime," and on the necessity of preventing Iran from attaining nuclear weapons capacity and ensuing the viability of the Israeli state, he has also been attacked by Gomez and Senator McCain for the ideological character of his past legislative actions. In response to Markey's decisions to oppose a reauthorization of the Patriot Act in 2010 and 2011, Gomez told reporters, "I'll let [Markey's] record show for himself that he doesn't understand the present dangers that we face here in the United States and overseas," and added that Markey's votes had the potential to "get in the way of this country being safer."

In Cohasset, Memorial Day is a day of celebration, where one can witness the manifestation of patriotic spirit as hundreds gather to enjoy and appreciate the joys and liberties characterizing the great nation of which we are a part. It is a day of remembrance, a salute to the countless brave individuals who have sacrificed everything so that we may live in peace and contentment. Yet this day also provides a moment to consider the future, the policies this nation will choose to implement and the courses leaders will follow to best ensure the security of the American people and nation. Two contenders for a powerful governmental position, Mr. Gomez and Congressman Markey, have contrasting viewpoints regarding the future of American military and diplomatic policy, and as citizens of the United States and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, we must appreciate the opportunity before us to play a role in determining which vision of the future is best suited to preserve the ideals so embedded in the fabric of this nation.

rate, saving the town nearly $1 million in interest over the next 10 years. The Treasury function has implemented new policies and personnel; the town has settled all union contracts for the next three years, negotiated lower health insurance rates and made our OPEB liability a focus of our fiscal policy. The creation of the strategic MBO — Achieve an AAA Bond Rating – provided the framework that brought us new auditors, accelerated fiscal policy changes, brought decisions about changing some key traditional cost and focused management initiatives toward the objective. Having a clear objective in place certainly facilitated these accomplishments.

I look forward to an increasing use of this strategic management tool to keep our town moving forward.

Without a strategic outline any road you take will get you there.

Peter Pescatore is the Advisory Committee Chairman; he lives at 12 Lantern Lane.

PRIORITIES

the new Town Manager Act is fully implemented into law. To do so now would be in conflict with current law and would deny the citizens the choices they voted for.

Therefore, the most sensible course of action would be for the Selectmen to confirm that Mr. Milanoski will remain Acting Town Manager until the previous Town Manager's litigation is resolved and the new Town Manager Act is fully implemented. After these issues are resolved, a search can be conducted productively and in accordance with the law the citizens have voted for.

In the meantime, it is in the best interests of the Town that the Selectmen focus now on solving higher priority issues such as the Town's financial wellbeing.

When you need to know... Public Notices tell you.
What are Public/Legal Notices?
Public notices are announcements from all levels and branches of government, as well as from individuals and businesses that inform you about government actions, environmental conditions and economic changes. They alert you when your interests, your family or your community is affected by what others do, and they invite you to participate in the democratic process or in business opportunities.
Watch this newspaper for public notices that inform you about things like:
• the restaurant at the end of the block that applied for a liquor license
• a proposed tax increase on the school board's agenda
• the neighbor that applied for a permit to enlarge her house
• the sewer authority that is issuing bonds to finance a new plant
• business and/or residential properties that are going up for sale

GIRLS LACROSSE

Laxwomen split in playoffs

Cohasset wins playoff opener, fall at Duxbury

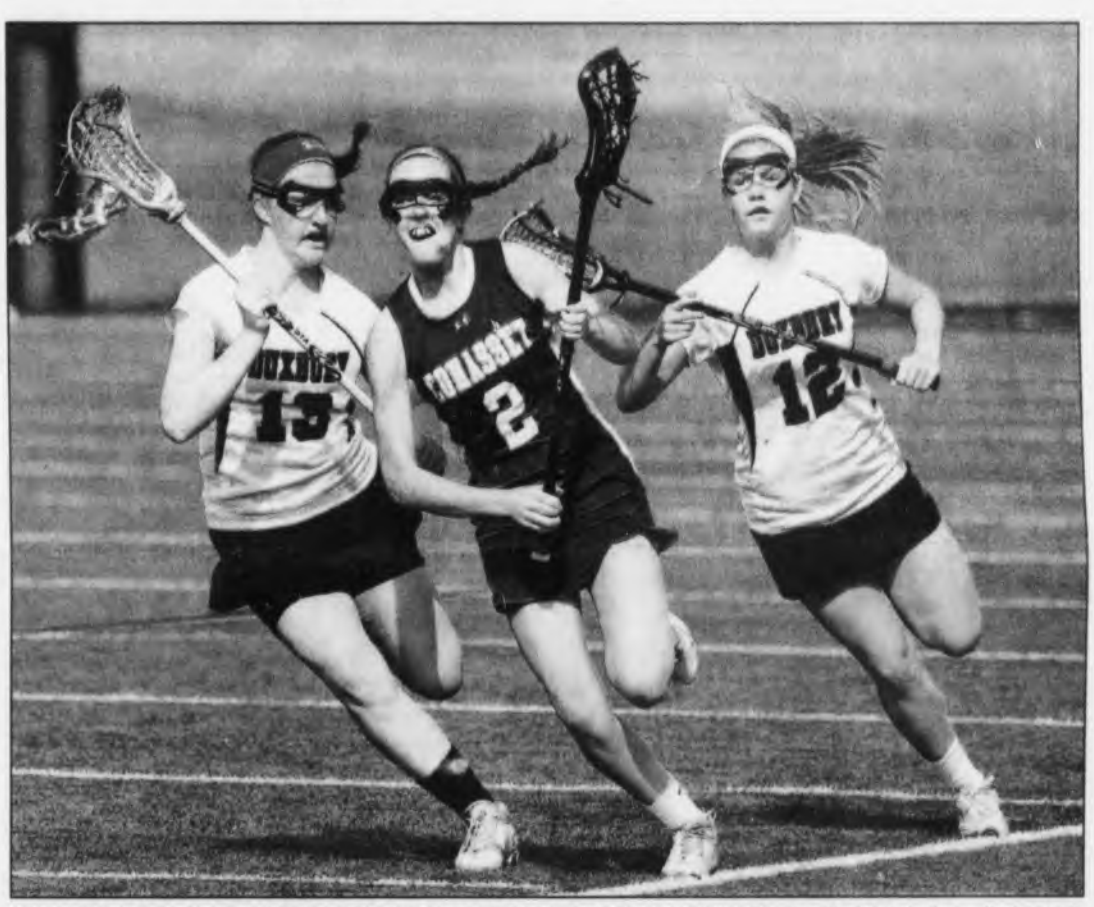
The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset girl's lacrosse team went into the tournament on a roll, having only lost to nationally ranked NDA over the last half of the season and easily won in the preliminary round game against Fairhaven 14-4 on Sunday at Alumni Field. Senior Captain Kristin Alexander made her final home game a memorable one with a season high four goals and three assists. Fellow senior captains Hope Kissick notched two goals and goalie Kylie Coffman had four saves playing only the first half.

The next opponent was a much tougher challenge as Cohasset had to travel to Duxbury on Tuesday for a rematch with the Dragons. The first meeting was not a pleasant one as the Skippers were blown out in a mid-season game and never really challenged Duxbury until late in the game in a 16-6 loss. This game was a battle for the first ten minutes as the teams traded goals and Kathryn Dunn and Hope Kissick scored to make it 3-2 Dragons.

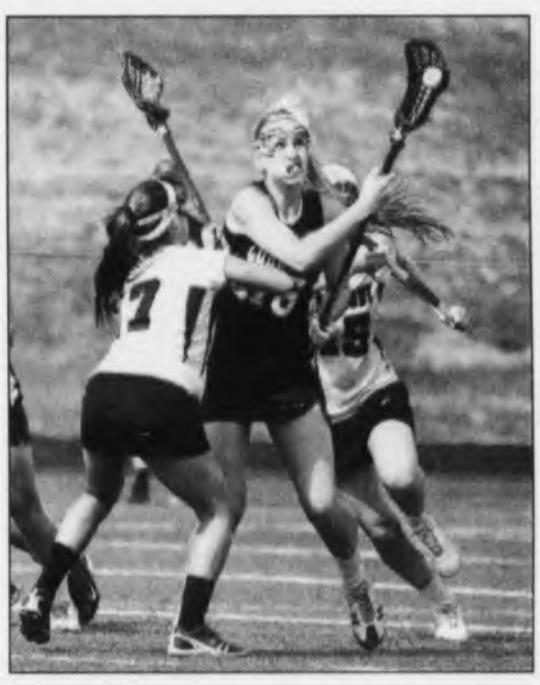
Duxbury scored twice in a row before Kissick answered to cut the lead to 5-3. Goalie Taylor Frederick made several key saves to keep the Skippers in the game early but the Dragons took over by winning virtually every draw over the last 15 minutes of the first half and led 10-3 at the break.

Cohasset came out of the half on fire and scored two goals in the first five minutes as Corey Golden converted a feed from Kissick and then Dunn found Kissick for her third goal of the day to bring the Skippers to within 11-5.



Duxbury continued to control possession in the second half and wore down the Skippers defense, scoring nine more times to make the final 20-8.

Coach Kully Reardon reflected on the season.



"This season our young team learned some very valuable lessons," she said. "We came together as a team and relied on our veterans to get us to the tournament and realize what it takes to win. I am so incredibly proud of our three seniors and captains for their leadership late into the season. They faced some triumphs and challenges and through it all stayed focused and positive. Kristin, Hope and Kylie will be impossible to replace but I am extremely hopeful looking toward the future."

The Cohasset Girls JV team had a great season this year finishing with a record of 12-3-1. The team scoring was led by freshman Caelin McDonald with 42 goals, freshman Bennett Tierney with 33 goals and sophomore Madison Hagearty with 21 goals.

Cohasset outscored their opponents 161-96. This was partially because of a solid defense of Erin Driscoll, Christine Guinee and Tracy Fogarty. Cohasset JV had two new goalies this year. Allie O'Callahan and Olivia Blackburn. They did an excellent job and were a big part of why the team was so successful. There are a lot of very talented young players who are going to help the girl's lacrosse program be very successful in the years ahead.

feating Ashley Avery from Wellesley 6-1, 6-3 to win her second South Sectional Title. She advances to the All-State Final Four on Saturday June 15 at St. John's High School of Shrewsbury, where she will attempt to defend last year's championship.

As a team, Cohasset finished the regular season 18-0 and earned a No. 1 seed.and a bye into the quarterfinals of the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectionals.

They'll open against either Martha's Vineyard or Westport at home, on Monday at 2:30 p.m.

The boys tennis team finished 16-4 and earned a No. 3 seed and a bye into the quarterfinals against either No. 6 Dover Sherborn (14-4) or No. 11 Cape Cod Academy (11-7), Monday at home at 4:30 p.m.

The girls lacrosse team won their first game of the tournament, and battled hard before losing to Duxbury.

The season was a success with team and individual accomplishments that included Hope Kissick becoming the school's all-time leading scorer.

The No. 1 seeded boys lacrosse team opened yesterday against Mo. 32 Blue Hills.

Results were unavailable at press time.

A win will set up a second round game against Hull on Sunday at 4 p.m.

Hull (No. 16, 12-5) beat Abington 5-2 in the first round.

Cohasset beat Hull in the regular season in the game that determined the South Shore League title.

The baseball team finished the regular season 11-9, battling from a sub-.500 start to the season and earned a No. 12 seeding in the Div. 4 South Sectional.

The baseball team is at No. 5 Bishop Connolly (13-7) today at 2:30 p.m.

Finally, there was the track and field team, who had a number of athletes qualify for post season.

Cohasset Individual State Qualifiers were: Maria Waters, High Jump; Melinda Dignam, 100m Hurdles; Kate Gibbons, 1 mile; Emily Rosano, 100m dash; Cole Morrison; 110 High Hurdles; Elijah Pontes, 400m run.

Also the Boys 4x100, 4x400, and 4x800 and the Girls 4x100, and 4x400 Relay Teams all qualified for States.

will run from 6 to 9 pm, rain or shine, under a tent or on the lawn.

Tickets are $75, with the proceeds to benefit CMI's "Row the Distance" capital campaign.

Since 1994, CMI has promoted the unique maritime history of South Shore by providing rowing for youth and adults. CMI currently has three ocean-worthy Mainville 26s and is seeking an additional boat and related equipment, and the upgrade of existing equipment, to support the growth of its youth and adult programs. The "Row the Distance" campaign launches a three-year fundraising effort to meet these goals and to provide increased recreational and competitive rowing for the youth and adult programs as well as improved scholarship opportunities for youth participants.

CMI's youth program is for students in grades 8 through 12 from Cohasset and surrounding communities. CMI coached 60 youths during 2012 at various levels of participation: recreational, health and fitness, competitive racing, and collegiate rowing preparation. Many graduates of CMI's program return as coxswains for its summer youth and adult programs, taking a leadership role. The increasingly popular adult program appeals to novice and experienced rowers of all ages, welcoming rowers and those who want to learn. In the past three years our coxswain team has organized and taught special Learn-to-Row sessions to introduce adults to sliding-seat rowing. Although it can take years of practice to reach the highest levels of this ultimate team sport, it takes only a few sessions on the water to gain the skills needed to row with boatmates to many interesting local sites. More experienced boats often row out near Minot Light, and there are many beautiful sites close to our Parker Avenue boathouse and launch site. Our program provides recreational, health and fitness, and competitive racing opportunities to all.

Come join CMI on June 22 for a fun-filled night on Cohasset Harbor at the Summer Splash kick-off! To purchase tickets, register, make a donation — or simply find out more about CMI's rowing programs — please visit CMI's website at www.rowcmi.com. SUMMER CAMPS

Rise Above Basketball

Brendan Carter, founder of Rise Above Basketball, has come together with former collegiate basketball players Robert Walton and Corey Lowe to create a unique basketball program which will cater to student athletes ranging from ages 7-18. Within this program they offer camps, clinics and individual training which will center on taking one's drive to the highest level of performance.

As you may know, athletics plays an important role in creating a sense of community. The program places a strong emphasis on fundamentals, work ethic, sportsmanship and developing leadership both on and off the court. As coaches, they are dedicated to helping each athlete reach his/her potential by being mentors and teachers of the game. Each member of the Rise Above Basketball coaching staff brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to the program from their days of playing college/professional basketball. The focus and purpose is to initiate, stimulate and improve opportunities for competition while teaching the fundamentals of basketball from the ground up, and making sure to stay within the pace of today's style of play.

Currently, Rise Above Basketball is training out of the following locations: South Boston, Dorchester, Roslindale, Framingham, Newton, Shrewsbury, Cohasset and Hingham, MA. This summer the program will be running co-ed basketball camps at the South Shore Sports Center (55 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham MA. 02043) July 15-July 19 & August 12-August 16 from 9:00AM-3:00PM for a cost of $225. The camp will be split up amongst different age groups (7-14). Camp includes Rise Above Basketball T-Shirt, Player Profiles, & Individual Awards.

The cost rises to $245 for registrations after June 15.

For further information, please visit the program's website at www.riseabovebasketball.com or contact bcarter@riseabovebasketball.com.

ROX BASEBALL

Rox and Food Pantry team up for Family Fun Day

The Brockton Rox will be partners with The Charity Guild food pantry for a Family Fun Day on Sunday, June 2, at the Rox ballpark, Campanelli Stadium.

Kids can dash around the bases, get their faces painted and meet Rox players and the mascot K O. They can enjoy a petting zoo, bouncy houses from Busy Bee Jumpers, balloon art by Jane Moraes and music by Mike Zucco's band.

Several local players suited up for the Rox last season.

Doors open at 11 a.m. and activities will continue until 2 p.m. A 1.5-mile Walk Against Hunger will start at noon, a leisurely stroll around the grounds of the stadium, which is on Feinberg Way in Brockton. Food will be available for purchase, and picnics in the outfield are encouraged.

Tickets are $20 for a family of four, $10 for an adult and $5 for a child. The first 50 people to register will get T-shirts and everyone will get a ticket to the Rox Family Fun Day game on June 9. Everyone who registers and pays in advance will be eligible to win a luxury box that seats 20 for a future Rox game. Tickets are available now at thecharityguild.org/events/familyfunday.php or www.brocktonrox.com.

All proceeds will benefit the Charity Guild food pantry at 501 Main Street in the heart of Brockton. Sponsors of the event include Mutual Bank, Sullivan & Cogliano Training Centers, Evolution Sports Performance, Bernardi Honda and Hyundai, Brockton Animal Hospital, Busy Bee Jumpers, McCormick & Sons Insurance, Lincoln Technical Institute, Cape Cod Café, Pop Tops and Costco.

ANTI-TOBACCO

Sixth-grader earns top honors in poster contest

Winners were honored at a special May 21 event at the Massachusetts State House in Boston.

Gabriella Finocchio, a sixth-grade student at the Cohasset Middle School, won top honors in the 2013 Anti-Tobacco Poster Contest, an annual educational event to alert schoolchildren to the dangers of tobacco and smoking sponsored by the Massachusetts Medical Society and its Alliance.

Gabriella was one of just 12 winners selected from more than 3,700 entries to the competition. Her entry, titled "Cigarettes," depicted rows of cigarette packages, with each one listing a reason not to smoke.

The competition is open to youngster in grades one through six throughout Massachusetts and asks students to create an original poster that ties in with certain themes for their grade. The themes by grades are: Grades one and two: Show how tobacco is bad for your body; grades three and four: Show how using tobacco affects other people; grades five and six: Why I won't start. Four entries were selected in each category, and the winning entries were chosen on the basis of originality, artistic merit, and relevance to the theme for the grades.

Winners were honored at a special May 21 event at the Massachusetts State House in Boston, where they received a certificate from the Medical Society and a gift card for books as prizes. Winning entries will also be included in a 2014 calendar produced by the Medical Society that will be distributed to schools, pediatricians, and family physicians across the Commonwealth.

Presenting the awards were South Shore cardiologist Dr. Ronald Dunlap, president of the Massachusetts Medical Society; South Shore Hospital physiatrist Dr. Janet Kent, a member of the Medical Society's Committee on Student Health and Sports Medicine; and Paula Madison, president of the MMS Alliance.

This year marked the 18th year that the Massachusetts Medical Society has conducted the contest. To view the winning entries, visit: massmed.org/tobacco.

SEPAC

Gathering celebrates success, looks ahead

Cohasset SEPAC is hosting their annual "Celebrate our Successes and Plan for the Next Year" cocktails and dinner gathering at Olde Salt House in Cohasset on Tuesday, June 4th at 7:30pm.

The Cohasset SEPAC board and members will review this year's goals and see which have been successfully met, such as, working collaboratively with school administration through monthly meetings, having paid professional development for the paraprofessionals and giving parents/guardians a support system through monthly coffees at board member's homes. A complete list of the 2012-13 goals can be found on the Cohasset SEPAC website. Next, the board will set new SEPAC goals for the 2013-14 school year.

Also, look at past year's speakers and discuss ideas for new topics and speakers for the next school year. The speakers and topics will be based on the 2012 Parent Questionnaire, verbal parent input, professional publications and seminars attended by the board members. "Cohasset SEPAC appreciates input from the PSO, School Committee, Administration and parents to create a strong calendar of speakers for the 2013-14 school year." states Diane Herth, SEPAC Co-chair.

Finally, to thank all the hard-working SEPAC board members for their service and dedication to the school district and Cohasset families.

All are invited to attend this fun evening. (Each attendee does pay their own bill.)

Please email Cohassetsepac@gmail.com or contact SEPAC Co-chair Helane Childs at 617-388-0999 if you plan to attend the celebration so there are enough tables reserved.

For more information and other events on the South Shore, visit our at: Cohassetsepac.org.

Claire Cook to discuss new novel

The Bathhouse Lecture Series will welcome Claire Cook at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, June 12, at the Nantasket Beach Resort, Hull Shore Drive, Hull. This event is the South Shore Launch Event for Cook's new book, "Time Flies," her novel about friendship, loyalty and returning home to Marshbury for the high school reunion.

Cook wrote her first novel when she was 45. At 50, she walked the red carpet at the Hollywood premiere of the film adaptation of her second novel, "Must Love Dogs." She is the bestselling author of nine other novels and divides her time between the suburbs of Atlanta and Boston.

Anyone who is unable to attend the event and would like to order a signed copy, can call Buttonwood Books & Toys at 781-383-2665.

8 JAMES LANE

LEGAL NOTICE
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Stephen J. Cleary to Ruth M. O'Brien, Trustee of the O'Brien Investment Trust, dated August 9, 2007, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, Book 25070, Page 265, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 AM on Tuesday, the 25th day of June, 2013, on the mortgaged premises at 8 James Lane, Cohasset, Massachusetts all and singular the premises described in said mortgage, to wit:

EXHIBIT A

A certain parcel of land shown on a plan entitled "Plan of Land. James Lane, Cohasset, Mass., Surveyed for the Estate of William H. McGaw" by Lewis W. Perkins & Sons, Engineers, dated November 13, 1959, recorded with Norfolk Deeds as Plan No. 688 of 1960, Plan Book 209, bounded and described as follows:

WESTERLY: by James Lane, 87.52 feet;
NORTHERLY: by land of Dorothy C. Wood, 133.71 feet;
EASTERLY: by land of The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, 186.84 feet;
SOUTHERLY and
SOUTHWESTERLY: by land of the Town of Cohasset, 190.15 feet; and NORTHERLY: by James Lane, 46 feet.

Containing 22,117 square feet, according to said plan.

The within described premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, and other existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage described herein or otherwise having priority over such mortgage if any there be, and subject to all unpaid real estate taxes and tax titles, assessments, and municipal liens, leases and tenancies, if any there be, which take precedence over the mortgage above described.

The mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the sale and to further postpone at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the adjourned sale.

TERMS OF SALE: At the foreclosure sale Twenty-Five Thousand and 00/100 ($25,000.00) Dollars of the purchase price will be required to be paid in cash, bank, treasurer's or certified check drawn to the order of Kellem & Kellem, LLP, attorneys for the said mortgagee. The balance is to be provided by certified funds or bank check at Kellem & Kellem, LLP, 100 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham, MA 02045 within thirty (30) days after the date of the sale. The deed will be delivered to the purchaser for recording upon receipt in full of the purchase price. In the event of an error in this publication, the description of the premises set forth in said mortgage shall control. In the event of a default in the terms hereof by the successful bidder, the mortgagee reserves the right, but not the obligation, to convey the premises by foreclosure deed to the second highest bidder for the amount thereof, subject to the terms hereof.

It shall be the responsibility of the purchaser to pay for all costs of recording, including excise tax stamps and any other recording expenses. The successful bidder will be required to sign a Memorandum of Sale at the time of the sale, as a condition of the successful bid, which terms, among others, if any, are to be announced at the time of sale.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Accidents can occur when backing out of a driveway or parking space over a child the driver did not see. Many newer cars are equipped with detection devices like backup cameras or warning sounds, but they can't take the place of you actively walking around your car to make sure your children are safely out of the way. Don't rely solely on these devices to detect what's behind your vehicle. COURTESY PHOTO

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 10, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cheer up, Lamb. Your emotional impasse will lift once you allow your highly tuned sense of justice to guide you on what to do about an associate's questionable behavior.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) News about a project you hoped to work on might need more clarification. Take nothing just on faith. Draw up a list of questions, and insist on each being fully answered.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Giving your time to help others is fine. But don't lose sight of your own needs. Make plans for an energy-restoring getaway with that very special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulate yourself on getting that difficult job done to everyone's satisfaction. This could be the first of many such challenges you might be offered down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With your enthusiasm soaring again, you feel ready to tackle a tough new assignment. Good for you! And remember: Don't be too proud to accept help when it's offered.

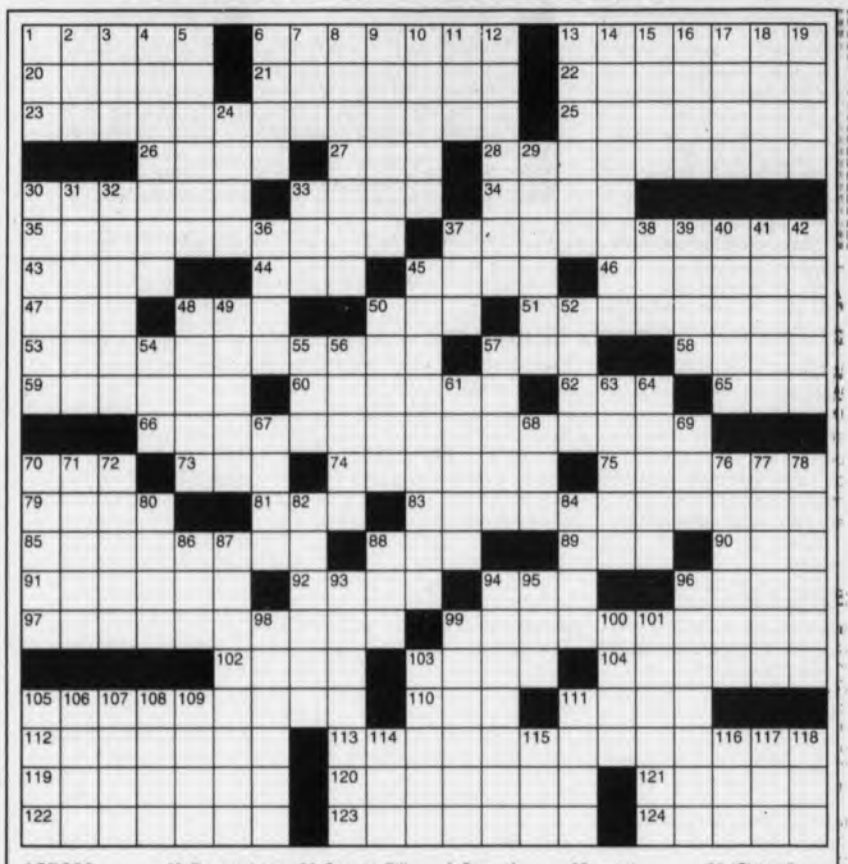
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Cupid rules the week for single Virgos eager to make a romantic connection. Meanwhile, Virgo couples experience renewed commitment in their relationships.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Home and work issues vie for your attention through early next week. Rely on your Libran sense of balance to keep you from being overwhelmed by either side.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creative projects might have to go on standby as you tackle other matters making demands on your time and energy. Things should ease by the middle of next week.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your energies are high, and so are your aspirations. But be careful not to let work dominate the week. It's also important to spend time with family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good time to set aside your pride and stop nursing those hurt feelings. Instead, consider restoring relationships you want to have back in your life.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might be miffed at not being shown more appreciation for your hard work. But don't brood over it. Recognition comes in its own time and in its own way.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With your inner creative juices starting to boil and bubble, this is a good time to launch a new arts-related project, or go back and restart the one you had set aside.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of seeing the best in people, which helps encourage them to live up to your perceptions.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Adria Arch 'Iconic' exhibit at The Art Complex Museum

WHEN: reception from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Sunday, June 2
WHERE: The Art Complex Museum, 189 Alden St., Duxbury
INFO: In her large paintings, the elements she creates spatter across and extend beyond the picture plane. Arch has long been drawn to the expressiveness found in unselfconscious doodles – either her own or some else's. She feels they are metaphors for boundless physical energy as they float, spin and fall through space. Her exhibit will run through Aug. 18.

Plymouth Antiquarian Society honors earliest preservationists

WHEN: 4 p.m. Saturday, June 1.
WHERE: Memorial Hall, Court St., Plymouth.
INFO: Hedge House celebration for the restored Rose Briggs Memorial Garden at the Hedge House, 126 Water St., Plymouth. The garden celebration will kick off with the premiere of a mini-documentary on the organization's history. The event begins at Memorial Hall with a film showing and discussion with filmmakers Jon Dorn and Scott McEwen of Brewster Productions. A reception in the Rose Briggs Garden will immediately follow the film. Tickets are $25 per person; $22 for Society members. Refreshments will be served; reservations are required. To reserve tickets or for more information, contact the Plymouth Antiquarian Society at 508-746-0012 or visit www.plymouthantiquariansociety.org.

IT'S OFFICIAL:

Town Manager search is on

Selectmen vote to start process

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Six months before Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract is set to expire, the Board of Selectmen voted 3-0 to start the search for a permanent town manager. However, the decision was not reached without debate and a long, drawn-out discussion on what, exactly, the board is seeking to do with this search.

The answer to that remains inconclusive as three out of the five selectmen voted to launch the search, with two abstaining because they did not see a point in taking this vote. Earlier in the meeting, the board voted 4-1 to bring in a consultant from the UMass Collins Center to discuss how to start the search process. Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted "nay," stating that she wanted the board to take a formal vote on starting the search itself, not just bringing in a consultant to talk about starting the search.

Gjesteby explained, "It's very important for the town to know specifically that we want to search for a town manager. To water it down [by voting to bring in a consultant]... It's ridiculous."

When it came time to vote for the town manager search itself, Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer both abstained from voting. At one point both selectmen, along with chair Fred Koed, got out of their seats and left the room because the discussion had gone on for so long, they needed a brief recess.

Koed even joked as he exited, "I'm going to the men's

Senior Center

Discussion sends mixed signals

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen took a symbolic vote Tuesday night to support the building of a town senior center. However, the vote was not taken without a long, contentious discussion.

The crux of the matter is this: while a private, non-profit organization has offered to fund the building project of a brand new, state-of-the art senior center, there has never been a formal Town Meeting vote to discover if Cohasset residents actually want a senior center. The argument is that while the center, once built, will be donated to the town as a gift, the town would then carry the financial responsibility of keeping up the building, along with staffing obligations.

On Tuesday, members of Elder Affairs, the Senior Center Planning Committee and the Social Service League, the non-profit funding the project, came together for a discussion with the selectmen on whether a Town Meeting vote should be taken. The senior center proponents were insulted by such a question, while those pushing for a Town Meeting vote asked to see the financial impact the center would have on the town and allow taxpayers to decide whether they wanted to take on the cost.

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore said Tuesday, "It's very simple. The elder center's planning group has made a good effort to move this thing along, but it's time for the board of selectmen and town meeting to take a vote on whether they want it or not."

A Cohasset senior center has been several years in the making. While the town has senior programming through Elder Affairs, which utilizes offices in the town Community Center, Cohasset does not have a physical home for senior activities. In addition

'Nice' group to graduate Saturday

Class of 2013 ready to launch

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It's the moment they've all been waiting for.

Cohasset High School graduation is this Saturday, June 8 at 1:30 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, rain or shine.

And it very well might be raining. Saturday's weather forecast is calling for precipitation and low temperatures for this time of year — the same as last year's graduation. However, the rain did nothing to dampen the spirits of the excited graduates and their proud parents, teachers and other supporters last year. It's not likely to keep the 86 students in the Class of 2013 down, either.

Friday, May 24 marked the last day of school for Cohasset seniors, the same night as prom. The senior class reconvened a week later for their annual class cookout and field day on Friday, May 28, and again for a class breakfast on Tuesday, June 4. Thursday,

HAPPENING SUNDAY

PMC-South Shore Kids Ride

The Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) South Shore Kids is this Sunday, June 9 at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. It's not too late to join the fun peddling for a great cause, the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Jimmy Fund. Approximately 500 children ages 3-15 are expected to ride one of several routes in Wompatuck to raise money for the Jimmy Fund. 100 percent of all PMC donations are used to fund cancer research and help with patient care at the Dana-Farber. The post-ride party includes music, food, raffle, and lots of fun!

The new Blood Mobile from Dana-Farber and Brigham and Women's will be there. They are taking donors from 9-11:15 a.m. on the quarter hour. Please email: pmckidsblood-drive@gmail.com as times for this are limited.
Walk-in registration for the ride is accepted Saturday and Sunday. Pre-check-in is Saturday 9-12 at Wompatuck.

Amanda Thompson

The Mariner caught up with Amanda "Mandii" Thompson, youth pastor at Beechwood Congregational Church who heads up the church's new coffeehouse, Ground Level. Ground Level's opening night, featuring local artwork, an open mic, the band Highway Ghosts and, of course, coffee, is tonight, Friday, June 7 at 7 p.m. If you see Mandii around town, be sure to tell her you spotted her in Picture This! PHOTO/ERIN DALE

Name: Amanda "Mandii" Thompson.

Occupation: Writer, teacher, mover, shaker.

Best day of your life: I will always feel good about the day I learned to snowboard. The cold got bitter just in time to welcome our retreat group to New Hampshire. It was hard. It was cold. I spent more time on the ground than on my feet. And then, just before they shut down the lift, I made it to the bottom of the bunny hill without falling. It was worth everything, even the three days of mincing and hobbling that followed, because I won. Take that, mountain!

Best vacation: One year, my family went to Disney in September. September is when hurricanes happen in Disney. But we didn't let the forecast stop us! They let us go around and around on the rides without getting off while everyone else piled onto the last plane out of town. It was a little less awesome when the storm actually happened and the entire resort shut down, sequestering me in a room for two days with my family, bag lunches, and an exceptionally dull summer reading assignment. To be fair, I probably should have finished that before going to Disney.

Favorite season: I used to hate winter, but now that I've learned to snowboard, I think it's my favorite!

Favorite holiday: Got to be Christmas. Pure magic. Also, did you know it's a birthday? If you would like a button to remind you that Christmas is a birthday, please come to Ground Level and we will be sure to hook you up. I don't know where they came from but we have a lot of them.

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: Bacon.

Best book: Only one? I have, like, five just from this year. "The Name of the Wind" by Patrick Rothfuss. "Bite Me" by Christopher Moore. "Fahrenheit 451" by Ray Bradbury. "Perelandra" by C. S. Lewis. "Leviathan" by Scott Westerfeld. And the book of Acts.

Best movie or actor: "Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy," "Inception," every film by Hayao Miyazaki.

Best TV show: Edward R. Murrow said, "Television is the opiate of the people." To be fair, though, I'm not sure my life would be complete without "Gravity Falls."

Best music, group or artist: You have no idea the rabbit hole you've just dived into with that question. Currently, I am obsessing over Air Traffic Controller's "Nordo" and "Vessels" by Twenty One Pilots. I will forever love Five Iron Frenzy and Relient K. My heart and loyalty lie with Boston's own Adam Ezra Group. But if you are looking for an all-time best song in history kind of answer, I cast my vote for "Con te Partirò" by Andrea Bocelli or "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Pet peeve: When people don't use their turn signal!

Fun fact: At last count, I have 11 grandmothers. I haven't met them all, though.

Person you would most like to meet: Michael Marotta. He's already doing, on a much bigger scale, what I am trying to do with the Ground Level café. I believe that man is single-handedly saving the Boston music scene.

Goal: To write great books. To experience the world outside my box. To love the heck out of people.

Biggest worry: Same as everyone else: college debt.

Best part of Cohasset: The Strawberry Festival [as part of the South Shore Arts Festival].

POLICE BEAT

Accident closes part of upper King Street

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 19-year-old Norwell teen in a 2007 Lexus SUV was distracted while adjusting his radio and went off upper King Street by Schofield Road on Sunday (June 2) around noontime, hitting a utility pole. The pole was snapped in half, pulling out some underground electrical service to a house. Part of King Street had to be closed for much of the day while National Grid removed the pole. Several homes were without power. The driver was cited for impeded operation (radio), failure to stay in marked lanes, and failure to wear a seatbelt. He and his passenger, also 19, were not injured. However the Lexus was totaled and had to be towed.

Larceny

Police are investigating the report of a larceny of narcotics from the home of an elderly resident where the suspect had been working as a home health aide.

Police said the alleged victim is an 86-year-old Cohasset man. His current health aide reported the former aide, who is an ex-employee of the same home health services company, arrived at the door last week saying she had left a book at the residence. The new aide kept an eye on her and told police she witnessed the woman go into the patient's medicine container and steal a bottle of pills before leaving the residence, police said.

Police are summonsing the suspect, who is a 41-year-old Weymouth woman, to court to face charges of breaking and entering in the daytime under false pretenses and larceny from a building. The new aide also reported the incident to her employer, police said.

2-car crash

At 11:54 a.m. on Tuesday (May 28), police responded to a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Beechwood Street. Police said a 2008 Honda sedan, operated by a 20-year-old Weymouth man, was headed south on 3A and ran the red light at Beechwood Street. The Honda hit a 2001 Toyota sedan, operated by a 21-year-old Cohasset man that was traveling east across the highway on the green light. Both cars were heavily damaged and had to be towed. The Cohasset man was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The Weymouth man was cited for failure to stop at a red light, police said.

Turtle crossings

Police have been inundated with calls this week about large turtles attempting to cross Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the train station. Police said this is an annual occurrence as the turtles are making their way across the road to lay their eggs.

They warn, however, that the speed limit is 50 mph along that stretch of highway and they are concerned motorists could cause an accident by trying to stop quickly to avoid hitting a turtle. Also stopping on 3A to help a turtle make it across could also cause an accident.

Jumpers

They're back! When the temperature rises – the bridge jumpers return in droves. That was the case last week when police received numerous calls (at least 9 incidents over two days) about people jumping off the Border Street bridge into the water below. They also dispersed a gathering on Cunningham Bridge. Police said the jumpers are coming from near and far – from Cohasset, Brockton and even Boston.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said police do their best to manage the situation. Summer police officers start July 1 and will help the police department deal with the problem. Last summer, two Boston teens nearly drowned after jumping off the bridge.

Police have chosen to disperse the gatherings rather than make any arrests. However, if they find alcohol or if there are other problems such as jumpers spray painting graffiti, they will make arrests.

"It is a constant drain on our resources," Quigley said. He said the jumpers also often cause traffic tie-ups.

Expired license

A 36-year-old Cohasset man was issued a summons for unlicensed operation after he was stopped for speeding in the school zone on Sohier Street on Friday (May 31) at about 7:40 a.m. A check of his license showed it had expired on his birthday in January. The Jeep he was driving was towed, police said.

Blown tire

Police responded to a motorist who stopped at the Mobil Station on King Street (Route 3A) and Sohier Street) on Friday (May 31) around 2:47 p.m. after she had hit a rock on Sohier Street that blew out her tire. Police were unable to locate the rock but noted there is a lot of construction going on in the area.

Road rage

Two people involved in an apparent road rage incident decided not to pursue the matter any further after they both called policed on Friday around 5:50 p.m.

A 28-year-old Norwell woman reported that she was behind a blue Audi on South Main Street when the Audi braked twice and then stopped in the travel lane in front of her. The driver of the Audi got out and yelled at her and then proceeded to take pictures of her license plate. A witness corroborated her report, police said.

A few minutes later police got a call from the 47-year-old Cohasset man who was driving the Audi. He admitted to applying his brakes, getting out to speak to the other driver and taking the photos because the woman behind him had been speeding and tailgating.

Passed out

Police responded to a report of a man passed out on a lawn on Arrowwood Road at 10:30 p.m. on Friday (May 31). They located a 42-year-old Border Street man who was heavily intoxicated and incoherent. He was taken into protective custody and released after he sobered up, police said.

Theft

Police are investigating the report of the theft of several items of jewelry and a laptop computer, valued at $5,000, from a residence on Jerusalem Road last week. The victim arrived home after a medical appointment and found the screen to her bedroom had been cut, there were books on the floor by the window and items in the house had been disturbed.

Bulkhead

On Sunday (June 2) about 6:30 p.m., a 42-year-old Summer Street man reported that it appeared the bulkhead to his basement had been tampered with. There was nothing missing and no signs of forced entry but he wanted to bring the matter to the attention of police.

GRADUATION

June 6 was the class awards night.

These activities allow the seniors to celebrate goals they have accomplished, commemorate their years passed in Cohasset schools, and, of course, anticipate what lies ahead.

It's a time for excitement and saying goodbye.

There are many adjectives that could describe the Class Of 2013. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo chose "talented," "dedicated," and perhaps most importantly — "nice." This year's senior class is full of students who care about giving back, Cataldo explained.

"They seem dedicated to community service. Many of them have written to me that they look forward to giving back to society and the community they grew up in, and that's very commendable," the superintendent said.

The Class of 2013 has already started giving back to their community by doing the first-ever group senior class service project. The students chose to clean up the South Shore Music Circus, getting it ready for Saturday's graduation. They will assemble today (Friday, June 7) at 11 a.m. to prep the venue for the ceremony.

Senior Evan Ackley said that as a member of the graduating class and also as a Music Circus usher, cleaning up the venue is a nice gesture. "I think it's fantastic," said Ackley, commending his fellow seniors for "how willing we are to help out.

"We've come a very long way," Ackley added. "I think it's time we give back to the Music Circus somehow."

Senior Class President Andrew Barrett said that while cleaning up is a relatively quick and easy job, it offers some relief for the Music Circus, which normally has just one person doing the cleaning.

"We're kind of just wiping the pollen off the seats and doing last-minute things," said Barrett. "We do it as a class to get it done quicker and more efficient."

The decision to make this the class service project was made by the senior class officers, principal and senior class advisors Stephanie Moriarty and Nina Berkowitz, said Barrett, "who have been unbelievable this year."

Barrett said the Music Circus was an easy choice for the clean-up project. "The Music Circus gives us the venue for free, and we wanted to give back to it."

CHS principal Carolyn Connolly said that this year's graduating seniors are stellar examples for younger students to look up to, and are already quite "mature and responsible."

"I consider myself to be extremely fortunate because I cannot imagine a nicer, more genuine, more respectful group of kids. It's been an absolute delight to work with them throughout the year," said Connolly. "I started the school year on opening day by telling them that they could explore different opportunities if I wasn't disappointed — they have never even come close. They set such an example for the rest of the building, and I will miss them terribly. They're quite an extraordinary group of kids."

CHS assistant principal Brian Scott echoed the sentiment. "You couldn't ask for a better group of kids," he said. "They've been pleasure to work with. They've worked hard all year, are enormously talented, and have great futures. I couldn't be prouder, and I couldn't be happier for them."

Cataldo said that she expects big things from the Class of 2013. "We have a group of very talented students that we expect to go and do incredible things in life."

Check the Mariner online and next week's print edition for graduation coverage.

Marita Carpenter, Social Service League to the Community Center, Elder Affairs activities often take place all over town, in churches such as Second Congregational.

The Social Service League is fundraising to pay for the $4 million, 13,000-square foot senior center, to be located at 91 Sohier St. (also known as "parcel 4A"). The selectmen recently approved a land transfer between the town and the League; the land was owned by the Cohasset Swim Trust. The land swap allows the private League to construct the building as private property; the League's intention is to gift the building to the town once the project is completed.

Proponents for the center opined that accepting the League's gift is a no-brainer.

Social Service League president Marita Carpenter said that she was "baffled" by the town's apparent reluctance to accept the center, stating that she couldn't think of "any other town" that would sniff at such an opportunity.

"Cohasset's not the only town that needs a senior center — we are trying to give it to you. You're getting a building," said Carpenter. "I feel like Dorothy going before the Wizard of Oz, and I don't want to do it any more."

The watchdogs of Cohasset's finances – the Advisory and Capital Budget committees – were referred to as "number crunchers" during the discussion, the senior center proponents indicating that they were the only ones against the center.

Senior Center Planning Group member Glenn Pratt said it was time for the selectmen, not the finance boards, to lead by making a decision.

"Enough is enough," Pratt said. "For the number crunching analysts to say 'it's too expensive, we can't do it,' is disrespectful to seniors. The time has come; we have to move. There a lot of issues to deal with but [the senior center] keeps getting moved to the back burner."

Selectman Steve Gaumer, former Capital Budget chairman, took offense to the "tongue-lashing," he said. "We're not insulting seniors; I take offense to that." Gaumer added that he felt the town could vote to support a senior center if it were financially viable.

Selectman Karen Quigley said that she agreed with Gaumer. "It saddens me that this continues to be an adversarial relationship," she said of the dispute. "This is something good for the community, but we have to be realistic at the same time."

Pratt pointed out how Town Meeting and various boards, including the selectmen and Planning Board, have voted to authorize aspects of the project, from frontage to sewering and a survey to gauge the community's needs.

Pescatore argued, however, that there has never been a big picture vote for the town as a whole to decide whether to support the project. Future costs for the center are largely unknown, he explained, so accepting the building and the costs associated with it is a risk for the town.

"You can't encumber for the future," Pescatore said.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy, who said she supports the senior center, argued that there can't be a vote "unless you have something to vote on," noting that the financials are not ready for review. She said that the Senior Center Planning Group is the place to hash the numbers out and urged that the committee needs to meet and refine its mission.

The proponents, however, urged the selectmen to vote on the concept of a senior center. The selectmen voted 4-1 in support of the center; the dissenting vote was Gaumer's. He stated. "I want to make certain that my nay vote is recorded on lack of information, not the merits of the project."

Sports donations

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo announced during the Wednesday School Committee meeting that the way booster clubs donate to school sports would soon be changing. Cataldo explained that she and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro are creating a new "checks and balances" system that requires all donations to be documented and publicly acknowledged.

With this new system, all boosters must first meet with school Athletic Director Ron Ford and wait for a school committee vote prior to having a donation approved. This will allow for more transparency on how monies are spent on sports, said Cataldo.

The superintendent explained that the departments have revolving accounts with money in them that should be utilized first before asking people to donate money to certain activities.

"We want to make sure the revolving accounts are utilized each year," said Cataldo.

The school committee's budget subcommittee will review the revolving accounts and booster donations, Cataldo said.

Time added to school day

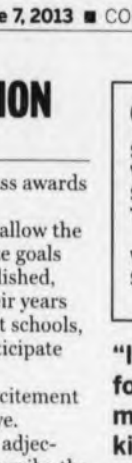
The School Committee voted unanimously Wednesday to approve the parent handbooks and school improvement plans for the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Both elementary school principals presented the handbooks and plans to the school committee, and also discussed the fall schedule.

There will be an additional 10 minutes per school day starting this fall. The principals shared how they will utilize this extra time.

Osgood principal Bob LeCount said that the time will be spent as an "intervention extension period" to assist students who need help with literacy. The 10-minute time block will occur during the first period of the day.

"It's an additional 50 minutes per week," said LeCount.

Deer Hill principal Dr. Jennifer deChiara said that teachers plan to use the time to implement a structural handwriting program.



"It's an idea whose time has come," said deChiara.

The Joy Place gate has been restored.

Cohasset Central Cemetery completes 1st phase of restorations

Please note the decorative ironwork on the roof of the caretaker's shed on Joy Place.

The Cohasset Central Cemetery (CCC) Board of Directors are pleased to announce the restoration of the Joy Place Gate, the Lothrop plot fence and the decorative ironwork on the roof of the caretaker's shed on Joy Place. This is part of a capital improvement effort to restore the historic elements of the 300-year-old cemetery. The cemetery has a rich history. It is the final resting place of Medal of Honor recipient Levi Gaylord a Civil War Veteran, and the Brig St. John Celtic cross, memorializing the loss of 99 Irish immigrants in 1849 off the Cohasset ledges. Many of the town's founding families of the 18th and 19th century are interred here. Please go to our web site at: cohassetcentralcemetery.com for more about Central cemetery.

The CCC plans to begin the next phase of restoration this summer, which will include the main gate and fence on North Main Street and installation of a new sign to identify the Historic burial ground.

The Board wants to thank the many individuals for their donations, which allow the CCC to undertake these projects. CCC is a private, non-profit organization and relies on donations and endowment income to cover its operating expenses.

The cemetery still has space available in the Cumner, Tower and Cotton Columbariums. Those interested should contact Elinor Campbell at 781-383-1436.

The Lothrop plot fence has been restored.

Lobster rolls back at Arts Festival

Lobster rolls at the South Shore Arts Festival are a Cohasset tradition – Father's Day weekend, Friday, June 14, through Sunday, June 16. Lobster rolls at First Parish, strawberry shortcake at the Second Congregational Church, and a showcase of crafts and fine artists from New England and beyond make the Festival weekend a terrific family event.

Order lobster rolls early and consider holding a family picnic or treating office staff to a "Thank You Lunch." First Parish, adjacent to Cohasset Common, has held its price for the all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips at $13 for several years.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is highly recommended, and walk-ins will be welcome as long as supplies last. They have sold out on Saturday three years in a row. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of 1,200 lobster rolls in the past few years.

There are several ways to place a lobster order: Pick up an order form at the Parish House, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday; call Diana Kornet at 781-383-6576; or email firstlobster@verizon.net. Mail checks to First Parish Cohasset, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Preorders will be accepted until 6 p.m., on Wednesday, June 12.

Hours for order pickup at the Parish House, 23 N. Main Street, Cohasset: Friday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is highly recommended, and walk-ins will be welcome as long as supplies last.

Livingstone receives UCANE scholarship

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Graduation

Hi Cohasset and congratulations to all the graduates in town from preschool age all the way to those receiving master's degrees and more. I am so happy, sad and amazingly proud all at once to extend congratulations to this years CHS Class of 2013, who will have the ceremony and flip the tassels on their cap tomorrow (Saturday, June 8 at p.m.) at the South Shore Music Circus. It is not looking like a super sunny or calm day weather-wise but this class of awesome young men and women can handle it with ease I am sure. The raindrops will disguise a few tears for myself and many others as we watch our "babies" accept that diploma and say not good-bye but, "See you down the road CHS, thank you for the years of memories, education and fun!"

From this Mom to the Cohasset Public Schools, the teachers, aides, lunch monitors, bus drivers, janitors and so many more...you are all a huge part of who my three children are, no thank you can and will ever be enough in size. Sigh....A major chapter has closed and for our life and so many others so good luck everyone!

Scholarship

The Utility Contractors' Association of New England, Inc., in Quincy, recently presented twelve $2,000 scholarships to high school seniors who achieved high personal goals, scholastically and within their community and civic, religious and volunteer organizations.

Michael Livingstone, son of Jean and William Livingstone, of Cohasset, accepted the award at a dinner held in his honor at the Four Points by Sheraton Hotel, in Norwood. New England Patriots Center Ryan Wendell assisted in the presentation.

Michael will attend Providence College where he will major in history and English. His career objective is to become a history teacher, go to law school, and then go into politics.

Clemson

Congratulations to Christina Marie Secatore of Cohasset on being named to the president's list at Clemson University for the spring 2013 semester. Christina is majoring in pre-business. To be named to the president's list, a student must achieve a 4.0 (all As) grade-point average.

Bucknell

Bucknell University conferred degrees to students who completed their graduation requirements during this past spring semester. Degrees were awarded May 19, 2013.

Receiving an award was Kristin Monaco of Cohasset, daughter of Lynn Monaco of Cohasset and Gerald Monaco of Hingham, and a 2009 graduate of Cohasset Middle H. S. Kristin graduated cum laude with a bachelor science degree in mechanical engineering. She received the William H. and Carl W. Neff Prize for showing exceptional academic and personal growth

Kristin was also named to the dean's list for outstanding academic achievement during the spring semester of the 2012-13 academic year at Bucknell University. A student must earn a grade point average of 3.5 or higher on a scale of 4.0 to receive dean's list recognition.

Connecticut

Eleanor Baumgarten of Cohasset was awarded a bachelor of arts degree from Connecticut College at the 95th commencement ceremony on May 19. Eleanor majored in environmental studies. Best wishes for a great future, Eleanor!

In other Connecticut College news, the following Cohasset residents received student achievement awards at the annual Honors and Awards ceremony on May 8, 2013.

Abigail Faulkner, a junior, was awarded the Macroeconomics Prize, for best intermediate macroeconomics student. Abigail, a 2010 graduate of Milton Academy, is the daughter of Bernadette and Philip Faulkner of Cohasset.

Caroline Collins, a sophomore, was awarded the Dorothy Richardson Prize, to a sophomore for excellence in biology offered by the biology department in honor of Dorothy Richardson. Caroline, a 2011 graduate of Cohasset High School, is the daughter of Mary Whitley of Cohasset.

Providence

Jonathan Wade, a resident of Cohasset, was among over 900 students from Providence College who received undergraduate degrees during the College's 95th Commencement Exercises held on Sunday, May 19. Jonathan graduated with a bachelor's degree in management. Congratulations, Jonathan!

WPI

Worcester Polytechnic Institute announced that Sarah Mavilia of Cohasset, a sophomore majoring in civil engineering, was named to the university's dean's list for academic excellence for the 2013 spring semester. Great news!

UVM

Some 2,557 students were awarded a variety of bachelor's degrees during the University of Vermont's 211th commencement ceremonies on May 19, 2013.

The following Cohasset residents received degrees: Lauren A. Allen, bachelor of science degree in elementary education K-6; Victor J. Hartmann, bachelor of science degree in business administration; and Patrick E. Hurley, bachelor of science degree in natural resources. Congratulations all!

Senior Center

On Monday, June 10, at noon, Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., will hold Brown Bag Lunch and Movie Day. June's movie will be "The Greatest Game Ever Played," a golf drama based on the true story of the 1913 US Open, where 20-year-old Francis Ouimet defeated his idol, 1900 US Open champion, Englishman, Harry Vardon. Bring your own lunch. Cohasset Elder Affairs will provide popcorn and soft drinks. For transportation, call 781-383-9112.

Then, a few days later on Wednesday, June 12 at 11 a.m. join friends at Cohasset Elder Affairs for a Father's Day Celebration featuring performer Richard Clark. As a part of his series Keeping History Alive, this talented actor will present "And Now, Mark Twain." Enjoy a visit with one of America's best-loved writers and humorists. You will be treated to a compendium of Mark Twain's life works; laugh along with him at the foibles, follies and fantasies of a bygone era. This program will take place at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., and lunch will follow. Please call for reservations at 781-383-9112. Transportation will be provided if necessary. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Book prize

Congratulations go out to Max Montgomery, a rising senior at The Noble and Greenough School in Dedham, who was recently awarded the Harvard Book Prize at Awards Night. This prize is given annually to a boy and girl in the Junior class who by virtue of their character, scholastic achievement, excellence in athletics and other extra curricular activities best exemplifies the traditional ideas of American citizenship. Nice job Max, your family and friends are very proud!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Plant sale helped herald the season

Cohasset and the sun greeted the yearly Plant Sale of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, held on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society, South Main Street, on Saturday, May 18. People came in waves from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., looking for daylilies, yarrow, ground cover, climbing plants, etc., which they knew had come from the members' local gardens and thus had coped well with Cohasset's temperatures, its salt in the air and the wind from the sea.

Then there were others who knew that they could expect a bargain, not only on the normal garden plants, but this year on items such as a nice size split leaf Japanese maple tree or the Corylus Avellana Contorta known as Harry Lauder's Walking Stick.

In addition to the garden/plant advice CGCC members were delighted to share with customers, this year the Massachusetts Horticultural Society had generously supplied Master Gardeners whose extensive knowledge helped with questions ranging from Eastern Filbert Blight to a list of trees that will bloom white flowers in August. All questions were welcomed.

Boy Scouts helped in many ways during the morning, such as loading and unloading trucks and vans full of plants but also helping people who had purchased items to their cars. Comfort of a different sort was evident under the green canopy selling freshly homemade, chocolate chunk and pecan oatmeal cookies, plus ice cold lemonade, hot coffee and bottled water.

Funds, as always, are used to support the club's work in the gardens maintained by the Club in Cohasset: The Lighthkeeper's House, the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building and Constitution Park next to the Cohasset Post Office.

The club was delighted with its results. Funds, as always, are used to support the club's work in the gardens maintained by the Club in Cohasset: The Lighthkeeper's House, the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building and Constitution Park next to the Cohasset Post Office. Funds are also used to support the club's monthly work in the Cohasset schools and at Golden Living Center.

As one of the Plant Sale's customers said as he left, "This is a win-win situation. I get great plants and you use the money to help keep Cohasset beautiful. Who could ask for anything more?"

HAPPENING

Arts Festival is next weekend

It's that time of year again — the South Shore Arts Festival is taking over Cohasset common all throughout Father's Day weekend.

The 58th Annual Arts Festival kicks-off Friday, June 14, from noon to 6 p.m.; Saturday, June 15, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Sunday, June 16, noon to 5 p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from the parking lot at South Shore Music Circus on Sohier Street. A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit: ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is the Main Exhibition Tent, which houses a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. The Arts Festival also showcases nearly 90 juried craft artists, demonstrating artists, a young artists' exhibition, and local musicians, performing on the Festival Stage.

South Shore Art Center has announced the award winners of its two Arts Festival exhibitions in the Main Exhibition Tent. Almost 250 artworks will be on display. An Awards Ceremony will be held on Friday, June 15 at 5:30 pm at the Festival Stage and will include scholarship awards given to local graduating high school seniors and young artist awards.

Eagle Scout's signs showcase town events

Another Troop 28 scout makes Eagle

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Thanks to Eagle Scout Evan Ackley, Cohasset residents will have another way to know about the goings-on in town.

For his Eagle Scout project, Cohasset High School senior Ackley, 18, designed sandwich board signs to be displayed at Town Hall, at the schools and around Cohasset announcing town events like Town Meeting or the Town Election. Ackley got to see his signs in action when both events took place this May.

Cohasset was in need of signs like these, said Ackley, who got the idea from Merle Brown, a Scout Master in Cohasset's Troop 28. Brown had seen similar signs in other towns, including neighboring Scituate. Ackley pitched his idea to the Board of Selectmen, whose members "were really excited by it."

Ackley's signs help raise awareness for town events, especially those that have relatively low attendance, such as Town Meeting. With the implementation of Ackley's signs, "Hopefully the attendance rate will be higher so we can solve more problems," he said.

It's a pretty practical Eagle Scout project. "Organization is always beautiful," said Ackley.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest a Boy Scout can achieve. To reach Eagle Scout status, the scout must complete 21 merit badges and a project that benefits the community and involves leadership; the area Boy Scout Council must approve an Eagle project and the workbook detailing the scout's project. The Eagle Scout Project Workbook contains all the scout's records, letters of recommendations, plus pictures and details of the project itself.

All requirements must be completed by the time the scout reaches 18. Roughly 5 percent of boys who enter scouting go on to become Eagle Scouts. However, several Cohasset Boy Scouts have received the honor in the past year. Ackley is Troop 28's seventh Eagle Scout in the Class of 2013.

Ackley joined Cohasset's Boy Scout troop when he was 13 years old and has managed to accomplish a lot in the past five years. His father is involved as a scoutmaster, as is the father of one of Ackley's best friends, Robbie Hillman. Hillman is also an Eagle Scout, as is Ackley's friend Jack Thomae; both of his friends convinced Ackley to go for the Eagle ranking.

By the time he decided to go for it, it was a bit of a time crunch. "I only had a few months to do the project before turning 18," in April, he said. "I did a whole lot in a little amount of time." Ackley managed to complete all the requirements and turn in the necessary paperwork with two days to spare before the deadline.

The scout had some help in completing the project, notably from scout advisor Roger Hill, who owns King Street Boats in Cohasset. Ackley and Hill designed the signs together.

"He's an amazing guy," Ackley said of Hill, who has assisted with many an Eagle Scout project for Troop 28. "He knows a lot about the town, engineering, and getting stuff done. Without him, I wouldn't be an eagle scout."

In addition to learning how to pull off a big project in a short amount of time, the Eagle Scout project also helped Ackley hone his leadership skills.

"It gives me confidence," he said of achieving the Eagle rank. "The scout law is to be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent... It's important — all the words mean something different. They make up what it really means to be a leader."

It's a good foundation for an ambitious future. Ackley is heading to Salem State University this fall to study theater. While he is "on the fence" about a possible minor, he's considering psychology.

While acting for a living is his foremost goal, his "Plan B" is music. Ackley sings and plays guitar, even giving guitar lessons.

"I've always wanted to be a musician," he said. Ten years from now, he hopes to have a touring band. "I want to travel."

His chief ambition, perhaps, is playing "Doctor Who" on TV. He's off to a good start, scoring an audition and callback for a role in a Robert Downey, Jr. movie that's filming in Boston. Ackley's goal as he begins his studies is to "get the basics down in acting, at least, so I know what I'm doing."

Other than that, the future "is all up in the air," Ackley says. "It's going to be the most amazing experience of my life."

Ackley got his start performing in CHS musicals and plays. Retired CHS music teacher Bryan Marks gave Ackley his first major role, which the senior says changed his life. When he auditioned for the CHS production of "The Wiz," Ackley said that he didn't want a speaking role. Marks convinced him to play the Tinman. Ackley went on to earn leading roles in four other CHS productions, including the fall 2012 musical, "The Drowsy Chaperone."

It's a big leap from the boy who wanted to be on stage, but not front and center. "It's weird to think how far I've come."

OUR VIEW

Class of 2013: We wish you a hero

A pundit once suggested that commencement speakers refrain from frightening graduating seniors by telling them the world was theirs.

The world as we travel through the 13th year of the 21st century is a troublesome place.

War, disease, social injustice, financial woes and poverty still tear our planet apart.

Looking over past years, we sometimes wonder if we have made progress.

The First World War was supposed to be the war that was going to make the world safe for democracy, yet in regions across the globe there are still leaders who value holding power in their own fists above the welfare of their people.

The dawning of the Age of Aquarius in the 1960s was supposed to usher in harmony, understanding, love, and peace. Well.... we're not exactly there yet.

You'll probably see that over the years your idea of heroism becomes deeper.

Sometimes we wonder if the world is getting better or worse.

Yet out of the mire of the world's despair rise heroes.

The soldiers on the battlefield fighting for freedom.

The doctors, nurses, and scientists who strive to save us from the scourge of disease.

The teachers who open the door to tomorrow to their students.

The technology experts who make our lives safer, more interesting, and easier.

These are just some of our heroes.

As you look back on your achievements and look forward to future challenges and successes, consider the heroes who inspired you to do more than you thought you ever could.

You'll probably see that over the years your idea of heroism becomes deeper.

"Superman or Captain Marvel. If someone had asked me what a champion is when I was a child, I probably would have answered by naming these two superheroes of the day. During this time, I didn't realize how the kindness of a few key people could parallel the life-saving feats superheroes regularly performed... instead of muscles of steel, they protected me with the strength of their kindness," journalist Bob Danzig once wrote.

Actor, Christopher Reeve, who became a superhero to the handicapped, said: "A hero is an ordinary individual who finds the strength to persevere and endure in spite of overwhelming obstacles."

Former US Congressman and former Alabama Governor Bob Riley may have put it best: "Hard times don't create heroes. It is during the hard times when the 'hero' within us is revealed."

Class of 2013, we wish you well.

We wish you a hero.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Curious line of criticism

I see that the streak of uneventful Board of Selectmen's meetings ended at one, though I am not surprised. Ms. Quigley's use of the selectman's comment period to criticize our acting Town Manager for an email exchange with town counsel about past due legal bills was both highly unusual and perplexing to me. Unusual because Mr. Milanoski is the town's chief financial officer and he should challenge the validity of every invoice he receives. As the former chair of the water commission, I have first-hand experience in questioning the legal bills we received and had to do so on several occasions. Perplexing because the criticism seemed so misplaced within the context of the meeting.

This continued as later in the evening Ms. Quigley criticized the success of the town's budget process, a process that never existed prior to this year and, given our recent bond upgrade and free cash flow generation, was a clear, resounding and indisputable success. Mr. Milanoski was the driving force behind this effort. The only criticism that should be leveled against our newly adopted budget process is that we didn't adopt it sooner. It seems as though these criticisms are not based on the merit of the issues but rather an overarching agenda to undermine our Acting Town Manager, and that is a practice, which should not go without notice.

Chris Seebeck, 36 Riverview Drive

Try common sense

Domenic Janssen provides excellent advice to the Selectmen in last week's Mariner.

In essence, stick with our Acting Town Manager until the issues with the discharged former TM are resolved with finality; only then consider seeking competitive proposals for the position. (Or consider sticking with a known quantity of demonstrated competence.)

Three of our five Selectmen are displaying common sense and appreciation of the realities by supporting our current Acting Town Manager, Michael Milanoski. (The most important reality is Milanoski's demonstrated competence and dedication, which outweighs the uncertain "value" of the claimed experience of some future contender. Demonstrated ability is what counts, not time served gaining experience.")

Seems to me that the town would benefit from a little less grandstanding and a little more thoughtful restraint from one of the Selectmen.

R. Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road

Heartfelt appreciation

On Wednesday (May 29), my wife, Mary, was involved in a serious head-on collision on Forest Avenue. We are very grateful for the promptness and professionalism of Cohasset Police, Firefighters (who extricated her from our vehicle), and the EMTs who stabilized her and transported my wife to South Shore Hospital. Neighbors on Forest Avenue were also very attentive and helpful. We attribute seatbelts, airbags, and a well-constructed Volvo for sparing our family a tragedy.

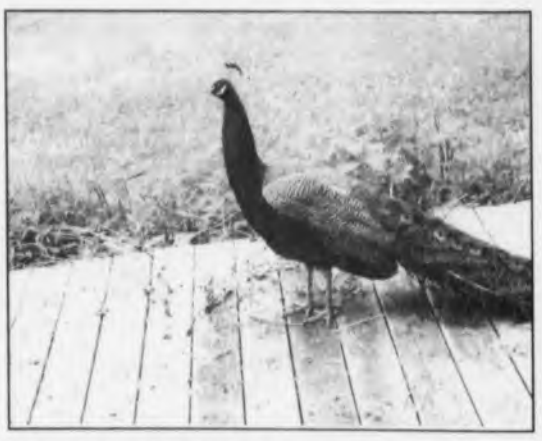
Peacock's call brought back memories



PAUL J. SCHUBERT

I've heard that smell is the strongest trigger for memory. That may be the case, but sound must be a close second. Last weekend in the early hours of Saturday when the sun in the late Spring rises by 6, I heard a bird call I had not heard for a long time. It wasn't a very pleasant call like an oriole's warble in the heat of the afternoon or of the clean happy chirp of a nighthawk on a summer evening. Rather it was a distinct sound that brought me back to a similar morning heat, to a place of little responsibility.

A time long before children, career, and pressures of life, I heard that same call. It was on my honeymoon on a small out-of-the-way island far from the noise of Boston...

A time long before children, career, and pressures of life, I heard that same call. It was on my honeymoon on a small out-of-the-way island far from the noise of Boston, with warm sun gentle breezes and the smell of surf as you woke. On that island — where the solitude of beaches were common and French bread with cheese for lunch followed breakfast croissants with espresso brewed in our little cabana — there were houses sitting above the beaches, all set back and private, petite and well-manicured.

One simple red and white tile home sat at the top of a gentle glade that rose up from a secluded beach we stumbled upon. The vista from the house overlooked a broad expanse of the Atlantic and acres of grass.

Here is a photo of the local peacock that has quickly become a familiar figure around town. COURTESY PHOTO

From there the call came, a loud, almost honking sound. Squinting from the sun I could make out a peacock, yes, strutting across the yard in front. No cares no worries and plenty of space to call down to the beach. So after reading the story about the peacock in town, I thought let him have some time to strut and call. If you see him, nod your head to let him know that there is a Sohier Street denizen that loves his call. I'll be the one having a croissant and coffee remembering a wonderful carefree time.

Rep. Bradley bill would strengthen social host law

State Rep. Garrett Bradley has re-filed a bill that would strengthen the social host law by adding a civil liability provision to the statute, providing for monetary damages arising out of personal injuries, deaths or property damages that occur at parties where underage drinking occurs. The bill would not, however, allow a person to claim as a defense that the injuries or damage were simply caused by the actions of an underage drinker.

"Although I agree that there are practical difficulties in enforcing a social host law and determining fault, the intent of my bill is to further define the responsibility of the property owner and the party host."
State Rep. Garrett Bradley

Bradley said, "I re-filed this bill because this behavior continues to happen, and we have an obligation to take action to discourage and prevent underage drinking and the often tragic consequences that arise from that behavior. Although I agree that there are practical difficulties in enforcing a social host law and determining fault, the intent of my bill is to further define the responsibility of the property owner and the party host."

The current law restricts the sale, delivery or furnishing of any alcoholic beverage to persons younger than 21 years of age. The law applies to individuals who knowingly or intentionally supply, give, or provide to or allow a person younger than 21 years of age to possess alcoholic beverages on premises or property owned or controlled by the person who is charged under the statute. The law allows for punishments of no more than $2,000 in fines and/or imprisonment for up to one year.

Last year, the state Supreme Judicial Court, in a ruling in a case involving underage drinking, declined to broaden the scope of the social host statute to include underage hosts who do not supply alcohol to underage guests but provide a location to consume alcoholic beverages. One justice suggested that the Legislature ought to strengthen the law by adding a civil liability provision.

The legislation, H.1212, is currently under review by the Joint Committee on The Judiciary.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, represents the Third Plymouth District consisting of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and one precinct in Scituate.

Bill for more housing in 40B count

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, has filed a bill that would give towns more credit for existing rental units when computing the Chapter 40B affordable housing threshold.

Bradley said, "There are a number of housing units in my district that the state does not count towards the 10 percent threshold, even though the resident pays a monthly fee, never receives title for the property, and pays no property tax. Towns such as Hingham should receive proper credit for those units."

When a community does not meet the 10 percent threshold, developers have the option of circumventing the local permitting process by appealing directly to the state.

Bradley said local towns have added hundreds of rental housing units, including a significant number of affordable units, during the past 10 years. He pointed to the ongoing project at the Hingham Shipyard and a housing development on Route 3A in Cohasset as recent examples.

"Local residents and officials need the tools to balance the desire for more affordable housing with the potential impact such growth has on schools, roads, public safety and other town services, so that they can plan ahead," added Bradley.

The legislation is currently under review by the Joint Committee on Housing.

Volunteers sought for town boards

If you want to get involved in town government, now's your chance.

The town of Cohasset has several openings on boards and committees for fiscal year 2014, which begins on July 1. These positions are to be appointed by the Board of Selectmen or Troika (a committee comprised of the Advisory Committee chairman, selectmen chair and Town Moderator). The selectmen plan to make their appointments at their Tuesday, June 25 meeting.

Those who would like to serve on a town board should send a letter of interest and qualifications to Tracey Connors in the selectmen's office: 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or email tconnors@cohassetma.org.

The list of openings is as follows:

- Advisory Committee (Troika)
- Alternative Energy (Troika)
- Cable Advisory (Selectmen)
- Capital Budget (Troika)
- Cohasset Common Historic District Commission: specific membership requirements (Selectmen)
- Cohasset Cultural Council (Selectmen)
- Community Preservation Committee (Selectmen)
- Conservation Commission (Selectmen)
- Council on Elder Affairs (Selectmen)
- Design Review Board (Troika)
- Historical Commission (Selectmen)
- Open Space Committee (Selectmen)
- Senior Center Planning Committee (Selectmen)
- Stormwater Advisory Committee (Selectmen)
- Town Archivist (Selectmen)
- Zoning Board of Appeals (Selectmen)

GROWING ON THE FARM

Common places for communities

JON BELBER

Soon, the Cohasset Common will be the regular, weekly location for the seasonal farmers market on Thursday afternoons starting in late June.

The Scituate Common was packed on this recent Memorial Day holiday observed. As is the case across these United States, for many years the town commons are appropriate places and spaces to gather by the bunting to honor the fallen.

With all too recent thoughts of the marathon bombings, Little League teams, scout troops and families stood by the red, white, and blue, marched near hundreds of placed flags and listened to music and anthems. A similar scene took place on commons across Massachusetts and most likely across the country.

Many folks from the community sharing in a common activity, a show of unity for causes near and far for us. I cannot think of another time during the year when so many come together on the green grass, beside the monuments for a show of unity. Even if people might be opposed to the very essence of war, it seems no one can argue the effort to remember, reflect, and honor those who served or were innocent victims.

These town commons, located in the center of town, have trees, green grass and maybe a bench or two, as well as the aforementioned monuments. They can serve as a destination for walkers, joggers and families. As I bike or drive by the Scituate and Cohasset common on an almost daily basis, I wonder about another common reason why people might gather.

The reason for a town common, as in the Boston Common, was originally a place where the cows roamed and markets were held for the citizens to come trade and exchange goods. Soon, the Cohasset Common will be the regular, weekly location for the seasonal farmers market on Thursday afternoons starting in late June. (I'll be there with a group of middle school students participating in a weeklong camp called the Young Farmers Program where the students sell produce they helped grow at Holly Hill Farm.)

Is there space on any common for a little community farming? Could people, under the organized direction of the elected or appointed town officials, be able to grow food for the community? I often poll students I am teaching on whether everyone eats.

When all the hands go up to say yes, I think about how and where to provide a space for those to eat, with healthy organic produce as the goal.

As a citizen and a resident, I know the town common is carefully, thoroughly and dutifully mowed, tended and protected, and I am thankful for this commitment to open, shared, common space. I am not suggesting any disturbance of these essential town spaces.

But as the economy struggles and jobs may be difficult to find, I am just thinking about additional, meaningful ways and means for people to come together, for a common goal of unity...and perhaps carrots for all.

FOR THE RECORD

Capturing police news as it happens

GREGORY MATHIS

Full instructions on how to use the scanner and take advantage of its multiple functions can be found below the scanner player on your Wicked Local website.

Looking back on the media coverage of the Boston Marathon bombings, it was extensive and pretty much non-stop as local and national outlets raced to Boston to cover the tragedy. On the Friday after the bombings, as police confronted the two suspects with guns blazing on the streets of Watertown before killing one and launching an all-out manhunt for the other, most television stations carried live coverage throughout most of the day into early evening and beyond.

As news reporters chased information, sources and leads, many of our Wicked Local website users tuned into our Rangecast police and fire scanner to hear directly from police sources as the manhunt unfolded, leading to the eventual capture of Dzhokhar Tsarnaev.

It was Rangecast at its best as interested parties from all over launched the scanner on Wicked Local Cambridge and Wicked Local Watertown to follow the news as it happened. While Rangecast doesn't provide FBI and special tactical forces channels, it was compelling to hear what was happening over the local police channels.

For those unfamiliar with Rangecast, it is a police and fire scanner available on all our Wicked Local websites under the NEWS tab in the main navigation bar at the top of the web page. The scanner on each town website includes the police and fire frequencies for six neighboring towns to keep you up to date with public safety activity in your region.

You can keep the buttons green for each community to listen to all of them, or you can select certain communities to block by clicking the button to red on the towns you're not interested in.

We know our readers are interested in what's going on with their local police and fire departments. From police and fire logs, to short police brief items, to larger stories about major crimes, accidents, or fires, residents can't seem to get enough of police news in print and online.

And in the case of a big story unfolding like the Boston Marathon bombings, you can go to any of the other Wicked Local sites to listen to that particular scanner.

Full instructions on how to use the scanner and take advantage of its multiple functions can be found below the scanner player on your Wicked Local website. Not only can listeners hear what's happening as it happens, but you will also be able to rewind the scanner much like a DVR to listen to events that happened hours or even days ago.

For instance, our regional digital editor went back and collected scanner chatter from Cambridge and Watertown police from the shooting of the MIT officer, to the car chase that led to the overnight shootout in Watertown. She was able to post audio clips from those incidents on those respective websites, adding a whole new perspective to our news coverage.

So the next time a big story breaks in eastern Massachusetts, or you hear or see a police cruiser or fire engine pass by your house or place of work with sirens blaring, be sure to check Wicked Local for the latest news, but also launch the police and fire scanner to hear what is happening or rewind it later to find out what happened.

room. I hope this is settled when I get back."

Both Gaumer and Kennedy explained their positions, stating that they felt the vote to bring in consultants was enough to show the selectmen's intentions in launching a town manager search.

"We're being directed to conduct the search; that should be sufficient," said Gaumer. However, he added, "Let's get our plan straight before we dive head first into the water."

Selectman Karen Quigley, who made the original motion to have the board consult the Collins Center, said that she didn't disagree with Gaumer. "This is a first step," Quigley said of the consultant. "My only goal is to make a plan and keep us moving forward in a deliberative way... Not to force the issue."

Quigley added that she felt the board was all in agreement on this. "Maybe we're saying things differently... We're five different people but in the end, we all want to get to the same place."

Kennedy remained firm that she did not think a separate vote on launching the town manager search was necessary. "I don't know why we need a vote. I don't think about a symbolic vote; I think action is what people want. If that isn't a search process, I don't know what is. I'm not a huge fan of voting for the sake of voting."

Koed eventually sided with Gjesteby and Quigley. "I'd like to vote," the chair said, adding the board should "move forward."

"Move forward" seemed to be the favorite term of the evening, spoken repeatedly by Koed and especially Quigley.

"My concern is that we do have deadlines upon us with the existing [acting town manager's] contract. It's important to move forward and have a plan in place so we're not caught in the last minute," said Quigley.

Asking the board to vote first on bringing in a consultant was Quigley's way of attempting a compromise, she explained. "I reached out; I was trying to make a consensus," she said. "We're all in agreement that we're going ahead with a search. How can it hurt to take a vote and move forward?"

Kennedy, clearly exasperated, asked the audience in both the selectmen's office and those watching the meeting on TV, "Does anybody out there think we're not doing a town manager search?" To the Mariner, she added, "Could you let people know?"

From the audience Agnes McCann, Doane Street, challenged, "You do that by voting."

Quigley finally made a motion, addressing her fellow board members, "If you say you're willing to go forward with a town manager search but you're unwilling to vote..."

The selectmen vote 3-0 to launch the town manager search, with Gaumer and Kennedy declining to vote. Kennedy said earlier in the meeting that she would contact the Collins Center and ask for the consultant to present at the next selectmen meeting, scheduled for Tuesday, June 18.

Cohasset Town Manager: Who's in charge now?

Cohasset has had four town managers in three years. The last permanent town manager, Michael Coughlin, was only six months on the job when the selectmen voted to remove him in March 2012, citing "lack of communication" between Coughlin and elected town officials.

Resident Michael Milanoski was appointed acting town manager the same month and given an employment contract with the town. Milanoski's current contract is through December 2013.

Cohasset has its own Town Manager Act, which was enacted by the state legislature in 1997, which defines the role and authority of the town manager and board of selectmen. The April 2013 Town Meeting voted to amend this act; it has been filed and given a bill number with the legislature and is expected to undergo committee review soon.

The current act does not allow those who serve the town as volunteer board members or town employees to be eligible to apply for the town manager position, unless they have vacated their other positions for at least a year. The retooled act would allow town employees or board members to apply for the job. Instead, selectmen are barred from applying for the position for at least 15 months after their selectmen term has ended.

The current board of selectmen has collectively stated that they intend to honor the spirit of the revised act, even though it has not yet been enacted as state law. However, selectmen chair Fred Koed noted that the board should be careful which aspects of the not-yet-legal act they decide to honor. This matter could be on the agenda at an upcoming selectmen meeting.

At one point both selectmen, along with chair Fred Koed, got out of their seats and left the room because the discussion had gone on for so long, they needed a brief recess.

NEWS UPDATE

Police Chief search launched

Position will be posted next week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The selectmen were split on approving the search process for a new Police Chief. The board voted 3-2 Tuesday to approve the search process being launched by Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Per Cohasset's Town Manager Act, chief and department head positions are appointed by the town manager.

Milanoski provided the board with a document outlining the search process. First, the position would be advertised publicly in the MMA Bulletin, Boston Globe, Monster.com, and in the statewide police online database, CJIS. Milanoski already advertised the position in late March but the board asked him to revise the advertisement and post it again.

The approved process will allow three weeks for applications to be received; the deadline is July 1. A search committee will review the applications; retired Cohasset police chief Brian Noonan will be among the members, Milanoski said. The committee will select a group of finalists who will undergo an assessment center conducted by a third party panel, which will rank the finalists. The top candidate will undergo an "exhaustive background check." If the candidate passes muster, Milanoski will bring the appointment to the selectmen and ask them to accept or reject (the board has 15 days to do so).

The process should be complete in August, said Milanoski.

While a majority of the board supported this process, there were a few concerns. Selectman Karen Quigley said that she felt the process was too rushed, and three weeks was not enough time for candidates to submit their applications.

Milanoski said that since the job was already posted in March, applications were already received. Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy agreed: "People already know about it." She added that there is no deadline to make the chief appointment, just to accept applications.

Quigley, however, insisted that the town should take its time on such a major position. "Just as we need to get it right with the permanent town manager [hiring], we need to get it right with the police chief," Quigley said, adding that perhaps the town should wait until a permanent town manager is hired, and let that person make the police chief appointment.

Milanoski responded, "There is no rush," adding that the selectmen voted in April "to move forward with the search... This is a systematical approach. I'm just following the process [the selectmen] previously approved."

The town manager also explained that he recently met with the Advisory Committee, when they first met after the May Town Meeting, during which the committee approved a reserve fund transfer to pay for the police chief search.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said he was concerned, since the applications are due by July 1, the first day of fiscal year 2014, and the money Advisory approved is in the FY13 budget. Koed wondered what would happen if Advisory voted against the use of the funds as an FY14 expenditure.

"I'd like to know we have the approval before spending the money," said Koed.

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore responded, "You never know." However, he added, if the money is not spent on the search, it will revert to the Free Cash account.

Koed said he would feel better about delaying the search until the new fiscal year starts. Kennedy, however, said that she thinks the police department needs a chief, sooner rather than later. Deputy Chief William Quigley has been working as Acting Chief for over a year.

"The police department needs to move forward," said Kennedy. "We initiated this search in February for better or worse... but it's been tripped up on politics. I do think we need to move forward and do it."

Ultimately, the board agreed to start the process this week. Milanoski said that the advertisement will appear in the June 9 Sunday Globe.

Town insurance responds to DeLuca demand letter

A letter from the town's insurance company indicates that the demand letter issued by former Police Chief Mark DeLuca, who is seeking reinstatement of his job, "doesn't have standing," according to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Milanoski passed out a letter from the insurance company, MIIA, during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting which was addressed to DeLuca's attorney, Greg Aceto, and the town of Cohasset.

The letter tackles allegations in DeLuca's recent letter that claimed his removal had been handled illegally, by an illegal town manager (Milanoski suspended DeLuca in May 2012 and is not a permanent town manager). DeLuca's employment contract was not renewed when it expired in Jan. 2013. DeLuca has since stated that he is seeking reinstatement.

The letter from MIIA states that if DeLuca had an issue with his removal and subsequent agreement, it should be reviewed between him and his formal counsel. The letter further asks Aceto and DeLuca to provide proof that any illegal activity took place during the removal process.

Milanosk said Tuesday that there is not yet a legal case for the town to defend in this matter.

BRIEFLY

Selectmen votes

Board of Selectmen chair Fred Koed said Tuesday that this year's board should strive to cast as many unanimous votes as possible. During the June 4 meeting, the board managed to vote unanimously on four action items, along with the town manager search getting a 3-0 vote with two abstentions.

The selectmen were able to reach an accord on small matters but are still butting heads on the major issues.

These are Tuesday's night's votes, in the order they were taken:

- Cable Committee budget: 5-0.
- Vote to support the building of a town senior center: 4-1. (Selectman Steve Gaumer voted nay because he would like more information on the proposed center's financials).
- Vote to invite the UMass Collins Center to a meeting to discuss Town Manager search process: 4-1 (Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted nay because she wanted the board to vote on launching the Town Manager search, not having consultants in to discuss the process).
- Vote to begin the search for a permanent Town Manager: 3-0 (Gaumer and selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy both abstained, feeling that the board was not ready to start the search without first outlining the process).
- Vote to approve the June 25 Special Election warrant: 5-0.
- Red Lion Inn liquor license: vote to wait until December, when the inn's liquor license is up, to have a hearing on whether to allow serving liquor outdoors: 5-0.
- Police Chief search: Vote to approve Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's search process: 3-2 (Koed and selectman Karen Quigley voted nay; Koed wanted to wait until July, the start of the new fiscal year, to start the search while Quigley wanted to wait until a permanent Town Manager is hired so he/she can make the chief appointment).
- Fresh Feast/Auntie Em's BBQ: vote to approve license: 5-0.

HAPPENING

Ground Level coffeehouse

Calling all artists, musicians and coffee lovers alike: Tonight (Friday, June 7) Beechwood Congregational Church is launching its brand new coffeehouse in the 'Ground Level' of the church.

A time for creativity, community, and, of course, coffee, the evening features an open mic night, featured local artwork, and a performance by the band Highway Ghosts.

The fun starts at 7 p.m. at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church St. The event will take place on the first Friday of every month from 7 to 10 p.m.

Vanderweil honored by Conservation Trust

Honoree Gary Vanderweil with plaque honoring his service to the CCT.

Current and former Directors of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, Inc. gathered recently at the home of President Debbie Shadd to honor Gary Vanderweil on his retirement from the CCT Board of Directors.

Gary served as a member of the CCT Board for 12 years, from 2000 to 2012, and as CCT President from 2002 to 2007. As President, Gary oversaw the CCT's 2005 acquisition of the .44-acre Winsor Shores property on Strait's Pond in Hull and the 2007 acquisition of the 22-acre George M. Ingram Park on Norman Todd Road, a joint collaboration with the Cohasset Land Foundation.

During Gary's tenure the CCT also contributed significant funds towards the Town of Cohasset's purchase of the Barnes Property adjacent to Wheelwright Park and the Brass Kettle Conservation Area off King Street. Since 2007 Gary has served as the CCT's steward for the Winsor and Ingram properties and for the CCT's Scott's Shore property on Atlantic Avenue.

The gathering also served as an occasion to introduce new CCT Board member Katie Holden. Katie has degrees in Geography and Resource Management and worked for the Town of Concord managing conservation restrictions before moving to Cohasset with her family.

The Cohasset Conservation Trust, Inc. owns twenty properties totalling more than 105 acres in Cohasset, Scituate (Bassing Beach) and Hull (Winsor Shores).

More information about the CCT and its properties can be found on its web site at: cohassetconservationtrust.org.

RELAY FOR LIFE

Event set for June 28 -29

Relay For Life is all about the community uniting with the American Cancer Society and supporting its efforts to create a world with less cancer and more birthdays.

The American Cancer Society Relay For Life of Cohasset/Hingham/Hull/Scituate will take place this year on Friday, June 28, through Saturday, June 29, at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. The planning committee is excited to celebrate the moving of the event this year to the Town of Hingham and to celebrate the 100th birthday of the American Cancer Society with the involved surrounding towns. There will be many new and exciting activities planned for the event this year, but more teams to sign up and get involved are sought Anyone who has ever been touched by cancer is asked to consider forming a team.

The event is also seeking volunteers – walkers, cancer survivors, caregivers, community leaders, anyone wanting to make a difference – to organize and recruit fundraising teams, garner community support, coordinate logistics, seek refreshments and prizes, plan entertainment and lend a hand to ensure the success of the event.

Relay For Life events take place overnight as individuals and teams camp out at an athletic track, park or other gathering area, with the goal of keeping at least one team member on the track or pathway at all times throughout the evening. Teams do most of their fundraising prior to the event, but some teams also hold creative fundraisers at their campsites during Relay. Relay brings together friends, families, businesses, hospitals, schools, civic and faith-based groups – people from all walks of life – all aimed at celebrating the lives of those who have had cancer, remembering those lost, and fighting back against the disease.

Relay For Life is all about the community uniting with the American Cancer Society and supporting its efforts to create a world with less cancer and more birthdays. As the official sponsor of birthdays, the American Cancer Society knows how important each and every birthday can be.

Volunteers and participants who are willing to give their time and energy to this event are making a commitment to let the local community know that cancer can be defeated. To join the Relay For Life as a volunteer or team participant, call local American Cancer Society staff partner Rebecca Ybarra at 508-897-4343 or email rebecca.ybarra@cancer.org or committee member Jacqui Vitello at 781-383-2668 or pjvit@aol.com.

For more event specific information, visit: relayforlife.org/CohassetMA.

People can also pick up a team captain packet or receive more information at: Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St.

Skippers season a successful one

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset baseball team didn't win a state championship, or league title like teams of a few years back, but in the bigger picture, the 2013 team was a team that could be proud of its accomplishments and a team that players, coaches and fans could rally around.

Part of that was the team's personality.

The Skippers were the gritty type of team that always played hard and battled out of adversity.

With top starting pitcher/catcher Connor Goetz sidelined, the Skippers found some tough matchups when it came to pitching matchups.

"We didn't end up where we wanted, but I'd say it was a successful season," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We won more than we lost, played better baseball as the season went on and progressed as a team."

Afanasiw felt his team grew up quickly.

"There were growing pains this year," he said. "There were kids thrust into positions prematurely, some a year early. That led to some inconsistency."

According to Afanasiw, the Goetz injury, suffered during hockey season, had a ripple effect on the team.

"With Connor Goetz unavailable, Brett Dooley took over catching," he said. "He did a good job, but he wasn't Connor. When Connor should have been on the mound facing opponents' No. 1 aces, we had a non-ace going.

"That isn't to take anything away from Shane Haggerty, Connor O'Brien or Christian Davis, who all pitched well, but if Connor is facing opponents' aces, our No. 2 guy is

Girls win quarterfinal

The Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset girls tennis team has won all style of matches this season.

There have been close ones, and blowouts.

All of them have ended the same way, with Cohasset victories.

Tuesday's quarterfinal match against No. 8 Martha's Vineyard ended the same way – with Cohasset winning and earning a home match in yesterday's semifinal against Old Rochester.

In the last match of the day against Martha's Vineyard, senior quad captain Sara Corry defeated sophomore Charlotte Potter, 6-4, 6-1, at No. 3 singles. That propelled No. 1 Cohasset (19-0) over Martha's Vineyard (12-6) in the Div. 3 South Sectional quarterfinals.

"She had to handle all the pressure," Skippers coach Gigi Meehan said. "It seems to be the senior captains who take all the heat. It was Sara's turn."

Sophomore Emma Davis won, 6-0, 6-0, at No. 1 singles. Cohasset's No. 2 doubles team of Gabrielle Lemoine/Bri Crough won, 6-4, 6-0.

Cohasset hosted No. 4 Old Rochester (18-2) in Thursday's 2:30 p.m. semifinals. Results were unavailable at press time.

facing their No. 2 and the matchups become more favorable."

Regardless, Afanasiw had a great time with this year's team.

"This was arguably the hardest working team I've had," he said. "They never lost confidence. They never got down. The seniors were a big part of that. They're best friends. They've been playing together since they were in diapers. They practice together and truly enjoy being together. It was great to go to practice, great to go to a game."

The seniors were Shane Haggerty, Conor Dooley, Christian Davis, Connor O'Brien and Connor Goetz.

Cohasset could have folded early on when they were a sub .500 team and needed to do some serious winning to get back to the tournament.

They accomplished the job.

"The kids stuck with it and rattled off six or seven wins in a row," Afanasiw said. "They said let's get at it and got hot. Down the stretch, Connor O'Brien came into a game and pitched four innings on 37 pitches. He was sharp, lights out. Brendan O'Connell came up big with some timely hitting. For two weeks everything was clicking, but like all things, streaks end. The kids were great. Their attitude was refreshing. They were always level headed."

Cohasset was knocked out of the MIAA Tournament with a loss to No. 5 seeded Bishop Connolly.

The Skippers already look to be solid next year.

"We're losing the five seniors," Afanasiw said. "But we have an entire infield, outfield and starting catcher returning with experience. Some of that experience came early with the injuries, so that bodes well. If there's an Achilles, it will be pitching. We don't have dominating kids like Brerndan Doonan, Jamie Faber or Jeff Cavanaro like we had a few years back, that pitcher who can come in as an ace and give you six or seven wins.

"The kids will also have more experience because they're still playing American Legion and Junior American Legion and AAU.

Those kids will have another 20 or 30 games before the summer is over.

Speaking of Doonan, Cavanaro and Faber, if you want to see them play nearby, they're on the 2013 roster for the Brockton Rox.

As for Afanasiw, he's already getting back into football mode, and the team has stuck together to cheer on the lacrosse and girls tennis teams.

The baseball and tennis team have a fundraiser together raffling Red Sox tickets that ends with a co-ed tournament with baseball and girls tennis playing together,

That is going to be played in the next few weeks. It can have interesting results.

"Everybody wanted Emma Davis on their team," Afanasiw said of the girls No. 1 star. "Her team didn't win. She had some battles with Christian Davis."

LACROSSE

It started with a 25-1 win over No. 32 Blue Hills, followed by a 17-7 win over No. 16 Hull and a 9-4 victory over No. 8 Hamilton-Wenham.

The Hull victory was career win No. 100 for Cohasset coach James Beaudoin, and No. 15 as Cohasset's boss.

"It felt great," Beaudoin said of the milestone. "I'm lucky to have coached at four amazing programs. I was lucky to jump aboard here and get 16 wins. It's especially nice because I live here and am a part of the community."

Beaudoin was pleased to get to the semifinals, but said he was a little surprised by the competition.

"We had an easy matchup in the first game," he said. "There was some reverse coaching in that game, trying not to score, letting guys get playing time. Then we played two teams we already played and beat. With 33 teams in the playoffs, we hoped for different opponents."

Regardless, his Skippers did what they had to.

"The kids executed," he said. "They could still feel the sting of going out early the last two years."

Part of Cohasset's solid performance this year has been health.

For the most part, Cohasset has avoided injuries.

"We have been lucky with injuries," he said. "That is one of our worries. We're lucky we've stayed healthy. Part of that is our practice regimen."

In practices, Beaudoin preaches stick skills and teamwork, and tries to avoid excessive running, pushups, situps and sprints.

He also enjoys a calm demeanor in practice and games.

"I'm not a yeller," he said. "No pushups and situps. I think one of my strengths is finding the right kids the right positions. I like a positive vibe. I think the kids are looking for that. We're pretty happy right now."

Heading into the semifinal against Canton, yesterday, the Skippers were 10-0 against Division 3 opponents this season, including a win against fellow semifinalist Hanover.

The Skippers losses were against Div. 2 No. 1 seed Hingham, Div. 1 Marshfield and Noble & Greenough.

In the Hamilton-Wenham win, senior John Mills scored four goals to lead the Skippers.

Cohasset's defense anchored by goalie Jack Conte played a solid game.

Will Golden added two goals and an assist in the victory.

In the Blue Hills victory, senior attack Hunter Forrer had three goals and two assists to lead the way.

Sophomore middie Jeff Powers chipped in two goals and an assist, and sophomore attack Mike Lund also added two goals and an assist.

Whelan totaled six goals and one assist while senior Drew Nahill (two goals, three assists) and senior John Mills (three goals, one assist) also contributed to the Skippers' offense.

Galway Rovers win at Needham

Local boys U12 soccer team from the Galway Rovers Club (out of the Cohasset Sports Complex), won the Needham Memorial Day Soccer Tournament this weekend, while playing in honor of the South Lakes Soccer Club in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Many players in the South Lake Club were affected by the horrific tornadoes that ravaged the area recently.

They lost club members to the storms and dozens lost their homes.

The Mass. boys proudly wore arm bands during all their games with the South Lakes club name and brought the trophy home.

BAY STATE GAMES

Registration open for the 2013 Bay State Summer Games

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation is pleased to announce that registration for the 2013 Bay State Summer Games is now open. The annual Olympic-style amateur sports festival features 26 sports for athletes of all ages and abilities.

The Bay State Games involves participants from over 300 communities in Massachusetts and over 7,000 participants annually. The Games are now in its 32nd year and over the past three decades more than a quarter of a million participants have competed. Bay State Games offers the opportunity for athletes to showcase their talents whether they are beginners or future Olympians.

The 2013 Bay State Summer Games is scheduled for Friday, July 5 through Sunday, July 21 with regional qualifiers and tryouts held through the month of June. The competitions are held in top-level sporting facilities such as Bentley University, Harvard University, Regis College, Wentworth Institute of Technology, Worcester State, University of Massachusetts Boston and the New England Sports Center.

Competitions are offered in archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, juniors basketball, baton twirling, diving, fencing, field hockey, 6v6 field hockey, ice hockey, judo, lacrosse, pistol shooting, rifle shooting, rugby, soccer, 7v7 soccer, softball, swimming, synchronized swimming, table tennis, track and field, trap shooting, volleyball, weightlifting and wrestling. Masters divisions are also available in swimming and track and field.

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation also offers the opportunity for student athletes to receive a college scholarship. The Future Leaders Scholarship awards six $2,000 college scholarships to Bay State Games participants who demonstrate leadership through community service, academic excellence and athletic achievement. High school students, who are Massachusetts residents in the 11th grade during the 2012-13 academic year, register and agree to participate in the 2013 Bay State Games, which they qualify for, are eligible for the Future Leaders Scholarship. The registration deadline for the scholarship is Wednesday, June 12.

For sport, registration and scholarship information please visit BayStateGames.org, call the Games' office at (781) 932-6555 or e-mail info@baystategames.org.

Spring Athletic Awards at Derby Academy

At the end of each athletic season, the Middle and Upper School students and faculty of Derby Academy gather together to celebrate the successes of each team and honor those student athletes whose contributions to the teams and progress in mastering a sport go above and beyond. In the spring, Derby students may elect to compete as part of baseball, softball, lacrosse (boys and girls) and rugby, or participate in non-competitive activities including yoga or sports training.

Derby students honored in the Spring Athletic Awards Assembly included:

DA awards Cohasset High 'safe prom' grant

Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey stopped by Cohasset High on May 30, dropping off a "Project Prom Sense" grant check supporting the town's safe prom activities. Morrissey has awarded Cohasset the grants in each of his three years in office.

"The parents and school officials who organize substance-free events on prom night are doing their kids and their community a great service," District Attorney Morrissey said. "Providing seniors with a constructive place to meet their classmates creates an important alternative to being on the roads, perhaps driving from party to party, or in situations where there is underage drinking or other high risk behavior."

"The parents and school officials who organize substance-free events on prom night are doing their kids and their community a great service."
District Attorney Michael Morrissey

Morrissey awarded 15 "Operation Graduation" and 10 "Project Prom Sense" grants county-wide this spring, each for $250. All of the money used was drawn from assets seized from drug dealers successfully prosecuted by the Norfolk District Attorney's Office – not tax dollars.

"The work these parents do is very important, and I'm pleased to be able to offer the support and assistance of the District Attorney's Office," Morrissey said. "What they do makes a real difference."

Local squash star helps win national title

As a member of the squad, Buffum helped the Trinity Bantams – considered the best collegiate squash program in the country – finish their perfect season with their 14th title in 15 years.

Paul Mathieson, head squash professional and director of Dover Squash & Fitness in Natick, announced that Cohasset native Derick Buffum won the College Squash Association National Team Championship with Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.

As a member of the squad, Buffum helped the Trinity Bantams – considered the best collegiate squash program in the country – finish their perfect season with their 14th title in 15 years. The Trinity Bantams won the championship game with a 6-3 victory over Harvard.

The freshman has a long history with squash. His grandfather, Charles Buffum, sparked his interest in the sport, having played for Trinity College as the captain and player number one. Since the age of 11, Buffum has traveled 2 hours round trip by train to be coached by Mathieson. He was ranked as MVP and player number one at his high school, Tabor Academy in Marion.

A UK native and a former professional squash player, Mathieson has spent the past 15 years coaching people of all ages and skill levels and has worked with Buffum for eight years. "Derick is very committed to his squash game and he works extremely hard," said Mathieson. "It is his passion and dedication that make him fully deserving of everything he is achieving."

The night will include comedian John Turco, fashions by Pink Tulip and Lulabelle, live music, dancing, and live and silent auctions.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization, a charity founded by Scituate residents Rosie Lonborg, wife of former Red Sox player, Jim Lonborg, Pam Ahl and Amy Ferrie. Their mission is to provide confidential financial assistance to women and families in New England communities who are affected by a diagnosis of cancer. Learn Live Love doesn't have any "red tape." It's a grass roots organization that provides help, almost immediately, to those in need.

GIMME SHELTER

Young mother needs her own place

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Looking into the big green eyes you see here can be intoxicating! This is Livi, and she is a petite and sweet two year old who has been tending to and protecting her unexpected babies but she will be oh so ready for a fun and loving forever home very soon. Livi is just a beautiful little girl.

Livi arrived at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue just two months ago, and lo and behold, we learned that her belly wasn't just swollen, she was pregnant. So, off to a wonderful foster home she went and now that her kittens are becoming more independent, it is pretty young Livi who is looking for the best home where she can be a kid again herself.

This is one adorable, friendly and loving cat. It will be great for Livi to find a home where she will receive a lot of TLC after she is spayed, be able to relax a bit and then show you her playful and kittenish side. After being so busy caring for her kittens, it will be a thrill to have her freedom and lots of entertainment, attention and affection.

Those green eyes are just the start to her unique looks. Livi is a tipped tiger and her short fur is very dense with a shine at the tips that is so unusual and beautiful. Striped at the leg with a white bib and paws, she is just blessed with striking looks. Livi is small and will be a perfect fit on her lucky owner's lap. A precious girl like this needs all the playtime and attention that every young cat desires and we are hoping that her perfect match will come along soon.

You can call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Livi as well as other cats and kittens who are currently in foster with Hull Seaside.

Please come by for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue to see more of our adoptable felines. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets.

Sometimes it is not just our kittens and cats who need rescue! We are oh so thankful for The Good Geeks at 667 Nantasket Ave. in Hull who rescued us last week! Our only computer crashed, leaving us without needed access to our shelter community and contacts. The Good Geeks took care of our problem and were so generous and kind, installing new software to protect us from another issue. Their immediate service was provided at no cost to the shelter and we are so appreciative. Please consider supporting their business when you are in need of technical help! This is another wonderful show of true community spirit.

With summer traffic heating up in and around Hull, we are very appreciative of our supporters from surrounding communities who make their way down to L St. to donate bottles and cans as well as much needed shelter supplies. As people plan vacations and trips, we are thankful for all who still take the time to donate to our resident kittens and cats. Living is a shelter is not perfect, but everyone's care and concern helps us to help them every day.

As a no kill shelter, we are always looking for people who are willing to give an older cat a chance to have a loving home once again. If you are considering helping by fostering, or adopting a companion who needs that special someone, please come visit or call for more information.

CMI NEWS

Summer Splash!

Cohasset Maritime Institute's Summer Splash event on Saturday, June 22, will begin a three-year Row the Distance capital campaign to raise funds for equipment and upgrades. Come to the event to enjoy an evening on Cohasset Harbor while supporting CMI's ocean rowing program.

CMI is a nonprofit organization that provides area youth and adults the chance to experience the challenges and teamwork of ocean rowing.

CMI offers recreational and competitive rowing, with racing opportunities from Cape Ann to Plymouth. The organization strives to provide leadership and scholarship opportunities to area youth and prepare them for collegiate rowing. For adults, the program includes rowing in fours, sculling and a learn-to-row clinic. CMI also hosts an open water race to Minot Light attracting rowers from across New England. CMI strives to keep its participant fees as affordable as possible. Fees, however, do not cover all the costs of necessary upgrades and expansion – and CMI is reaching out to the community so it can "Row the Distance."

The Summer Splash kick-off event will take place 6 to 9 p.m., on June 22, at the Baldry home. Tickets are $75. For more information, visit rowcmi.com or email rowthedistance@comcast.net

Carl R. Hurtig

COHASSET – Carl Robert Hurtig of Cohasset, passed away Wednesday, May 29, 2013.

Born June 22, 1925, in Milton, Carl Robert is survived by his wife of 59 years, Martha (nee Johnson); and their children, Carol and her husband Val Kratzman of Fairfield, Conn., Carl Walter and his wife Deanna of Saginaw, Mich., Paul and his wife Deborah of Sudbury, Eric of Pontiac, Mich., and Sally and her husband Nicholas Taylor of Chapel Hill, N.C.; and grandchildren, Phillip Kratzman, Christina Kratzman, Carl Victor Hurtig, Brian Hurtig, Kate Hurtig, Edward Hurtig, Sarah Hurtig, Millie Hurtig, Oliver Taylor and James Taylor. He is survived by his sister, Anna and her husband Warren Hollertz of Pittsburg, Pa. He was predeceased by his parents, Carl Edward and Hildur Victoria Hurtig, brother, Edward Leonard Hurtig, and sister, Elsa Victoria Lemont.

Upon graduating from Boston English High School, Carl Robert enlisted in the U.S. Army and served in the European theater during World War II.

Carl Robert attended Northeastern University on the GI Bill graduating from the College of Engineering in 1948 with a degree in Electrical Engineering. In 1951, he earned a master's degree of Engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Through Carl Robert's advocacy, Edward L. Hurtig Hall, home of Northeastern University's Department of Chemistry, was dedicated in 1969 in honor of his brother, who was killed in action in World War II.

Carl Robert established several scholarship funds at local universities and an endowed fund to support research of selected engineering professors at Northeastern University.

In 1974, he was conferred the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Engineering by Northeastern University. Carl Robert served on the Board of Trustees at Northeastern University for more than 20 years.

He was the chair of the Academic Affairs Committee and was a member of the Presidential Search Committee in 1989. In 1998, he was awarded the position of Trustee Emeritus.

A lifelong inventor and the holder of numerous patents, Carl Robert was a co-founder of Damon Engineering of Needham, and founder of Encor Ltd. and Micronic Systems AB.

An active member of the Cohasset Historical Society, trustee of the South Shore Conservatory and an Overseer at Old Sturbridge Village, he enjoyed singing with the Choral Arts Society in Scituate, vacationing in Steuben, Maine, in the summer, flying kites with his grandchildren and reading.

A private memorial service will be held at a later date.

8 JAMES LANE

LEGAL NOTICE
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Stephen J. Cleary to Ruth M. O'Brien, Trustee of the O'Brien Investment Trust, dated August 9, 2007, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, Book 25070, Page 265, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 AM on Tuesday, the 25th day of June, 2013, on the mortgaged premises at 8 James Lane, Cohasset, Massachusetts all and singular the premises described in said mortgage, to wit:

EXHIBIT A

A certain parcel of land shown on a plan entitled "Plan of Land, James Lane, Cohasset, Mass., Surveyed for the Estate of William H. McGaw" by Lewis W. Perkins & Sons, Engineers, dated November 13, 1959, recorded with Norfolk Deeds as Plan No. 688 of 1960, Plan Book 209, bounded and described as follows:

WESTERLY: by James Lane, 87.52 feet;
NORTHERLY: by land of Dorothy C. Wood, 133.71 feet;
EASTERLY: by land of The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, 186.84 feet;
SOUTHERLY and
SOUTHWESTERLY: by land of the Town of Cohasset, 190.15 feet; and NORTHERLY: by James Lane, 46 feet.

Containing 22,117 square feet, according to said plan.

The within described premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, and other existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage described herein or otherwise having priority over such mortgage if any there be, and subject to all unpaid real estate taxes and tax titles, assessments, and municipal liens, leases and tenancies, if any there be, which take precedence over the mortgage above described.

The mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the sale and to further postpone at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the adjourned sale.

TERMS OF SALE: At the foreclosure sale Twenty-Five Thousand and 00/100 ($25,000.00) Dollars of the purchase price will be required to be paid in cash, bank, treasurer's or certified check drawn to the order of Kellem & Kellem, LLP, attorneys for the said mortgagee. The balance is to be provided by certified funds or bank check at Kellem & Kellem, LLP, 100 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham, MA 02045 within thirty (30) days after the date of the sale. The deed will be delivered to the purchaser for recording upon receipt in full of the purchase price. In the event of an error in this publication, the description of the premises set forth in said mortgage shall control. In the event of a default in the terms hereof by the successful bidder, the mortgagee reserves the right, but not the obligation, to convey the premises by foreclosure deed to the second highest bidder for the amount thereof, subject to the terms hereof.

It shall be the responsibility of the purchaser to pay for all costs of recording, including excise tax stamps and any other recording expenses. The successful bidder will be required to sign a Memorandum of Sale at the time of the sale, as a condition of the successful bid, which terms, among others, if any, are to be announced at the time of sale.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 17, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your creative side is enhanced by indulging yourself in as much artistic inspiration (music, art, dance, etc.) as you can fit into your schedule. Take someone special with you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take a little restorative time out of your busy life. Go somewhere quiet this weekend. Or just close the door, turn on the answering machine and pretend you're away.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your advice might be much in demand by family and friends this week. But reserve time for yourself to investigate a project that could have some unexpected potential.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work-related issues demand your attention in the early part of the week. Family matters dominate Thursday and Friday. But the weekend is yours to spend as you please.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your temper in check as you deal with someone who seems to enjoy showing disrespect. Losing your Leonine cool might be just what the goader hopes to see.

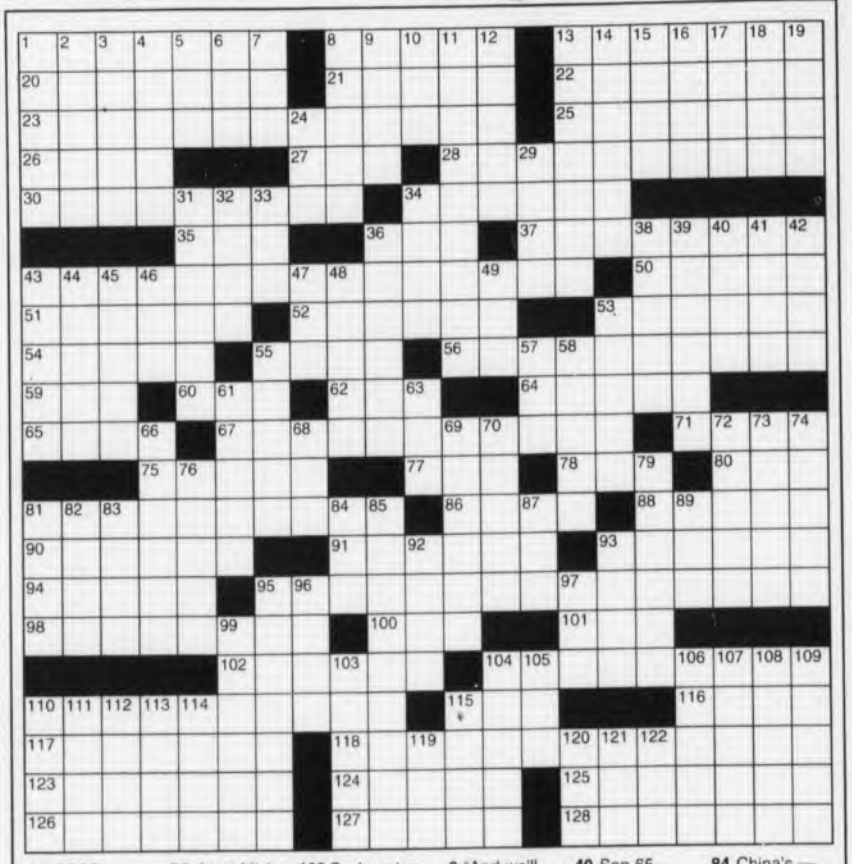
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A heated confrontation needs some cool-off time before it boils over. Better to step away than to try to win an argument where emotions overrule the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone very special in your life finally sends that reassuring message you've been hoping for. You can now devote more time to the tasks you had put aside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Job pressures begin to ease by the week's end, leaving you time to relax and restore your energy levels before you face next week's emerging challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual strength helps calm a friend who might be facing an unsettling change in his or her life. An offer to help comes from a surprising source.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) By midweek you could learn some surprising facts about an associate that might cause you to reconsider a long-held view about someone in your past.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) One of those rare-for-you darker moods sets in in the early part of the week. But by Thursday, the clouds lift and you're back doing nice things for people in need.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use that sharp Piscean perceptiveness to reel in more information about a promising offer so that you have the facts to back up whatever decision you make.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you prefer the status quo, you easily can adapt to change when it's called for.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cohasset High School graduates were in luck — the sun decided to shine on Saturday, June 8, defying the rainy graduation day forecast. Graduates, along with their proud teachers, administrators, families and friends, gathered under the big top of the Music Circus to celebrate their achievements over the past 12 years, and prepare to start the next chapter of their lives.

Valedictorian Matthew Gregory noted in his speech to his fellow graduates, "Today marks not only a beginning, and certainly not an end, but a milestone."

Cohasset seniors resplendent in their graduation robes — white for the girls, the guys in blue — made their way forward to accept their

Students exhibit at Arts Festival

Caitlin Mavilia, who graduated from Cohasset High School last Saturday, is excited to showcase her artwork during this weekend's Arts Festival as one of the South Shore Art Center's Art Stars.

This is the second year the Arts Center has facilitated the Art Stars exhibition. Cohasset's Mavilia joined 15 other students from around the South Shore in creating their installation consisting of pieces crafted from corrugated cardboard.

Art Stars are selected by their teachers for their artistic ability, their enthusiasm for the project, and their interest in collaborating with other high school art students as well as professional artists. The group has worked together for six Saturdays since early March to choose the theme, do preliminary sketches, and work with a variety of cardboard to carry out their concepts for the installation.

Mavilia said that collaborating with the team of seven professional artists, five of whom teach at the Art Center, plus her fellow art students, was a blast.

"It was fun," said Mavilia, who worked in a group with two other students working on the installation's theme of "The Garden: Real or Imagined."

Sports budget

How much should boosters donate?

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The School Committee and school Athletic Department recently discussed how the sports program budget and booster donations should be handled — and which line items, specifically, the athletic budget should pay for before donations are accepted.

The school board's budget subcommittee as a whole met on Tuesday, June 11 with Athletic Director Ron Ford and School Business Manager David DeGennaro to take a look at the budget and discuss options for booster donations moving forward.

Also discussed was the donation process itself. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo released a statement last week explaining that a new "checks and balances" system is needed in regards to the athletic budget and donations to allow for more transparency. This would also ensure that the booster clubs who donate funds are publicly acknowledged.

"I realize that the boosters have been a giving organization but frequently this has been without public acknowledgement," said Cataldo. "Now we will be able to ensure that the community recognizes publicly all that the boosters do for the sports programs at Cohasset." The superintendent added that she is grateful to all the boosters have done for Cohasset students.

The conversation first came about when Cataldo was approached by a few parents asking about the sports program and how purchases for equipment, uniforms and space are determined; specifically Cataldo was asked if the various costs could be broken out by individual sport in the budget.

"Until now, this has not been the practice of the district," said Cataldo.

Cataldo also noted that of

HAPPENING

Arts Festival is this weekend

What:
A time-honored tradition makes its way back to the Cohasset common this weekend with the 58th Annual South Shore Arts Festival. Each year the event showcases craft and fine artists local to New England.

Food, fun:
Entertainment, activities, food, family fun – and, of course, art – will take over the common during Father's Day weekend, June 14 through 16. The fun and festivities take place today from noon to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; and Sunday, June 16, noon to 5 p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from the parking lot at South Shore Music Circus on Sohier Street.

Art:
The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is the Main Exhibition Tent, which houses a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. The Arts Festival also showcases nearly 90 juried craft artists, demonstrating artists, a young artists' exhibition, and local musicians, performing on the Festival Stage.

Donation:
A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit: ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787.

Register of Deeds to host office hours

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host office hours at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., in the basement meeting room from 10 a.m. to noon on June 27.

O'Donnell and members of his staff will be on hand to answer questions about the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. The Register will have information about the Massachusetts Homestead Act as well as on-site workstations that can provide in real time the status of one's mortgage discharge, a print out of a deed or a demonstration of how Registry technology works. No appointment is necessary.

To learn more about these and other Registry of Deeds events and initiatives like the Registry at Facebook.com/Norfolk Deeds or follow on twitter.com/NorfolkDeeds.

All Facility stickers on sale

Stickers are now on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall only. Stickers will not be sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents younger than age 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25. A copy of one's current registration is required. If leasing a vehicle, people will need proof of residence in addition to the registration.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. People are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of one's current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Cohasset Det. James McLean looks over the accident scene last Friday morning at the Beechwood Street intersection on Route 3A.

Diesel spill shuts down 3A

At about 8a.m.on Friday (June 7) police and fire responded to a motor vehicle accident involving a Town of Cohasset Tree and Park truck at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street.

Witnesses stated that the driver of a Subaru with Maine license plates went through a red light southbound on Route 3A and hit the town truck which was traveling east on Beechwood Street.

No injuries were reported but approximately 30 gallons of diesel fuel leaked from the town truck's fuel tank. DEP, MASS-DOT, Clean Harbors, and Cohasset Fire Department tried mitigate the spill before more fuel went into storm drains. Two lanes of 3A were blocked for several hours and the rain hampered the operation.

Beware of driveway paving scams

Cohasset police have issued a warning about driveway paving scams involving scammers with extra asphalt at a discounted price that use a high-pressure approach to confuse and intimidate.

If you agree to the work, here is what likely happens. Men and equipment suddenly appear and begin "working" on your driveway. At some point, the conman claims a mistake was made and you owe thousands more than the original price. He threatens that if you refuse to pay, the "work" will cease. You may be escorted to the bank, to withdraw money. When you realize the scam you try to cancel the check only to learn it was cashed within minutes of it being written.

Paving scams like this occur regularly in Massachusetts and increase during spring and summer, police said. The perpetrators target senior citizens and are well known to police across the country. Criminal charges vary by state but are commonly filed.

This Cohasset Police message is intended as a public service announcement. It is a warning that joins numerous similar warnings that have appeared in newspapers, on television and been sent out by the AARP. Your vigilance will help the Cohasset Police in their effort to keep Cohasset safe and secure. Cohasset Acting Chief of Police William Quigley warns, "When faced with one of these scammers just remember, if it seems too good to be true, it most likely is."

POLICE BEAT

Squirrel causes bike accident

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Bike mishap

At 6:04 a.m. on Monday (June 3), police responded to a bicycle accident in the 700 block of Jerusalem Road. Police said a Hull man was transported to the hospital by Cohasset ambulance with a gash on his head and cut lip after running into a squirrel while he was riding his bike. The squirrel got caught in the front wheel and the man was thrown over the handlebars off his bike.

Turtle update

Police received several more calls over the past week about snapping turtles that are on the move across local roadways in town. One resident called the police when one of the large turtles arrived on her doorstep and asked police to remove it because it was scaring her.

Empty building

Police responded to a complaint about people, possibly kids, inside an abandoned house on James Lane on Tuesday (June 4), about 7:50 p.m. The caller asked for an officer to check the property. No one was there when police arrived but a group of kids were playing ball nearby and possibly could have entered the building to retrieve something, police said.

Night deposit

Police were unable to locate a man who, a witness reported, had been hitting the night deposit box near the exterior ATM at a local bank around 9:50 p.m. on Monday (June 3). The man was gone on arrival.

Struck trailer

A 78-year-old Cohasset man was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries after he came around the corner in his 1996 BMW near the 700 block of Jerusalem Road at about 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday (June 6) and hit the back of an illegally parked landscape trailer. The trailer belongs to a 50-year-old local landscaper who was issued a parking ticket. The BMW had to be towed.

Aerosol cans

At 5:50 p.m. on Wednesday (June 5), police responded to a call from a bicyclist who had observed two small fires in Wompatuck State Park that appeared to be aerosol cans that had been ignited. The fires were in the park near two abandoned structures. Police and fire entered the park on foot and about 2-1/2 miles in found a pile of burnt, smoldering aerosol cans next to two former munitions buildings. The fire department extinguished the fires with the assistance of the Hingham Fire Department, police said. All burnt cans along with about eight bags of aerosol cans were removed from the park.

Telemarketing

A 66-year-old Cohasset woman told police last Wednesday (June 6) she had received a suspicious telemarketing call. She did not provide the telemarketer with any of her personal or financial information but wanted to alert police. Police advised her to monitor her credit.

Signs taken

A Doane Street resident reported to police last Wednesday (June 6) that political signs had been stolen from her lawn and wanted the incident logged.

Dumpster

A 44-year-old S. Main Street woman was warned not to use the private dumpster at the Red Lion Inn last Thursday (June 7). The Inn was not interested in pressing criminal charges but wanted her to stop putting her trash there. Information on items found in the trash led back to the S. Main Street address. Police went to the resident's house to advise her not to use the private dumpster.

OUI (drugs)

Police received a call about a hit and run accident at Shaw's Plaza from a 45-year-old Scituate woman who reported a man in a red Mercury Sable had smashed into her 2012 Nissan Sentra in the parking lot and took off toward Scituate at a high rate of speed.

Police issued a BOLO (Be On The Look Out) and a State Trooper who was in Scituate heard the call and pulled the car over at Route 3A and First Parish Road, police said. Investigation revealed the driver of the Mercury, a 27-year-old Marshfield man, was under the influence of drugs. State Police made the arrest and charged him with OUI (drugs), illegal possession of a Class B drug, and multiple motor vehicle offenses including leaving the scene of an accident. Cohasset police investigated the accident. The woman's Nissan had to be towed, police said.

Wires

At around 6:13 p.m. on Friday (June 7) a small Ford dump truck, operated by at 23-year-old Scituate man, took down some wires on King Street by Red Fox Lane. National Grid had to be notified.

Deer hit

The operator of a 2004 Chevrolet Trailblazer, who is a 59-year-old Weymouth man, told police a deer ran out in front on him on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) at around 9 p.m. on Saturday (June 8). The man was traveling south when the accident occurred. There was damage to the front grill of the Trailblazer but the vehicle was drivable. The impact of the accident killed the deer.

Spear gun

Police notified the Environmental Police after receiving a report from a sunbather on Sandy Beach at 12:55 p.m. on Sunday (June 9) that a diver was heading into the water with a spear gun. Police learned there were no regulations governing spear guns so the activity was not illegal.

Kayaker

The Coast Guard, harbormasters in Cohasset and Hull as well as local police and a helicopter searched for a missing kayaker on Sunday (June 9) around 8:43 p.m. off the Hull side of Black Rock Beach. A friend reported the kayaker missing but he was later found at home and was OK, police said.

ART STAR

and adjustment of each of our ideas," Mavilia explained. "When I think of a garden I think of its entrance, as one first escapes into the beauty and nature. The archway resembles the entrance of a garden in a natural form, as a whimsical tree elegantly drooping with life. The exaggerated height and emphasized arch brings movement and life to the installation. Although captivating to the eye the cascading tree has a unique and mysterious demure full of detail."

Mavilia said she has enjoyed creating artwork at the Art Center over the years, and loves the fact that she has the opportunity to do so right in town. She also participated in last year's Arts Stars project, and noted that many of the other students travel from as far away as Whitman or Hanson to participate

"It's so awesome," Mavilia said of having easy access to the Art Center in Cohasset. "I'm lucky it was right in my town. I popped in there all the time, worked on [the installation] for a couple hours, then would go to the beach and come back a few hours later."

Mavilia appreciates growing up in a community that values art. "The amount of support there is for arts in our town... it was so awesome growing up here and having [the Art Center] right down the street."

The recent CHS graduate is also the recipient of an Art Center scholarship. Community program director Heather Collins, who organizes the Art Stars exhibit, said that the Center gives out four scholarships to high school seniors. Mavilia "won the top one."

Collins said Mavilia is the perfect choice for this special scholarship. "She has been so involved throughout her high school career... It's a very meaningful scholarship and Caitlin was very deserving of it."

Mavilia will attend the Mass. Institute of Art and Design this fall. She said that she is not sure yet which area of art she would like to concentrate in, but added that her freshman year is the time to try it all.

"I'm into everything at this point," said Mavilia, listing off sketching and mixed media as two of her favorite mediums. "Picking a major is going to be the toughest part."

Collins said that the Art Stars program is a good training ground for young, budding artists like Mavilia.

"It's a unique program. It gives these kids heading off to study art a chance to work with real artists," said Collins. "It's a great opportunity for them."

It's also nice to have something like this on the South Shore, Collins added. "People don't have to go into Boston for that extra boost" to their "burgeoning art career."

Collins, who has spent 15 years as program director at the Art Center, said that the still-new Art Stars program is one of her favorites to organize.

"This has been one of the most satisfying things to work on," she said. "We get to know the students. They're near and dear to our hearts, and we're thrilled we get the chance to work with them."

The program director said that she hopes the Art Stars installation will be an ongoing offering at the Art Center. Local sponsors have made it all possible. The program is supported by grants from the local cultural councils of Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanson, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Plympton, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth, local agencies funded by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, and also by contributions from Dorothy Palmer, the Rotary Club of Scituate, and Beatrice Sloan in memory of Hugh J. Sloan, Jr.

This year, the Art Stars exhibit will be viewable not only throughout the Arts Festival weekend, but throughout the next month. The installation will remain on display until July 14 during regular Art Center hours, which are listed online at ssac.org. Admission is free.

Today (Friday, June 14), there is also a special awards ceremony for the Art Stars at 5:30 in the Art Center, celebrating the artists and their achievements.

The South Shore Arts Center is located at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA, 02025. For more information, call 781-383-2787 or visit the Center online.

Merle and Joan Brown celebrate 50 years together

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hi Cohasset, how is everyone doing this week? A bit damp but do not let a little wet weather get you down. As I write this column, the forecast s for a bit of a bigger storm but the great news is clearing up Saturday and Sunday, Father's Day! If you are a Dad or a "Dad-like" role model, Happy Father's Day and enjoy.

With Father's Day weekend of course, we also have the South Shore Art Center holding its 58th annual Arts Festival on Cohasset Common June 14-16. The Arts Festival has become a Father's Day weekend tradition for many of us. For a complete schedule of events, visit: ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787. Have a blast!

Anniversary

Here is a wonderful shout-out to a great couple celebrating a milestone in life! Congratulations to Joan & Merle Brown, so are enjoying their 50th wedding anniversary, on Saturday, June 15th. They were married on June 16, 1963 at the First Trinitarian Church in Scituate. The reception was at Dreamwold. They met while working at DS Kennedy, Inc. Antenna Co.

Their anniversary was celebrated in Orlando, Florida with a special trip to see the Blue Man Group. Children Marcy (and Don) Fleming and Jeff (and Laurie) Brown were there along with their five grandchildren.

DeSales

Thomson E. Jaffe, a resident of Cohasset, was among more than 600 traditional day and adult evening students from DeSales University who made the 2013 spring dean's list. Congratulations!

Curry College

Curry College announced that Cohasset resident Noah Pescatore attained membership to the Curry College dean's list for the 2013 spring term.

To qualify for the dean's list, students must earn a 3.30 grade point average, have no incompletes and have no grade lower than a C for the semester. Full-time students must carry 12 or more graded credits for the semester; part-time students must be matriculated, carrying 6-11.5 graded credits for the semester, and must have earned a cumulative total of 15 graded credits in consecutive semesters.

Great work, Noah!

Fairfield

Hats off to Alexander Livingstone, a resident of Cohasset, who received a bachelor of science degree from Fairfield University's Dolan School of Business at the 63rd commencement ceremonies which took place on May 19, 2013, on the campus of Fairfield University.

Union College

Andrew Fontaine of Cohasset has been admitted to Union College's Class of 2017. Andrew is a graduate of Boston College High School. Congratulations and best wishes for a great college career!

CASP update

Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will be raffling off several sets of Red Sox tickets during the Arts Festival this coming weekend. Look for their table on Saturday and Sunday near the front of the 2nd Congregational Church (have a Strawberry Shortcake as you register!). The drawing will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Upcoming CASP events also include a Car Wash on Saturday, June 22, starting at 10 a.m., in front of 2nd Congregational Church. On their 26th trip, 100 volunteers h ead for Virginia and Kentucky, departing Saturday, June 29, returning Sunday, July 7 with many stories.

Every year, this group of teens and adults is an inspiration to me and I cannot wait to hear the stories and share with us all.

Beach yoga

Balance Studio is offering a complimentary Yoga class on June 21st for all ages. All are welcome for "21 Sun Salutes to Summer" to celebrate Summer Solstice at 4 p. at Sandy Beach Cohasset, bring mat, towel, water and a friend.

Joan and Merle Brown are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary this weekend.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

Sadie Mae is small in size, and very gentle and peaceful.
COURTESY PHOTO

Sadie Mae is a southern belle

PAULA J FATERSIK

It has been a busy few months for her with a litter of 5 to care for. So...it is summertime and the living should be easy for this wonderful little lady.

Spring and summer are the busiest times for our shelter as we welcome in new moms and their babies. This week's feature is Sadie Mae. Sounds like a Southern girl, and she sure deserves a relaxing, laid back summer!

It has been a busy few months for her with a litter of 5 to care for. So...it is summertime and the living should be easy for this wonderful little lady. Sadie Mae is a beautiful, five-year-old, short haired tiger with white tuxedo and paws. She is small in size, and very gentle and peaceful. Now that her kittens are off to their forever homes, it is certainly time for her to have the same wonderful ending.

Animal parents give from the heart and soul, just like humans. And when the babies are off on their own, there is the empty nest and things can get lonesome, but it is also a time to become the center of attention! This is Sadie Mae's time to receive a lot of love and companionship with playtime and fun as well as relaxed sessions curled up in the sun. She worked hard and was a wonderful mom to her kittens and it is her time to shine.

Sadie Mae has been fortunate to be living in a fabulous foster home where she tended to her litter. We are always hoping for the right person or family to come along before an animal returns to the shelter. For the cats and kittens it is a safe and more comfortable transition. If you think that you are ready to adopt a beautiful cat like her, and have the time to make her life one filled with happiness, love and fun, this would be a perfect time to meet her.

You can call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Sadie Mae as well as other cats and kittens who are currently in foster homes or waiting in the shelter for the chance to go to a real home.

Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. To see photos and read more about our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets.

Our continued thanks goes out to Dr. Waters and his staff at The Hingham Animal Clinic, 146 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. They continue to help HSAR in treating and caring for all of our cats and kittens. From the time a cat enters the shelter, HAC is there for us to help with check ups, tests and vaccinations that keep our felines healthy as they begin their journey to new, loving homes.

Paula J Fatersik is a volunteer and feature writer for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Going green means saying 'no' to GMOs

ERIN DALE

This issue marks the return of the "On the Green Beat" column, sharing tips, trends, and stories on going "green."

The green movement, at this point, is not exactly news. For decades, schools, businesses, and government initiatives have urged us to take better care of our planet by reducing, reusing, and recycling, harkening back to the first Earth Day on April 22, 1970.

However, many are concerned about the availability of safe, healthy foods in light of news surrounding the Monsanto Protection Act (MPA). Monsanto is a global seed and herbicide company specializing in genetically modified organisms (GMOs). A GMO is an organism whose genetic material has been altered through genetic engineering. Particularly, GMOs are modified to be able to resist herbicide, allowing more crops to be harvested. The MPA protects Monsanto from sanctions being placed on GMOs, even if the plants are deemed unsafe.

Many countries around the world, including Ireland, New Zealand and Japan, have banned GMO planting.

While GMOs produce more crops at rapid rates, which proponents have argued could help solve world hunger problems, the chief concern is that many GMO variants have not undergone enough testing to fully understand the effects on the environment or human health.

Once planted, GMOs turn into "super plants" that can invade and contaminate nearby crops. They then produce more genetically altered plants, taking farmers who harvest the old-fashioned way by surprise. This "accidental" polluting of farmers' crops has led to Monsanto filing hundreds of suits against farmers who have unwittingly "stolen" the seed giant's formula. This has effectually put many small-scale farmers out of business. In 2011, a consortium of over 50 organic farmers and seed dealers sued Monsanto seeking to keep the company from suing if the altered seeds contaminated organic crops.

A federal court ruling Monday crowned Monsanto the victor. The company defends its right to sue for patent infringement but claims to only take action against those who commit patent infringement on purpose. However, reports indicate that Monsanto officials still refuse to sign a covenant stating that they will not sue organic growers who "accidentally" violate their patent.

Monsanto also came under fire last week when it was discovered that genetically modified wheat planted in 2005 – part of a program that had been abandoned – had started growing in an Oregon wheat field. When the farmer tried to spray the wheat with herbicide, it wouldn't die. The company claimed to be "mystified" by the wheat's appearance.

Comedian/political satirist Steve Colbert critiqued Monsanto's "little slip-up" last week.

"They [Monsanto] don't know" where the altered wheat came from, quipped Colbert. "Maybe we should ask the genetically-modified wheat — at this point, it can probably talk."

Many proponents of natural, organic, and safe foods have called for a repeal of the MPA. A farm bill passed by the Senate on Monday did not include a provision to repeal the Act, despite vocal opposition.

There was, however, a small victory. Sen. Jeff Merkley (D-Ore), who has been urging the Senate to repeal the Act, was able to secure commitment from Debbie Stabenow (D-Mich.), chairwoman of the Agricultural Committee, that she would try to block the MPA from being renewed when it expires this September.

Stabenow has promised to try to quash any backroom dealings that would extend the MPA; any attempts to extend the Act will have to be done publicly.

So what does this mean for us consumers?

Regardless of whether the MPA ends up being renewed or not, we vote with our dollars. If you are against consuming genetically modified food — then don't. Read labels voraciously; buy products that are specifically labeled GMO-free. Or support your local growers by buying their produce. Cohasset is lucky to have its own thriving farmers' market each Thursday from June through October, right here on the town common, where you can support local agriculture and score delicious, healthful food.

And if you have a green thumb, there's nothing more "eco" than growing your own produce. Buy organic seeds and provide for yourself, your family, friends and neighbors the old-fashioned way.

Bottom line? We as citizens must push for transparency from our government — whether it concerns food safety or freedom of information. Speaking up – with your votes and your purchases – is a good start.

"On the Green Beat" seeks to share tips and highlight local businesses or individuals doing innovative, eco-friendly things that support a sustainable environment. If you have an eco-tip or someone you would like to see featured, email reporter Erin Dale: edale@wickedlocal.com. You can also follow @ErinDale-Mariner on Twitter.

Class of 2013 officers:

Senior Class President: Andrew Barrett
Vice-President: Charlotte Barszewski
Secretary: Ryan MacCarthy
Treasurer: Anthony Nahill

Valedictorian: Matthew Gregory
Salutatorian: Whitney Malone

diplomas, special awards and recognitions, and well wishes from their educators.

Class President Andrew Barrett, salutatorian Whitney Malone, and Gregory took turns addressing their fellow classmates — and thanking their teachers and parents for all of their hard work and support over the years.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo gave the keynote address. CHS principal Carolyn Connolly also gave a speech. This was Connolly's first year as CHS principal and therefore her first graduating class in Cohasset.

Barrett said in his speech that although Cohasset is a small town with a small school system, it's nice to grow up in a place where everyone knows your name.

"The environment in this small town, and in this school system, is truly unique. Never once did I feel like I was just another name and number on a class roster. As proof, today, I can say with certainty that, although she's been here for just a year, when Principal Connolly hands out those diplomas, she'll know the name of every student whose hand she shakes. You don't get that at many other ceremonies," said Barrett.

The class president also reminisced about growing up with many of his fellow graduates. "When I look out at my fellow classmates, I see the same faces that I shared the sandbox with in preschool, the same bus stop buddies who I rode to the Deer Hill and Osgood schools with, and the same friends that I played Little League with. Sure, there have been some additions and subtractions over the years, but how lucky are we to have this team of 86 strong who are still standing here today?"

Before Superintendent Cataldo took to the podium, she paid a special tribute to Osgood art teacher Betsy Ogden, who is retiring from Cohasset schools after 19 years. Ogden received a certificate of appreciation, during which she addressed the crowd, quoting Dr. Seuss: "Don't cry because it's over; smile because it happened."

For the class of 2013, smiling is not a challenge. This is a class who loves playing pranks about as much as they love eating at Chipotle (which, if you were to ask one of them, is a lot). A few senior class pranks were attempted during their last week of school, some more successful than others. There was the epic fail – filling the cafeteria with balloons, which they were required to remove before the school day began – to the ultimate coup – getting to school early and parking haphazardly in the parking lot, much to the juniors' confusion and dismay.

Malone alluded to the "great parking lot prank of 2013" and said of her class's uniqueness as a whole, "Ironically, our distinction is revealed when we join as a class."

Class of 2014, you're up next — and no doubt already plotting a way to top the parking lot prank.

Auction items for CSC Launch Party

Cohasset Sailing Club is hosting its annual launch party on Saturday, July 6. All adult members and friends of the CSC are invited. People don't need to be active members in order to attend and past members are especially welcome, as are future ones. Festivities will take place at the clubhouse from 6 to 11 p.m. Dinner, a lobster and barbecue chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. BYOB.

The summer launch party is the CSC's only adult social event and the party's silent auction is the club's main fundraising event. Donations for auction items are actively sought: In past years these have ranged from gift certificates, gourmet dinners, artworks, tickets to professional sporting events, sunset cruises, sailing lessons, vacation home loans – you name it. No gift is too big or too small, as all the proceeds go to benefit one of the town's best institutions, as the CSC makes sailing accessible and affordable for all residents. All proceeds from the auction will go toward the new building fund – again. It is hoped that ground breaking will take place after concluding the 2013 sailing season. To donate an auction item, email Deb Johnson at debjoh2000@yahoo.com.

Call Linda O'Brien at 781-383-2234 for dinner tickets from now through June 30. Tickets are $50 per person. People can get tickets at the CSC starting July 1, and these can also be purchased at the New Sailor Parent Orientation, scheduled for 6:30 p.m., on June 25.

There is no charge to come socialize and bid on the auction items.

Historical display for Flag Day

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Did you know today – Friday, June 14 – is Flag Day? The Cohasset Historical Society sure does, and has an exhibit currently on display that celebrates historic American flags.

Flag Day commemorates the adoption of the flag of the United States on June 14, 1777.

The Historical Society's Becky McArthur helped curate the exhibit, along with Lynne DeGiacomo and Martha Fisher.

One of the prized flags has been to outer space and back — a town-owned flag was taken there by Cohasset's own NASA astronaut, Steve Bowen.

There are also much older flags on display, some dating back to the Civil War, including a 35-star "Great Star" design from the early 1860s. There is also a reproduction of the first official U.S. flag with 13 stars and 13 stripes to represent the original 13 colonies.

Another highlight of the exhibition is a flag quilt handcrafted by resident Joan Edmonds Lawrence in memory of her husband Paul Lawrence, who died in 2002 as a result of exposure to the herbicide Agent Orange during his service in the Vietnam War. The quilt was dedicated during Cohasset's 2012 Memorial Day observance to honor Paul and all fallen veterans.

Also honoring veterans is a photo display of Cohasset's "Gold Star" veterans — the 22 servicemen who died from World War I through Vietnam.

"We always try to do something for our Gold Star families," McArthur said of the display.

Another treasured artifact as part of the exhibit is a book full of letters written by Cohasset's World War II soldiers.

"The [American] Legion sent them money at Christmastime, and they would write back," said McArthur.

The flag exhibit will remain on display through July. It comes on the heels of a recent exhibit showcasing Cohasset in the 1920s, the decade the town's historical society was founded.

It's all been part of a yearlong celebration of the historical society's 85th anniversary. The society's official birthday is July 16, 1928.

The next big event is a birthday party and fundraiser on Sunday, July 28. Showing that history buffs know how to have a good time, the party theme is Las Vegas.

The event takes place at the Atlantica restaurant from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. and features singing impressionist Joey Voices. "VIP" tickets cost $85 while general admission is $75 (members save $5 per person; there is also 10 percent off for tables of 10). Diners choose between a meal of chicken or salmon.

All proceeds from the event benefit the historical society, which is a 501c(3) nonprofit.

In September the society will continue the celebration with a clambake, which is a nod to one that the group threw in the 1950s.

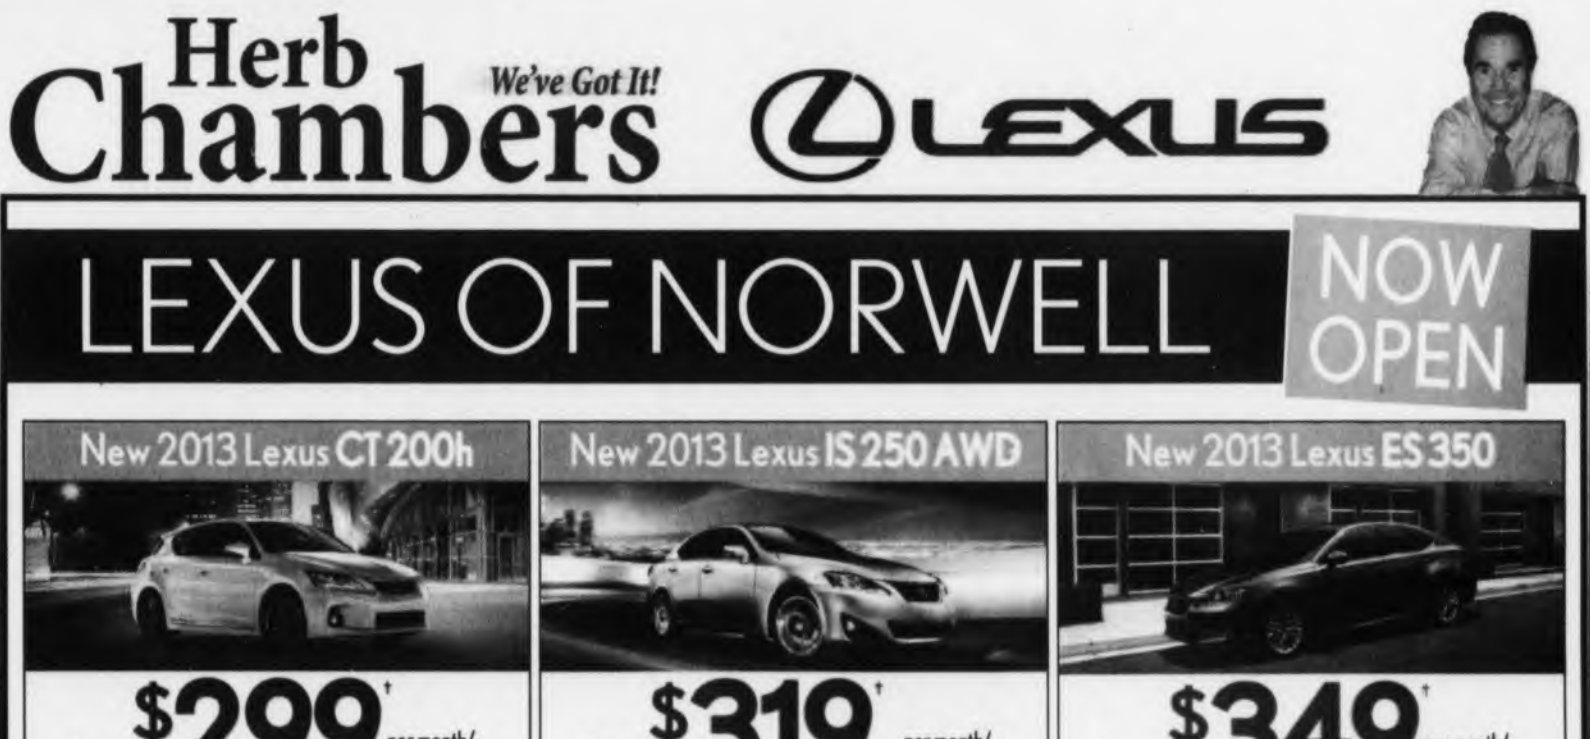
DeGiacomo encourages "anyone who has a love of history or cares or is interested in the town of Cohasset" to show their support by attending one of these events or exhibits.

McArthur added, "If you live in town, you need to know about the town."

DeGiacomo said that the society welcomes townspeople's support. Folks can join the society for as little as $25 per year.

"Events are open to members and non-members," she said, adding that the society's museums – the Maritime Museum and the Captain John Wilson House – are open free of charge. DeGiacomo encourages those who have not visited the museums to stop by this summer.

"It's going to be an exciting summer, and hopefully an exciting finish to the year," she said.



The Cohasset Historical Society is located at 106 South Main Street, Cohasset, MA, 02025. For more information, visit online at cohassethistoricalsociety.org or call 781-383-1434.

COHASSET TRI

Volunteers keep the race running

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

One of the season's biggest events is about to hit Cohasset — the annual Cohasset Triathlon is a mere three weeks away on Sunday, June 30

This year marks the race's seventh run through Cohasset. The sign-up is sold out – and has been since it opened six months ago – and the event's group of volunteers is gearing up to go.

Every year, a group of nearly 100 volunteers assist during the major race, helping racers check in, assisting in paperwork, handing out t-shirts and more.

All of these volunteers are managed by a 16-year-old Cohasset High School student.

Christian Cunnie is a sophomore at CHS and has been working as the Triathlon's volunteer coordinator for the past three years. He works in his part-time position after school but mainly on weekends. Cunnie works for Bill Burnett, founder/director of Streamline Events, which started the triathlon. The organization also runs many other races, including other triathlons and road races in New England, New Jersey and Florida.

This keeps Cunnie pretty busy.

"During the summer, every weekend or so we have an event," he said.

Cunnie's role as volunteer coordinator involves reaching out to the various communities the races are held in, trying to recruit volunteers for race day. He is responsible for entering emails into a database and sends out pre-race emails.

The CHS student said that he enjoys the recruiting process and working the events themselves. And while it may seem like daunting tasks for a teenager to take on, Cunnie has been doing similar work since he was even younger.

"I started working at the farmers' market when I was nine years old," said Cunnie. "I like organizing groups of people."

For the Cohasset Triathlon, volunteers work on Saturday, June 29, the day before the race, to man the check-in area at Cohasset Town Hall from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Volunteers gather the following morning at their assigned position.

Cunnie arrives at his post bright and early on Sunday.

"I like the atmosphere on the beach; my favorite time is 5:30 in the morning when nobody's down there yet and everything is set up," said Cunnie.

Call it the calm before the storm — the triathlon officially starts at 7:45 a.m.

Would the volunteer coordinator ever consider running the tri himself?

"That's a goal," said Cunnie. "I would love to do at least one of the races."

For now, "I just really enjoy working with the triathlon, working with Bill," Cunnie said. "He's a very fun boss."

Burnett had good things to say about Cunnie and the volunteer crew.

"The energy and vibe at the triathlon all correlate to the incredible volunteer crew we have on race weekend. People love being part of the triathlon, in part, because it is such a positive way to celebrate Cohasset," said Burnett.

The triathlon organizer added that he has a group of key triathlon coordinators, all who have been managing the event since the inaugural race, that are "simply amazing."

Burnett also made a "special call out to Christian Cunnie, who is doing a super job recruiting our volunteers and helping our team with other race logistics."

Cunnie said that volunteers are still needed for the June 30 event.

"We still need volunteers in crucial positions," the volunteer coordinator said. "We can never have too many."

Triathlon volunteers needed

The 7th Annual Cohasset Triathlon will be held on June 30th. We are looking for volunteers to help us stage a safe and fun event for everyone involved! If you are interested in volunteering in a fun task and you are over the age of 15 years old, please call Christian Cunnie at Streamline Events, 617-274-8772 ext. 3, or email christian@streamlineevents.com.

Please help us spread the word to a friend or two. We would love to have you involved!

Each volunteer will receive a commemorative t-shirt, food, and drink during the event.

Cohasset Tri coordinators

The following individuals are key in ensuring the Cohasset Triathlon runs smoothly each year:

- Race Director: Bill Burnett
- Operations Director/Volunteer Coordinator: Christian Cunnie
- Registration Coordinator: Karin Cunnie
- Swim Coordinator: Deb Thomas
- Command Center: Joe Mahoney
- Medical Director: Mike Hughes
- Information Coordinator: Catherine O'Callaghan
- Announcer: Anthony Everett
- Merchandise Coordinator: Mel Barrett
- Entertainment Coordinator: Donald St. Sauveur
- Parking Coordinator: Matt Heardon
- Finish Line Coordinator: Shelly Mahoney
- Run Coordinator: Kate Simmons

OUR VIEW

3A intersections

Safety-wise, what is the most dangerous intersection along Route 3A in Cohasset?

That is the question we have posed in our online poll at wickedlocalcohasset. So far the intersection at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) and Beechwood Street has the most votes followed by King Street (3A) and Sohier Street and 3A and lower King Street.

It is no surprise to us that the Beechwood-3A intersection is leading the pack. At that point 3A is a four-lane highway; there is a lot of "visual clutter" with signage and commercial properties; and the left-turn lights on 3A don't seem to work unless your vehicle is in the exact spot to trigger them. It seems as though we cover at least one accident a week at Beechwood-3A.

The good news is Mass-DOT (state Department of Transportation) is conducting a study of the 3A corridor from the MBTA station to the Henry Turner Bailey Road in Scituate.

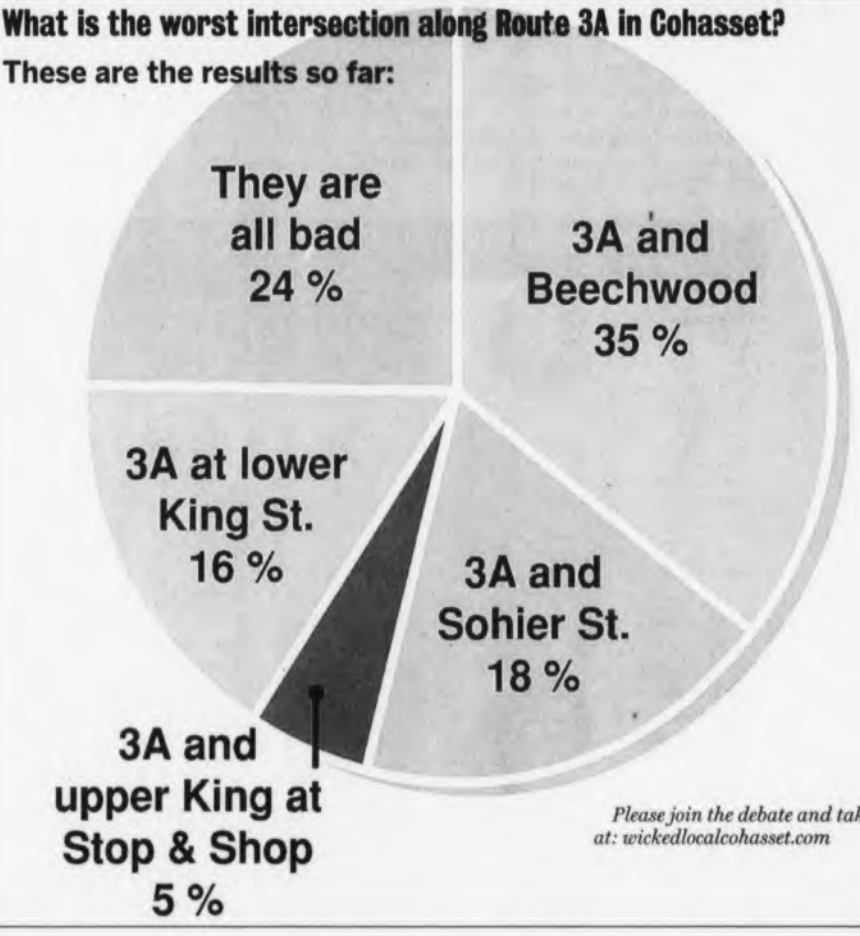
The Planning Board held a public forum on May 8 and explained what the MassDOT's study will encompass, and asked the attendees to weigh in on what the biggest issues are with 3A.

In the months ahead, the Planning Board will hold more public hearings and solicit feedback from residents, property owners, public safety officials and other stakeholders in considering the MassDOT's recommendations for improvement.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said he has seen a proposed configuration of the Route 3A and Beechwood Street intersection with turning lanes similar to those at the Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham that looks promising. Quigley said traffic counts are currently being conducted and accident data has been compiled for the study.

The question is when the study is completed what are the chances of getting state funding for reconfiguring the intersection with bridgework and other highway projects already in the pipeline?

We don't have the answer to that question but believe the study is an important first step toward the goal of improving traffic safety.



In the interim, all of us must use caution along 3A near any of the tricky intersections. Driving defensively means not using your cell phone or texting; observing the speed limits (which vary along 3A from 35-50 mph); and not accelerating through a yellow light. Cars are also skirting around vehicles that are waiting to make left-hand turns, adding to the danger..

WICKED LOCAL POLL

What is the worst intersection along Route 3A in Cohasset?

These are the results so far:

Here is what some of our Facebooks fans had to say

Join the conversation at: facebook.com/wickedlocalcohasset

• Lowering the speed limit from 50 to 35 or 40 from the train station to Scituate would be the first step. How does anyone safely turn left onto 3A from anywhere?

• The speed limit from the Scituate line to Shaw's is 35. Ever see anyone doing 35? Try to get out of CVS or Starbucks....if they were going 35 yes otherwise.....good luck.

• I want to say a tie between Sohier and Beechwood. Beechwood has more traffic because of the plaza but I remain worried about the people from Avalon getting to Sohier.

• The recent accident at the intersection of Beechwood and 3A is typical of what happens when people don't pay attention that there is a set of lights. The person from out of state on 3A going thru the red light hit a Cohasset truck. There have been numerous accidents at the intersection.

• The entire strip of 3A through Cohasset needs a massive police effort to crack down on speeders and red light runners. It is also shocking during the early morning hours, how comfortable some people are passing illegally at 70 to 80 mph. Given the lack of a retail tax base, maybe we can raise revenues by becoming known as one of those speed-trap towns.

• Turning lanes and lights might help. They also need to reduce the speed limit to 35 going South.

• Too many people talking and texting on their phones while driving thinking they are invincible. When you're driving you should be driving and that's it.

• If you are heading north on 3A and want to turn left onto Beechwood you need to be waiting for the turn when the light changes to red in order to get the turn arrow when the light changes to green. If you arrive at the corner and the light is already red, you will not trip the sensor in time to get the turn arrow. When the traffic heading south is very heavy I have had to wait through an entire cycle to get the turn arrow so I am not crossing oncoming traffic.

My suggestion for the corner is that there should be a right-turn-only lane added on Beechwood on the Walgreen's corner. Every near accident I have seen involves drivers who are going straight across the intersection but are too impatient to wait for the cars turning left to go north on 3A so they cut to the right but haven't seen that there is a vehicle turning south from the other direction.

If you look at the road, Beechwood is wider in front of Walgreen's than it is next to the gas station so you often end up with two lanes of cars trying to go straight across the intersection with neither driver wanting to yield. The right-hand lane actually faces the landscaping at the gas station so drivers in that lane, if they go straight, have to cut to the left to get to the single lane of Beechwood on the other side of the intersection. If all vehicles turning north or going straight were restricted to the left lane, the sight lines would be greatly improved.

• What is the law in Massachusetts as far as passing on the right is concerned? Having lived in other states I know passing on the right is illegal and a person will be pulled over and ticketed for it, and in other states people never do it. Here in Massachusetts if the person in front of me stops to take a left and I stop to wait ...people in the cars behind me lay on their horns Boston style and get angry that I don't hurry it up and pass on the right (sometimes practically having to drive 1/4 of the way onto someone's front lawn in order to pass them on these back roads).

Stay 'tooned

Red carpet, post-prom support appreciated

As parent coordinators of the Cohasset High School senior class Red Carpet gala and after-prom celebration, we would like to extend our heartfelt thanks to those who helped make the evening a cherished night to remember for our graduating seniors.

Despite the weather, hundreds of Cohasset residents of all ages came out to watch our young men and women gather and walk the storied Red Carpet before the prom. The after-prom celebration, a tradition that began some 16 years ago by parents who wanted to give seniors and their dates a safe and fun place to gather after the prom, was also made possible by Cohasset's community spirit.

Support came from local businesses and nonprofit organizations, parents, town officials, Cohasset High School teachers and administration and town officials.

Special thanks to The Red Lion Inn's Diane Van Etten and Steve Carroll, who quickly arranged to bring the Red Carpet gala indoors due to heavy rains, Dan Leahy for his extraordinary photography, Noble's Camera of Hingham for remaining open and developing photos in time for the after-prom celebration, our much-adored and witty emcees William Fish and Jason McCabe, Cohasset's Kate Bosworth for donating the Red Carpet, Cohasset Village Greenery for providing picture-perfect scenery, The Boston Red Sox, Paperscapes, Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association, Cohasset Sailing Club, Cohasset Middle High School PSO, Cohasset Town Hall, Cohasset High School Principal Carolyn Connolly, the Cohasset Mariner, Atlantica Restaurant, The Dinunno Painting Company, Jim Armstrong, Justin Hutchins, Glen Davis, Jen Peipenbrink, Graig Martin, The Goodale Company, Shoe Market Kids, Good Sport, Fiori Gulf, Del's Lemonade, The Village Butcher, Cohasset House of Pizza, Atlantic Bagel, French Memories, Mangia, Lido Juice Bar, Mr. Dooley's, Victoria's, 5 South Main, Wicked Good Cupcakes, JJ's, Wilbur's, Twist, Ports & Company, Willow Spa, Darilynn's Home Presence, Goodwin Graphics, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Hajja Auto, Dependable Cleaners, Outside In Athletic Wear, Paul and Regina Brown and OOFOS Sandals, Rudolph Adamo Day Spa, Dahlia's Salon, South Shore Athletic, Sports Specific Fitness, Planet Fitness, Papa Gino's, Stop and Shop, Starbucks, Dunkin' Donuts, Chipotle, Circe's, Pinkberry, Nail Essentials and Simply Nails.

We wish the very best for the CHS Class of 2013 and thank all of those who helped to make this year's senior prom a festive and safe celebration.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Partisan affiliation and the Senate race

Both Mr. Markey and Mr. Gomez have drawn criticism for the nature of their partisan affiliation during this election season.

MATT GREGORY

In case you haven't heard, Ed Markey is a liberal. He has been a staunch and vocal advocate of many of President Obama's initiatives, including the 2009 Stimulus Bill and the Affordable Care Act, has maintained a pro-choice, pro-marriage equality position regarding social issues, has argued against military interventionism and in favor of defense spending cuts in areas such as nuclear weapons funding, and has ardently defended the necessity of developing alternate energy sources for the future while retaining environmental consciousness. He has been a member of the House of Representatives for over 30 years, and has voted with the Democratic Party on 91 percent of occasions; in the few instances in which he did not vote with the party, his personal view on a matter was considered more liberal than the party's predominant ideological course. And while Mr. Markey has cited on numerous occasions his past actions in co-sponsoring legislative bills with Republicans as evidence of his ability to work in a bipartisan and flexible manner, critics have condemned his "hyper-partisan" past as evidence of a future inability to cooperate and compromise.

Yet while Markey's partisan leanings, perspectives on controversial issues, and likely course of action in the Senate are known commodities due to his long history of active participation in Congress, those of his competitor, Republican Gabriel Gomez, are more difficult to decipher because of his status as a true political outsider. The Cohasset businessman has repeatedly emphasized his self-proclaimed title of a "new type of Republican," declaring his intent to work cooperatively with both groups in Congress and to, "put the people first before party and politics." Yet while Gomez has campaigned as a moderate, stating in an interview, "I'm not tied to any rigid ideological position" much of the content that his campaign has emphasized in televised debates, advertisements, interviews, and public appearances, has focused on his personal qualities and his career as a Navy SEAL and pilot rather than specific stances on key topics. As a consequence, some have questioned whether Gomez possesses the experience and comprehensive understanding needed to pass judgment upon potentially controversial or polarizing political issues.

Among these issues is the oft-debated subject of abortion rights. While Markey has firmly stated his pro-choice convictions on the issue, Gomez has been more reluctant to establish a position on one side of the argument over reproductive rights. On his website, Gomez describes himself as "pro-life," yet also states that he would not attempt to overturn the landmark Supreme Court ruling Roe v. Wade. The Cohasset businessman's position has become more muddled, however, in light of two recent incidents. First on May 16, the Boston Globe published a report which detailed an interview with Gomez on abortion rights, during which the Republican candidate professed no knowledge of and no position on the Blunt or Stupak amendments, congressional proposals which could potentially limit the health coverage women receive from companies and from the government and their access to birth control and abortion services.

Then, in a televised debate between the candidates, Gomez asserted that unlike Markey, he would not have a "litmus test" which would prevent him from approving a Supreme Court nominee with a pro-life ideology, and by consequence, ambitions of overturning Roe v. Wade. And while Gomez defended his position as "absolutely new kind of Republican," the ambiguity of his stance has drawn criticism due to the fact that if elected to the Senate, he could potentially be influenced by his party leadership to support policies or judicial nominees advocating restrictions upon a woman's right to choose. Said Markey in the recent televised debate, "If [a Supreme Court nominee is] pro-life and you vote for them, they're going to have the ability to overturn Roe v. Wade...you just said to the women of this state that you could support, and you would support, a Supreme Court nominee who could do that."

Yet regardless of Mr. Gomez's potentially unclear or incomplete views on particular issues, the Republican has emphasized throughout his campaign a desire to remain independent from the party establishment and to serve as a voice of moderation and reason in Congress. However, Gomez's claims of ideological autonomy from the national GOP have been called into question as of late after email newsletters were released from the offices of Republican Senators Marco Rubio and Mitch McConnell, which urged people to donate to the Gomez campaign in order to help reestablish a Republican majority in the Senate. As stated by McConnell's newsletter, "Securing a victory for Gabriel Gomez...is crucial to taking back the Senate and removing [Democratic Majority Leader] Harry Reid from power." Members of the Markey campaign staff seized upon McConnell's show of support as a direct contrast to Gomez's message of political independence, with spokesman Andrew Zucker condemning "Gabriel Gomez's laughable claims of independence." Indeed, many Democratic advocates have asserted that Gomez would be used by the Republican establishment as a means of merely furthering the party's ambitions of blocking President Obama's initiatives. However, Gomez has attempted to distance himself from the GOP leadership, stating, "One of the things that I am going to change in Washington is my own party. I am fully aware that...some in the Republican Party will consider me to be a pain in the butt. And I am OK with that." Gomez added that he is willing to win the campaign "with or without D.C," and that "if anybody's in the pocket of anybody, it's my opponent."

Both Mr. Markey and Mr. Gomez have drawn criticism for the nature of their partisan affiliation during this election season. Markey has been described as "hyper-partisan," seeking to only further a liberal agenda while ignoring Republican attempts to cooperate on legislation. Gomez, on the other hand, has been condemned as having used his political newcomer and moderate status to conceal his potentially malleable views on controversial issues and, by consequence, his ability to be manipulated by the GOP establishment. On many crucial votes, the influence of party leadership can force elected leaders to act against their personal convictions; as a result, a candidate's ties to his or her partisan establishment could have larger implications for government policies on certain issues. For Massachusetts voters, determining which candidate will stay true to the best interests of the Commonwealth and to his campaign promises may prove unexpectedly impactful in determining who is tasked with the honor and responsibility of representing our interests in the United States Senate.

Keeping a watchful eye on dads

The discussion on which TV character is or was the best father dates back to the days of the test pattern and rabbit ears. Today the list of possible characters to choose from is pretty substantive.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Father's Day is this weekend and if you are like me, you have been breathlessly anticipating this since the Ground Hog saw his shadow. Well OK, maybe not; more likely if you are like me you'll probably take the trash to the dump, maybe go to the ball field or do whatever else you typically do on a Sunday.

In general, I have never been a big fan of the "secondary" holidays. Give me Independence Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas and I am good to go. However, I happen to be a big fan of fathers, especially a father who is active in the lives of his children. It doesn't matter the activity; playing catch in the front yard, teaching a child to ride a bike, sitting in the pediatric office with a sick child or trying to recall anything from sixth grade math in order to help with homework; an involved caring dad is an admirable man.

I love my Dad and I love being a Dad. The wonderful thing about being a dad is that you can influence, nurture, teach, protect, entertain, hold, laugh with and learn from your child. This article however is not about my Dad or my adventures in fatherhood, rather I'd like to use this valuable space to weigh in on an important debate: "Who's the Greatest TV Dad of All-Time?"

The discussion on which TV character is or was the best father dates back to the days of the test pattern and rabbit ears. Today the list of possible characters to choose from is pretty substantive. Viable candidates include: John Walton, Danny Tanner, Ozzie Nelson, Ward Cleaver, Michael Brady, Steven Douglas, Archie Bunker, Andy Taylor, Charles Ingalls, Howard Cunningham, Homer Simpson, Cliff Huxtable, Jason Seaver, Tom Corbett, Steve Keaton, Phillip Drummond, Jeb Bartlett, Tom Bradford, Tony Micelli, Ben Cartwright, Gomez Addams and Tim Taylor. A few TV dads that definitely didn't make the list include: Tony Soprano, Homer Simpson, Al Bundy, Peter Griffin, Chester Tate and Charlie Brown's dad. Interestingly, Ed Harris has played two memorable TV dads (Al Bundy and Jay Pritchett), Ron Howard played the son of two great TV dads (Sheriff Taylor and Howard Cunningham) and Michael Landon played both the son of a great TV dad (Ben Cartwright) and later became a great TV dad (Charles Ingalls).

Where to begin? Well for the sake of time I have whittled the list down to a final four but by doing so I have begrudgingly cast aside fathers associated with actual lines as: "Ward, I'm very worried about the Beaver," "Good Night John Boy," "Look now Opie" and "Whatchu talkin' 'bout, Mr. D?" So based on many years of research (cynics who don't fully appreciate the importance of research may call this activity 'sitting on the couch'), Internet surfing, a not-so-scientific poll conducted on Facebook and a discussion over a few libations; I present to you: Howard Cunningham (Tom Bosley) vs. Charles Ingalls (Michael Landon) and Cliff Huxtable (Bill Cosby) vs. Ben Cartwright (Lorne Greene).

Howard vs. Charles: Two fathers from shows that were staples of my childhood. "Happy Days" and "Little House on the Prairie" both started in 1974, both had just over 200 episodes and both had remarkable father figures. The role of Charles is perhaps one of the purest characters to ever be portrayed on television; caring, strong, humorous and always with a solution. I am heavily biased toward Howard in this battle for numerous reasons, the top being the touching Christmas episode in season one. However, Charles Ingalls moves on to the final due to two crucial miscues by Mr. Cunningham: 1) His utter and complete disregard for his eldest son Chuck and 2) Supporting the marriage of Joanie and Chachi thus setting up one of the worst final episodes in the history of TV.

Cliff vs. Ben: I have to admit I don't know a heck of a lot about "Bonanza's" Ben Cartwright as it was a bit before my time but I sure as heck know about the main character from "The Cosby Show," Cliff Huxtable. Both Greene's and Cosby's characters were considered ground breaking in their day; one for boldly using a western to tackle present day social issues and the other for portraying such a strong African American male role model. Cartwright is the longest running of the final four dads with over twice as many as the runner up, but Huxtable was played by Bill Cosby and you just can't beat "The Cos." Advantage Cliff.

This brings us to the final round. Doctor Huxtable vs. the pride of Walnut Cove. The classic match up of sweaters vs. suspenders, half pint vs. Rudie, four daughters and a son in the 1870s vs. four daughters and a son in the 1980s. Much can be said about the importance both roles have had in the history of TV, but only one can sit atop. So, without further ado I present to you the winner – Cliff Huxtable. Cliff's win over Charles is directly attributed to another Charles, Ray Charles. Any TV father who can get his TV kids to lip synch Ray Charles as an anniversary gift to his TV parents is one heck of a TV dad and worthy of the title of the "View From The Front Porch's Best TV Dad."

This weekend, take a moment to give a Dad you care about a call and wish him Happy Father's Day, I'm confident the sentiment will mean a lot. Oh, I think I now have an idea for a future Mother's Day article.

As always, thanks for reading and hey, shut that TV off and go outside.

John McSheffrey was born and raised on the South Shore and he and his family have been part of the Cohasset community since 2007. John can be reached at jjmcs@aol.com.

FOR THE RECORD

Father's Day isn't the same

GREGORY MATHIS

This is my first Father's Day without my dad.

He passed away on Dec. 2 of last year and it's been difficult without him.

So with Father's Day approaching I wanted to share some personal thoughts in his memory.

The following is part of what I had to say during a memorial service my family had for him this past January.

What I take great comfort in most is there are no regrets. My dad knew exactly how I felt about him and I know how he felt about me. So no regrets, really.

My dad's service in the Navy kept him from my mom and me for most of the first three years of my life as he served on the U.S.S. Enterprise during Vietnam. There are pictures of my dad and me during those years, but the time spent together was very limited.

During my awkward teenage years – and there were some awkward years – my dad was busy with work at the Pilgrim nuclear power plant and putting himself through college at Northeastern. And I was busy being a teenager.

We really connected though, as I began my career in journalism, got married, had a child of my own.

There were never any big speeches. No sit down talks that dragged on into the night. Just lots of small things that added up to valuable advice and a great role model. I'm glad I was wise enough to listen closely and so much of what he had to say has helped me in my career, helped with relationships, and helped me in life.

There were a lot of differences between my father and me.

We enjoyed talking about our work, but trust me I tried to keep the discussion focused on general things like dealing with personnel issues or company polices. Think about it. He was a nuclear engineer. I'm a journalist.

I barely passed physics in high school.

But every so often he would get on a roll and all of a sudden we were talking about nuclear fusion or fission, and I was lost on the science part of it. I was able to follow along enough to at least form a respectable follow up question thanks to my journalism background.

My head hurt after those conversations. There's a good reason I was an English major and went into the field I'm in.

I know I used to drive dad crazy when I was younger, especially with my long showers and my tendency to leave lights on when I left a room. I also used to keep my stereo on all night listening to music. He used to ask me, "Do you think we own the electric company?"

He was station manager at the Pilgrim nuclear plant for Boston Edison, of course I thought we owned the electric company, or at least got a good break on electricity.

I never took my dad for granted and as I mentioned in the intro there was very little, if anything, left unsaid between us. I miss him very much, but hope he's resting in peace after bravely battling major health issues for several years.

Don't miss the Strawberry Fest!

What better way to kick-off summer than with a delicious Strawberry Shortcake at the South Shore Arts Festival over Father's Day Weekend. A long-standing tradition for Cohasset's Second Congregational Church, the Strawberry Festival brings together dozens of volunteers to hull and chop hundreds of pounds of fresh New England strawberries for this fundraiser that coincides with the Arts Festival on the Common. The church sells over 2,000 shortcakes annually along with burgers and hotdogs at their grill tent.

Individual Shortcakes sell for $6 each and can be packaged "to-go." Families can also buy "to-go" kits of eight shortcakes for just $40 for a real Father's Day treat. Both the Arts and Strawberry Festivals begin at noon on Friday, June 14 and runs Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday afternoon.

CASP CORNER

Red Sox tickets: Perfect Father's Day gift!

- Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will be raffling off several sets of Red Sox tickets during the Arts Festival this coming weekend. Look for their table on Saturday and Sunday near the front of the 2nd Congregational Church (have a Strawberry Shortcake as you register!). The drawing will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday.
- Upcoming: Car Wash: Saturday, June 22, starting at 10 a.m., in front of 2nd Congregational Church.
- Trip details: On their 26th trip, 100 volunteers head for Virginia and Kentucky, departing Saturday, June 29, returning Sunday, July 7 with many stories.

Scream for local ice cream

Local ice cream co. serving up scoops at Arts Fest

"We're focused on producing ice cream that is using real ingredients rather than additives or manufactured flavors."
Co-founder Susie Parish

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The "locavore" – local food – movement is alive and well; this weekend a new, local ice cream company that is bringing its treats to Cohasset.

Kicking off the summer season in Cohasset is the 58th Annual South Shore Arts Festival, during which local crafts and fine arts are showcased and celebrated. Families turn out in droves for this community event that takes over the town common over Father's Day weekend.

This year, attendees can look forward to a new sweet treat; batch ice cream (the "b" is intentionally lowercase) will be serving up scoops of all-natural ice cream made from locally-sourced ingredients.

Look for the batch ice cream truck, which is painted to look like a black-and-white chalkboard, on Saturday, June 15 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Boston-based ice cream company was started by two women who wanted to create ice cream made with whole ingredients — nothing artificial or hard to pronounce. All seven flavors batch offers features a short list of ingredients that you'd actually recognize, such as fresh cream, eggs, organic evaporated cane juice (real, not refined, sugar), handmade caramel and actual vanilla beans. What's missing from the product is lab-made artificial flavors or colorings, corn syrup or dairy laced with hormones.

For the allergy-concerned, none of the batch ice cream flavors contain nuts or gluten, either, although the product is produced in a facility where nut products are present.

Co-founder Susie Parish explained the goal in creating batch with fellow founder Vanessa Janssens.

"We're focused on producing ice cream that is using real ingredients rather than additives or manufactured flavors," said Parish. "We're using vanilla beans, cinnamon sticks and make our own caramel, which is a huge hit. We're not using any corn syrups; it's real ingredients without any of the weird stuff."

Parish and her business partner are proponents of the whole foods movement, which calls for a return to real, authentic food. As the saying goes, organic food is what your grandparents called "food."

Also important to the batch founders: using local ingredients in their ice cream. Parish said that the dairy, salt, and some of the chocolate they use are both sourced in New England. Any imported ingredients, such as coffee and cane sugar, are sourced from Fair Trade suppliers.

You can find batch at stores like Whole Foods, Stop & Shop and Shaw's in Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut — and perhaps one day, nationwide.

"The goal is that we want everyone to enjoy a pint of batch ice cream," said Parish, in hopes that one day the brand will be carried in stores everywhere.

Until then, you can try it out locally at the Arts Festival this Saturday.

Volume 38 - Report No. 23 June 3-7, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on five roll calls from the week of June 3-7. There were no roll calls in the Senate.

Four of last week's roll calls are on proposed amendments that would impose more requirements on individuals to verify their eligibility for public housing and other state assistance.

Supporters of the amendments said that the stricter requirements would help ensure that only people who are truly eligible for these benefits will receive them. They argued it is outrageous that people can get taxpayer-funded welfare and other public assistance without producing a social security number. They noted this must be stopped so that people who are verified and struggling can get taxpayer-funded assistance.

Opponents of the amendments said they go too far and place an undue burden on some people who cannot easily provide documentation. They argued the Legislature should not micromanage the Department of Transitional Assistance which administers these programs. They noted that requiring a social security number in order to receive assistance that includes federal dollars, has already been banned by the federal government because immigrants who are here with asylum cannot produce those numbers.

APPROVE $1.4 BILLION FOR HOUSING (H 3492)

House 150-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill allowing Gov. Deval Patrick's administration to borrow $1.4 billion over five years for public and affordable housing. Provisions include $500 million to renovate and modernize many of the state's 45,000 public housing units; $55 million in loan guarantees to assist homeowners with blindness or severe disabilities to make their homes handicapped accessible; and $47 million for loans for the development of community-based housing for individuals with mental illness and intellectual disabilities.

Supporters said that Massachusetts has the 4th highest average home sale price in the nation. They noted this package will help thousands of people remain in their homes or find new affordable housing in the state. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

MUST HAVE SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER TO COLLECT BENEFITS (H 3492)

House 51-98, rejected an amendment requiring that a valid social security number be shown and verified in order for a person to receive any form of housing assistance from the state. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring a social security number. A "No" vote is against requiring it.)

MUST BE CITIZENS OR RESIDENTS (H 3492)

House 48-102, rejected an amendment prohibiting anyone who is not a citizen or resident of Massachusetts from receiving any state public assistance. The amendment also requires that any residents have proper verifiable documents or identification from their country of origin. (A "Yes" vote is for the prohibition. A "No" vote is against it.)

DECLARING RESIDENCY NOT VALID (H 3492)

House 43-107, rejected an amendment providing that "self-declaration of residency" not be accepted as a valid form of residency verification for people seeking taxpayer-funded benefits from the state. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring more than self-declaration. A "No" vote is against requiring it.)

MUST ALSO BE ELIGIBLE UNDER FEDERAL GUIDELINES (H 3492)

House 123-27, approved an amendment prohibiting anyone who is ineligible for federal assisted housing to displace or be given priority over any applicants who are eligible under both state and federal guidelines. Federal eligibility standards and proof of identity for housing assistance are stricter than state standards. (A "Yes" vote is for the prohibition. A "No" vote is against it.)

RAW MILK SALES (H 717) - The Committee on Environment, Natural Resources and Agriculture held a hearing on legislation that would allow licensed raw milk farmers to deliver raw milk directly to the consumer. Current law allows only the on-farm sale of raw milk. The bill would also allow farmers to sell raw milk to consumers through third-party cooperative buying clubs. This would allow consumers to join together and have the milk delivered to a nearby location so each individual consumer does not have to travel miles to the few farms that sell on-site.

ABORTIONS FOR WOMEN UNDER 18 (S 999) - The Public Health Committee heard testimony from both sides of a measure that would give women under 18 more options to have an abortion. Current law prohibits abortion without parental consent or a court order. The bill would allow abortions with the consent of a doctor, physician assistant, nurse, psychologist, social worker or family member over 25. Supporters said this simply gives more options to girls who don't have good relationships with their parents. Opponents said the bill goes too far, undermines parental rights and will make access to abortion even easier.

ANESTHETIZE FETUS (H 1930) - The Public Health Committee's agenda also including a proposal that would prohibit doctors from performing an abortion without first anesthetizing the fetus, unless the mother asks not to have it anesthetized. The bill exempts other circumstances from the requirement, including if the anesthesia would cause serious risk of life or harm to the mother and if the woman has been pregnant less than 20 weeks. Supporters said this will help prevent the fetus from feeling any pain. Opponents said the bill goes too far and is unnecessary.

GOOD SAMARITAN BILL (S 829) - The House gave initial approval to a Senate-approved bill that would protect off-duty firefighters and EMTs from liability when providing emergency care. The current "Good Samaritan" law only protects civilian bystanders who are not trained in emergency response. Supporters said the bill is long overdue and has gained more support since the Boston Marathon, in which hundreds of off-duty personnel were running in the race and then responded immediately after the bombing. They noted that under current law, these firefighters and EMTs would have been liable if anything went wrong as a result of their efforts to provide care.

EXPAND VALEDICTORIAN TUITION WAIVER PROGRAM (H 1070) - The Higher Education Committee's June 19 hearing in Room A-2 at the Statehouse will include a proposal expanding the current program that waives the tuition cost for any high school valedictorian who attends a state university. The measure would also waive the mandatory fees. The average annual tuition cost is $1,700 while the fees are $12,000.

Sponsors say that current law offering valedictorians a $1,700 discount is not likely to lure them to the state's system of public higher education because they still have to pay the other $12,000.

the school districts she has worked in, Cohasset is the only one that has booster clubs for each sport rather than one large booster organization. She said that this wasn't necessarily "a good thing or a bad thing," but perhaps combining forces is something to consider in the future.

The process moving forward involves having booster donations approved by a school committee vote prior to being expended, and ensuring that monies in the school's revolving accounts are utilized before booster donations are used to pay for certain items.

According to DeGennaro, the athletic budget is around $400,000 per year, which includes the town's appropriation and revenues from user fees and gate receipts. Of this $225,000 is used to pay officials, coaches and provide equipment, so booster donations are a key asset to keeping sports programs going, he said.

"We do rely on booster donations," said DeGennaro.

Cataldo said that the boosters raised around $35,000 for this past school year.

However, the athletic department should have some money that carries over each fiscal year as a reserve, said DeGennaro. Ford agreed, saying that there should be emergency money available for unexpected expenses.

Currently, around $35,000 remains in this year's revolving account, said DeGennaro. The business manager said that the department should strive to keep between $15,000 and $20,000 in the revolving fund as a reserve "for emergencies and to start off the summer."

This would also "allow us to rely less on boosters," DeGennaro said.

The process moving forward involves having booster donations approved by a school committee vote prior to being expended...

User fees were also discussed. Ford said the user fees currently account for one-third of the department's budget. Cohasset students who want to join a sports team have to pay $250 to participate, regardless of the sport. While some of the booster members in attendance discussed the fairness of the fee, when some sports – namely football – are more expensive than others – like swimming – School Committee chair Paul Schubert explained that the flat fee is to maintain equality among the students. If football fees were increased to reflect the expense of the program, some students would not be able to participate, Schubert said.

The chair also asked if booster clubs could help families pay the user fees in certain instances, adding that he does not want to see fees "go sky-high" for various activities.

"The idea of education is to be able to choose the sport [the students] want to do," said Schubert.

Currently, the athletic department considers individual cases when families cannot afford the user fee.

"We look at that individually," said DeGennaro. "We don't want to turn anyone away."

The group also discussed sports uniforms, and what the school currently provides. Football players get uniforms and helmets while swimmers have to provide their own uniforms, which some viewed as unfair.

School committee secretary Jeanne Astino said, "It boggles my mind that we can't buy the kids bathing suits."

Ford said that this is because swimsuits are a personal item that can't be returned to the school and used by different students season to season. The school does provide swim caps to the students. He said he has no problem with the department buying the suits if that's what people want; however, he noted that many students want to wear top-of-the-line brands that would be out of the school's budget. In cases like the girls' tennis uniforms, which are designer, they are expected to purchase their own. This has been done through the boosters and fundraising.

Said one booster member, "We live in a community where the kids want the swag."

Astino suggested allocating a percentage of the user fee toward uniforms. "Then the fundraising becomes more palatable."

Ford said that the monies collected are allocated in all different places. For the swim team, the user fee could go toward pool time, which is expensive to rent, Ford said.

All of these matters and more will be discussed at an upcoming meeting Ford plans to hold with all of the booster clubs.

"I think this group of boosters here is very supportive and working hard," said Ford.

And as for combining the distinct booster clubs into one super-group? The athletic director said that he doesn't think that's necessary.

"It doesn't have to be one collaborative group, but one mindset," said Ford.

What are Public/Legal Notices?

Public notices are announcements from all levels and branches of government, as well as from individuals and businesses that inform you about government actions, environmental conditions and economic changes. They alert you when your interests, your family or your community is affected by what others do, and they invite you to participate in the democratic process or in business opportunities.

Watch this newspaper for public notices that inform you about things like:

- the restaurant at the end of the block that applied for a liquor license
- a proposed tax increase on the school board's agenda
- the neighbor that applied for a permit to enlarge her house
- the sewer authority that is issuing bonds to finance a new plant
- business and/or residential properties that are going up for sale

A fantastic run

Boys battle to the final seconds

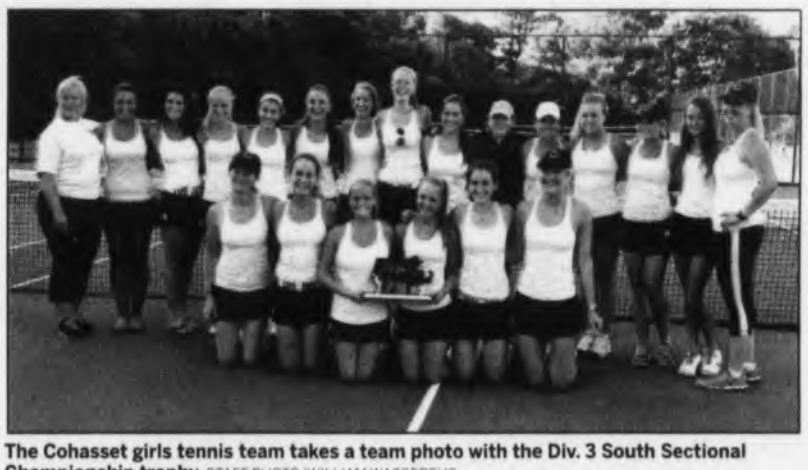
By Eric McHugh
The Patriot Ledger

Ryan Goodall was feeling queasy.

While the Dover-Sherborn fans were counting down the seconds to a second straight state championship, the Raiders' senior goaltender was counting Cohasset goals.

The Skippers had just scored two more in the final minute, turning what once had seemed to be an insurmountable five-goal deficit into a slightly more manageable two-goal hole with 34.5 seconds still left.

"I was a little worried," Goodall acknowledged.



On the Cohasset sideline, James Beaudoin was thinking about how cool it would be to cap his first season as the Skippers' coach with a miracle comeback. "I was hoping," he said with a wry smile. "I knew we were (probably) going to run out of time at the end. (But) we scored eight goals in three minutes last game, so I knew we could do it."

In the end, Cohasset did come up just short, falling 12-10 in the Division 3 state final at Harvard Stadium.

The top-seeded Skippers (17-4) got two goals each from Colin Whelan, Nick Tangherlini and Cole Kissick, but No. 3 Dover-Sherborn (19-4) countered with four goals from Matt Davies. Cohasset had to take solace in pushing the Raiders a lot harder than North Reading did in last year's state title game – a 16-6 D-S rout.

"Cohasset was a tough team," Dover-Sherborn coach Brian McLaughlin said. "They battled hard near the end there. Luckily we held on. Another five minutes, who knows what happens? They played great in the fourth quarter coming back."

The Cohasset girls tennis team added another win to an already outstanding season as they beat Ursuline 4-1 in the Div. 3 South Sectional Final, Sunday afternoon at Norwell High School.

Emma Davis got things started with a 6-0, 6-0 sweep at first singles.

The next finishers were Gabrielle Lemoine and Bri Crough with a 6-3, 6-3 victory.

Emma Smith was a come-from-behind winner at second singles and the first doubles team of Kate Sookiasian and Meredith Spofford also won.

TALKING GOLF

USGA returns to site of greatest victory

PAUL HARBER

Fore!

Yes, it's us; we are back for another summer of golf in the Gatehouse weeklies.

It's been a long winter and a longer and colder spring than normal, but summer is a coming, the snow birds are trickling back from the Sunbelt and soon, juniors will be out of school, meaning teachers and their students will be clogging up our golf courses.

It should be a good summer and the Big Event this year is the US Amateur, which is being held locally at The Country Club in Brookline.

It is the 100th anniversary of Francis Ouimet's US Open, a tournament, which should be held in Brookline, except, the entitled few who make up the membership at the historic club did not want to be encumbered or endure the spotlight, which comes with the US Open.

While it doesn't have the cache of a US Open, by the time the last putt is conceded at this year's US Amateur Championship, you will hear and read all there is to know about The Country Club and its' grand history in the world of golf.

We've been fortunate to play more golf than most non-member on those hallowed rounds and not just the Open course. We've even played the Primrose nine, the loop where wives are sent to play if they dare tee it up on weekend mornings.

We've had so many great and not so great memories there as well.

My favorite round was one we didn't have time to finish. We had time to play nine holes with a member. I birdied the par-4 first hole and the short par-4 fourth. The other seven holes I made par.

My host and our playing partners begged me to stay, but I was happy leaving. I knew my round was one bad swing from disaster and this way I can always say I shot under-par at The Country Club.

Our nightmare round lasted one shot. I really should not have tried to play because of a stiff back. But I did and on the first swing, my back went into spasm and I had to leave.

Had a lot of fun there, but I was never comfortable. We had caddies and they weren't kids. Many times they were young Irishmen with thick brogues.

All I could think of was my Irish grandparents, especially Nana. She worked as a servant in Brookline for Brahmins when she got off the boat more than a century ago.

These Brahmins made fortunes off slave trade and later industries that took advantage of the fact there were no unions or child labor laws.

But times change. This is 2013, not 1913. You can't blame the current members for the unethical and immortal practices of generations past.

Progress has been made.

In 1988 when I was writing golf for the Boston Globe, I researched the 1913 US Open and what I found in the front page of the Globe was shocking. The newspaper ran a daily series of cartoons about the US Open. It featured an bumbling African-American caddie at The Country Club named Asa Spades. The humor was low and disgusting.

That would never appear in any newspaper today, that's progress.

Sisk beats the odds

Marshfield pro will tee it up at this weekend's US Open

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

The best part of the US Open is just that: it is open to all.

It's not just for those rarified few who carry a PGA Tour card.

It means if you have a low enough handicap – 1.4 – and are willing to put up the $150 entry fee, you can give it a try.

The odds are long: More than 9,000 entered and there is room for 156 golfers.

But that's just half of it.

First, some 75 golfers are exempted (former winners, top 25 finishers, US Amateur finalists, etc.) into the tournaments, which means the 9,000-plus golfers are playing for 81 spots.

Second, most of the 9,000 tee it up in local qualifying, an 18-hole event with more than 100 other entries. Only three or four will advance to a 36-hole sectional qualifying tournament.

But that's not all. While some 75 are exempted into the US Open field, just about every Tour player is exempted into the sectional field, which means you really have to be on your game.

So much so that when the last putt was holed out in the sectional qualifier last week, of the 81 golfers who earned a ticket into the US Open, only 18 of them were golfers who played in the local qualifier.

Which brings us to Geoff Sisk of Marshfield; he is one of the 18.

Sisk, 48, will be in Ardmore, Pa., teeing it up against the likes of Tiger Woods and Roy McElroy at Merion Golf Club.

But it's old hat for Sisk.

This is the sixth time he has been successful in the local/sectional/US Open trifecta.

The USGA doesn't keep track of such things, but is has to be a record.

You should expect NBC or the Golf Channel to have him on for a chat.

Sisk has been a pro for 25 years. He made it to the PGA Tour only one time, for the 1999 season. He has been around long enough to have started on the tour's developmental circuit when it was known as the Hogan Tour.

"There's part of me that says, 'This is great,'" Sisk told reporters in New York after earning a berth in the US Open. "The flip side is that if I can do this now — I performed well — why can't I do this on the other levels? I'm my own worst enemy sometimes. But I just try to do the best I can."

Sisk's golfing career is on the back nine now.

Last winter, for the first time, he didn't go to Florida. He stayed home and visited the Harmon Club in Rockland to hit balls in their heated hitting bays.

What a great story it would be if he makes noise at the US Open.

One hundred years ago an underdog from Massachusetts woke up the world by beating Harry Vardon and Ted Ray to win the US Open at The Country Club.

It's time for another magical story, isn't it?

Leader of the Pack

Easton's John Hadges is the early leader in the Massachusetts Golf Association's Player of the Year standings, thanks to his sudden-death victory over Doug Clapp at the Hornblower Memorial Tournament at Plymouth CC. Hadges, who plays out of Thorny Lea, has 300 points. Clapp, who plays out of Old Sandwich GC in Plymouth, is second with 243 points. Hadges' season got off to a great start by winning the Norfolk County Classic at Presidents GC last month. Who finished tied for second? Yes, Clapp. The two, both active on the local circuit for more than 30 years, are old foes and friends . . . Plenty of locals will be in the field at the Massachusetts Amateur next month at Longmeadow CC. Plymouth's Tyler Kett earned medalist honors with a 1-under 71 at Cranberry Valley GC in Harwich last Wednesday, Hingham's Rob McMenimon, who plays out of Black Rock CC, shared medalist honors at the Wianno Club in Osterville with a 1-over 71. Hanover's Matt Montt, who plays out of the Harmon Club and Scott Congdon of Foxborough shared medalist honors at Presidents Golf Club in Quincy. Both fashioned 2-over 72s. Duxbury's Jonathan Stoddard (74) was one of the top eight as well. Earlier in the week Pembroke's Kevin Gately of the Harmon Club shared medalist honors with a 4-over 74 at Bay Point CC in Wareham. At Spring Valley, Joseph Frew of Granite Links shot a 3-over 75 to qualify for the State Amateur. Mansfield's Thomas Grant (75), and Connor Hayes (78) also earned a berth. Marshfield CC's Joe Fitzsimmons traveled to Andover CC last week and fashioned a 75 to qualify for this year's Massachusetts Amateur Championship.

A Joy forever

Tara Joy Connelly ran away with the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts' Edith Noblit Baker Championship last week at Cohasset Golf Club. Joy-Connelly cruised to victory, shooting a two-round aggregate of 156, some 10 strokes better than her nearest competitor, Lisa Anderson of Ferncroft. Joy-Connelly is a club member at Cohasset and had home course knowledge. She probably didn't need it; she would have won if they had played in Pago Pago. This is Connelly's sixth Baker championship. The record is seven, held by Haverhill's Joanne Goodwin, who won her first in 1955 at Myopia Hunt Club, and her last in 1972 at Cummaquid. It's something for Joy-Connelly to shoot for. Meanwhile Vicky MacKay of Southers Marsh GC in Plymouth captured the tournament flight with scores of 81-84-165. She wasn't the only golfer scoring medals. Her husband Leigh MacKay shot 77 to tie for third in the rain-shortened New England Senior Association Jarboe Bowl at Woodland and Brae Burn . . . A big tournament on the women's schedule this week is the Massachusetts Women's Open, which will be held June 19-20 at Mount Pleasant Country Club in Boylston. Last year Rockland's Megan Khang was beaten by Brittany Altomare of the University of Virginia, who was a member at Mount Pleasant. Khang, now 15, is on a hot streak. She is coming off her second consecutive Connecticut State Women's Open championship. . . Finally, Happy Father's Day to all and the Best Deal of the Week: There are great Father's Day bargains at all courses, for both green fees and merchandise. My favorite: If you purchase a $250 gift certificate at South Shore Country Club, they give you a dozen Titleist Pro-V golf balls.

playing, to stay on the court. She did a great job."

Sookiasian and Spofford played extremely well.

"They never fell behind," Meehan said. "They played tough."

Davis, who recently won the MIAA Individual South Sectional, and who will be playing for a second straight State Title, felt good about the win, and the team in general.

"Everyone came to all my matches," Davis said. "They're all really supportive. That made it better. There was a lot of good competition. I played (Wellesley's) Ashley Avery. She's a freshman, but she's a great player."

Davis came back to the high school team because she enjoys the experience.

"I wasn't going to play my sophomore year," Davis said. "But there was the whole team aspect. I wanted to be a part of a team. Gigi is awesome. She makes it fun, and we have a great team bond."

With the Ursuline win, Cohasset qualified to play Manchester Essex in the State Semifinal on Wednesday.

That match turned out to be the toughest of the season, as two unbeatens squared off and Manchester-Essex edged Cohasset 3-2.

Davis kept her season-long undefeated streak, winning against Manchester-Essex 6-1, 6-1

Lemoine and Crough were also winners in three sets.

Cohasset finished the season with a brilliant 21-1 record.

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Young Athlete Program

The South Shore YMCA's Emilson Branch in Hanover will host the Special Olympics Young Athletes Program this August 7-9 and 14-16 for children ages 2 to 8.

Young Athletes is an early introduction to sports and to the world of Special Olympics for children with delayed development. The children enjoy games and activities that develop motor skills and hand-eye coordination.

Each Young Athletes session will focus on a new motor skill in a different area of the SSYMCA Emilson Branch. This Ability program is inclusion based and participants are encouraged to include their siblings in the program.

The South Shore YMCA is seeking Young Athletes participants, volunteers aged 14 and up and volunteer coaches for the inaugural session of this exciting new program.

If you would like to a participate or volunteer, please contact, Pamela Holland, Youth & Family Assistant Director, at pholland@ssymca.org.

Space is limited.

The Skippers, who had their nine-game winning streak snapped, outscored the Raiders 8-5 after halftime, but a 7-2 deficit at intermission proved too much to overcome. Not that Cohasset didn't try. A 3-0 mini-run in the third quarter shaved an 8-3 deficit down to 8-6. But Dover-Sherborn responded with a devastating 1-2 punch. Matt Huemme scored with 4 seconds left in the third quarter to make it 9-6. Keaton Stoner then won the faceoff to begin the fourth, raced down the field and scored in just seven seconds for a 10-6 lead.

Faceoffs were a problem for the Skippers, who saw goals answered so quickly that some came before the Cohasset goal was even announced.

"Their faceoff guy had a great day," Beaudoin said. "They were getting possession and scoring every time. It was tough."

"That was huge," Goodall said of Stoner's goal. "Thank God we did that. (Cohasset) came out firing at the (start) of the (second half). You have to give them a ton of credit."

Beaudoin did just that, proclaiming his inaugural season a success, even though it didn't end with the program's first state crown since 2010. "It was just a great season," he said. "(The players) understood what I wanted to run, and they did it. They wanted to be here, and this sting is going to make them want to win it next year and work even harder.

"I love the town, I love the parents, I love the kids. I've really enjoyed becoming part of the community. Now that the kids know what I'm expecting, we're just going to get better and better. With the youth program we have, there's nothing else that can happen."

Cohasset listed seven seniors on its roster, including leading scorer John Mills (51 goals, 26 assists, 77 points), Tangherlini (42 goals) and attackman Drew Nahill (18 goals). Classmate Evan Yeager was strong in relief of junior goalie Jack Conte. Yet the Skippers have loads of returning stars, including Conte, Kissick, junior faceoff man Will Golden and freshman defender John Donohue.

"We have a lot more talent than people thought" at the beginning of the season, Beaudoin said. "And we have more talent that didn't even see the field today. (Those guys) are going to Division 1 (college) players, but they're freshmen and sophomores that we just weren't playing because (they were behind) the seniors. ... We're still stacked."

Semifinals

Skippers 14, Canton 8

The No. 1 seeded Skippers broke open a close game late in the second half with eight straight goals and Cohasset went on to beat Canton 14-8 on Thursday to earn a trip to the Div. 3 East Finals on Wednesday at Harvard.

Seven Skippers scored, with John Mills, Nick Tangherlini and Cole Kissick each scoring three.

Drew Nahill added two goals, and Colin Whelan, Will Golden and Hunter Forrer all scored.

"It feels great. The kids deserve it," Beaudoin said of the victory, shortly after he was doused in icewater by jubilant players. "Everyone said we have talent. We just needed direction. The kids were wonderful. They learned quickly. It's a smart team."

As for the future of Skipper boys lacrosse, Beaudoin is excited.

"We had a winning season," he said. "To get here was amazing. There were 51 other teams that didn't get here. We beat B.C. High, played Hingham tough. Dover Sherborn is a good team.They're losing all that talent. We're bringing back a lot. "

Beaudoin already had thoughts for next season.

"To the young guys I tell them to feel the sting, then go work out at Laxachussetts or BlackJacks. Hit the weight room and speed camp," he said. "The older guys I say thank you for your service."

The future, he said, is bright.

"We'll be in the championships all the time." Beaudoin said.

Vets needed to help vets

If you knew a fellow veteran in your area who needed to get to the doctor's office, but couldn't because they had no transportation, would you want to solve the problem? We think you would. Even if it were only once a month, could you find the time to drive them to their doctor's appointment? We hope you will.

Some of your fellow vets need to see their doctor, but can't, because no one is available to drive them. We could solve this problem together – but we need your help.

Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Program is seeking volunteers to drive fellow vets to medical appointments. Your assistance is urgently needed to help them get the medical care that they need – and deserve.

For more information, call Elizabeth Larkin at Norfolk County RSVP office at 781-329-5728, or email rsvp@norfolkcounty.org.

How to contact the Cohasset VSO

Assistant Veterans Services Officer Vincent Fountaine has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F). He also maintains office hours at Town Hall and the Senior Center.

Fountaine can be reached is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level. You can also reach him via email at:

vfountaine@cohassetma.org.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Malcolm J. MacDonald

COHASSET – Malcolm J. "Mal" MacDonald, of Cohasset, age 80, passed away on June 7, 2013.

Devoted husband for 59 years of Elizabeth A. (Dugas). Loving father of Sharon Stodell and husband Steven of Florida, Joy Finegan and husband Tom of Scituate, Sandy MacDonald of Plymouth, Mike MacDonald of Attleboro, Barbara Backer and husband Dietmar, of Canton, and Dave MacDonald and wife Chrissy of Attleboro. Also survived by ten grandchildren. Brother of Joanne MacDonald of Lexington and Louis MacDonald of Florida.

Mr. MacDonald worked as an electrical engineer. He was a member of the South Shore Astronomy Club. He also served in the US Army as a Corporal and was a veteran of Korea.

Relatives and friends were invited to attend visiting hours at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset, MA. 02025 on Tuesday, June 11, 2013 from 4 - 7 p.m. with a Prayer Service held at 6:30 p.m. Private Interment at Union Cemetery, Scituate, MA.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

A drowsy driver can be just as dangerous as a drunken driver. It is an under-reported cause in crashes because there is no test for sleepiness, such as the breath test for an intoxicated driver.
A study by the National Sleep Foundation shows a driver, who had been awake for 18 hours, can produce impairment equal to a blood alcohol content of .08 percent (legal limit for intoxication). Combining even small amounts of alcohol with being tired increases the risk of crashing (alcohol is a depressant).
This driver fell asleep at 2p.m. and crossed into the oncoming lane. COURTESY PHOTO

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 24, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Count to 10 if you must, but don't lose your temper, despite that person's (you know who!) efforts to goad you into reacting. Your restraint will pay off in a big way.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week finds you in a sociable mood, ready and eager to enjoy the company of family and friends. It's also a good time to seek out and renew old friendships.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Patience is called for as you await a decision about that project you're eager to launch. Meanwhile, try to set aside more time to share with that special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid becoming involved in a workplace dispute early in the week by insisting both sides submit their stands to a neutral arbitrator. Things begin to cool off by Thursday.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It promises to be a busy but productive week for the Big Cat. The pace slows by Friday, allowing you to catch up on matters you put aside but that now need your attention.

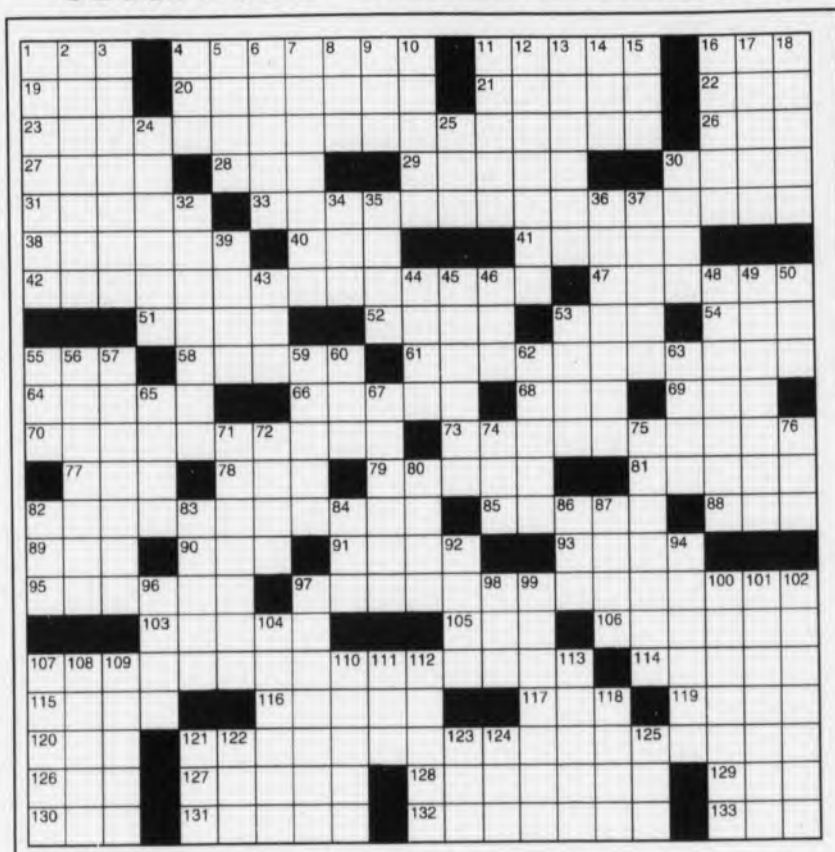
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A suddenly disruptive family situation is best handled with a cool, calm and collected response. Wait until things settle to let off all that pent-up emotional steam.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your practical side dominates the week as you reassess your finances to make some sensible adjustments in what you plan to spend and what you expect to save.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected meeting with a former colleague opens some interesting possibilities. But you need to press for full disclosure before making a decision.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent flurry of activity eases by midweek, giving you time to readjust your disrupted schedule and make new plans for a weekend getaway.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're usually the one who gives advice. But now it's time to open yourself up to counsel from friends who have your best interests at heart.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might find resistance to your call for a full inquiry into a workplace problem. But by week's end even the most rigid naysayers begin to come around.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A recurring problem surfaces once again. Maybe it's time you used your creative talents to help you find a new approach to resolving it once and for all.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are guided in what you do both by your intelligence and your emotions. An acting career would suit you quite well.

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ART APPRECIATION

We can see Debra Bell examining glass art through a window during the South Shore Arts Festival that was held Friday, Saturday and Sunday on Cohasset Common. A free trolley shuttles visitors from the parking lot at South Shore Music Circus on Sohier Street for the event that draws an estimated 10,000 people annually to town. The arts festival includes a centerpiece main exhibition tent, dozens of vendors, food, music and more. Art lovers are already looking forward to next year! COHASSET TRIATHLON

Team Hoyt is back again

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During the Cohasset Triathlon, competitors young and old will push themselves to the limit as they swim, bike and run to victory on Sunday, June 30.

Racing among them are two of the world's top 100 fittest men of all time.

Men's Health magazine gave the honor to Dick and Rick Hoyt, father and son team, ranking the dynamos as numbers 24 and 25, respectively. Having celebrity competitors like the Hoyts, who have competed in athletic contests the world over, from the Boston Marathon to the Ironman in Hawaii, is par course for the Triathlon, which over its seven-year history has had competitors like Olympian Gary Hall, Jr. and Senator Scott Brown (GOP Senate candidate from Cohasset, Gabriel Gomez, has also competed every year).

What's unusual about the Hoyts is their story — the story of a father, Dick, 73, pushing his son, Rick, 51, in a wheelchair in races around the country. Rick has had cerebral palsy since Town Counsel halted a planned closed session discussion by the Board of Selectmen at their meeting Tuesday regarding an Open Meeting Law complaint filed by the Cohasset Mariner.

The Mariner filed a complaint with the Town Clerk and Selectmen's office on June 12 alleging that the selectmen violated the state OML during their May 14 meeting, during which the board reorganized and appointed new officers for the year. Fred Koed was nominated as chair by Martha Gjesteby, seconded by Karen Quigley, and Koed was voted unanimously with no discussion.

Diane Kennedy, who has served as vice-chair for the past year, was re-appointed vice-chair, also with little discussion (see sidebar). Kennedy, who was elected to the board in the spring of 2011, besting Quigley who was up for reelection at the time, is entering the last year of her three-year term, as is Koed. The tradition in Cohasset has been that a selectman entering the third year of his or her term is elected chair.

In a hotly contested, four-way race for two seats in the May 11 Town Election, Quigley and Steve Gaumer were elected. Russ Bonetti, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, was a close third followed by incumbent selectman Leland Jenkins, who lost his bid for a second term.

The town is also in the midst of numerous controversies – not the least of which are lawsuits against the town by the former town manager and police chief. In the months ahead, the town

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

POLICE BEAT

Road rage incident ends peacefully

Officers responded to the area of Linden Drive and Rustic Drive for a report of a past assault and battery on Saturday around 10:30 p.m. When officers arrived they were able to determine that this call stemmed from a speeding complaint. The victim in this case, a 43-year-old Cohasset man yelled at a man driving by him in a Ford Explorer to slow down. The man that was yelled at, a 56-year-old from Scituate, abruptly stopped his vehicle, backed-up at a high rate of speed, jumped out of his car, and charged at the Cohasset man in a menacing way.

The Cohasset man pushed the driver back in an attempt to defend himself, and the Scituate man reportedly fell down. Officers advised both men of their recourse in court that includes a complaint for driving to endanger and assault against the Scituate man. Both men declined further action.

Restraining order

On June 10th (Monday) Cohasset Police serviced a restraining order (also known as a 209A) on a 19-year-old Cohasset man who resides on Route 3A. The man's girlfriend sought this order from the Hingham District Court in an effort to have her former boyfriend, stop abusing her. Violation of a 209A is an arrestable offense, police said.

Tire blown out

A postal worker notified the Cohasset Police of a minor motor vehicle crash on Cedar Street last Tuesday (June 11th) at 11:30am. When officers arrived they were unable to locate the crash. Minutes later a fire engine returning from the crash call located a vehicle with a blown-out tire on Hull Street. The operator of the car, 30-year-old Cohasset woman, stated that she was traveling along Cedar Street and hit an unknown object in the road, which caused the front right tire on her 2002 Ford Taurus to be blown out. A wrecker service was called to the scene to assist the driver. There were no injuries and no citations issued.

Past A&B

A young mother came to the police station on Wednesday (June 11th) at 3 p.m. She wanted to report that her 6-year-old son was pushed off of a large mound of sand at Sandy Beach by another 6-year-old boy, and as a result scraped his hands. It was explained to the mother that persons under 10-years of age cannot be charged with criminal offenses, and matters such as this are best handled amongst parents, police said.

Hitchhiker

A cellular telephone caller reported that a woman was walking on Route 3A in the area of Good Sport and she appeared to be hitchhiking and disoriented. Police responded to this call, which came in on Tuesday (June 11th) at 4:45 p.m., and spoke to the woman. She was advised that hitchhiking is illegal on a state highway. She was dropped off at the Mobil Mart at the intersection of Route 3A and Sohier Street to wait for a ride. She is 27-years-old and lives in Marshfield.

Hydrant Hit

The operator of a tractor-trailer unit, who was attempting to access the Toll Brothers Project on Route 3A opposite Schofield Road, cut a corner too closely and broke a fire hydrant off at its base on Wednesday (June 12th) at 8:30am. The Cohasset Water Department and the fire department were notified of the accident. The insurance company that covers the tractor-trailer will pay to have the hydrant replaced.

Modern hydrants are made with a safety feature that prevents water from spraying everywhere when hydrants are broken. That was not the case in the past.

Unwanted guest

Officers were called to a North Main Street address on Wednesday (June 12th) at 10:07 p.m. A caller was reporting that people were inside a vacant house and the house should be empty. When officers arrived they learned that the owner of the home had recently passed away and the estate is in probate. Family members who were inside the home were advised that they had to leave and seek permission from the Probate Court to enter the home.

Stolen car

Officers were called to the Golden Living Center on Route 3A to take a report of a stolen motor vehicle. A worker there was reporting that she parked her 1998 Nissan Maxima in the parking lot on Thursday (June 13th) in the morning and when she came out of work at 3:45 p.m. the car was gone. After a brief investigation officers were able to confirm that the caller's family member had borrowed the car without telling the owner.

Suspicious vehicle

Police were called to a parking lot on King Street on Friday (June 14th) at 6:29 a.m., for a report of a man passed out inside of a 1999 Toyota Avalon. Officers arrived and woke the man up. They identified him as a 50-year-old male from Poughkeepsie, New York. The man stated that he had been driving all night and was too tired to continue driving safely. He pulled over to catch a nap. He was allowed to continue to rest.

Harassment

A 47-year-old Cohasset woman came to the police station seeking advice from Officers on Friday (June 14th) at 8a.m. The woman told police that her ex-boyfriend has been sending her vulgar texts and emails since last April and she was possibly interested in obtaining an emergency restraining order (209A). The process of obtaining the 209A was explained to her and she said that she will continue to weigh her options and get back to police – she was just seeking information at this time and was in no immediate danger.

Crash

On Friday (June 14th), at 8 a.m., officers responded to the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street for a reported crash. On arrival it was determined that the 24-year-old male driver of a 2000 Nissan sedan was traveling North on Route 3A when a 39-year-old female driver, operating a 2007 Honda sedan, pulled out of Leo's Gulf station in front of him.

Both vehicles collided as a result of the woman not yielding to oncoming traffic. Both vehicles sustained major damage and were towed. The drivers are from the Scituate, there were no injuries reported, and the female driver was cited for failure to yield.

Boating incident

Cohasset Police, Fire, and the Harbormaster were sent to Government Island on Friday (June 14th) at 6:50 p.m. for a report of an injured kayaker being brought into port by a pleasure boat. Reports were that the kayaker became distressed while out in open water and swallowed seawater during his panic. The kayaker was evaluated by emergency workers and opted not to be transported to the hospital.

Reported robbery

On Saturday (June 15th), at about 3:34 a.m., police were called to a downtown Inn for a report of a robbery. A caller stated that a 5 ft. 7 ins. tall man with dark hair took his wallet and pushed him to the ground. When officers arrived all was quiet at the Inn. Officers went door-to-door and were unable to find the victim, and dispatch was unable to trace the call back. Officers also checked for trouble at another hotel in the area to no avail. At this point it appears to be a hoax call.

Missing person

Detail officers working the annual Arts Festival on the Town Common last Saturday (June 15th) were approached by family members of a wheelchair-bound elderly female. They were reporting that they were unable to locate their mother, who is a Cohasset resident and in a wheelchair. They reported that they became separated in the crowd and she has been lost for 45-minutes. After checking several locations, including the elderly person's home in Cohasset, she was located in the area of Ripley Road and Pratt Court. She was OK, police said.

Stolen purse

A walk-in to police headquarters reported that on Sunday (June 16th) between 2 and 4 p.m., someone stole her purse from her unlocked car at Sandy Beach. The victim, a 31-year-old woman from Kentucky (who is visiting here), reported that her purse contained $50 in cash, credit cards, a drivers license, and her checkbook. She was advised to contact her credit card companies and bank to cancel her accounts.

Minor crash

On Sunday (June 16th) at 1:21 p.m., officers investigated a minor rear-end crash on North Main Street by Cohasset Common. A 42-year-old Weymouth woman operating a 2013 Nissan stopped for pedestrians in the crosswalk and was rear-ended by a 64-year-old Cohasset man driving a 2013 Ford. There were no injuries reported and no tows required. The driver of the Ford was given a verbal warning for following too closely.

FIRESIDE

Kitchen fire in apartment

On Sunday (June 16) at 7:52 p.m., Engine 2 (Lt./Medic Forde and FF/Medic Boudreau), Engine 1 (FF/Medic Hernan) and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Durette) were dispatched from headquarters to 71 South Main St. for a reported kitchen fire.

While units were responding to the scene the dispatch center paged out box3121 for off-duty members to respond back for a building fire. When units arrived on scene, Red Lion Inn staff directed fire department personnel to the third floor kitchen in the apartment at 83 South Main St. Fire department personnel then proceeded to stretch 200 feet of 1-3/4 inch hose to the third floor to investigate the interior of the building and Lt. Forde established command of the incident.

Once members made entry into the third floor apartment they found a heavy smoke condition in the apartment and an employee of the Red Lion Inn exiting the apartment. The employee knocked down most of the fire in the kitchen with a fire extinguisher. Off-duty members Lt.Protulis and Lt. Curley responded back to the station and manned Ladder 1 and responded to scene. Chief Silvia and Assistant Chief Dockray also responded to the scene. Assistant Chief Dockray took command of the scene after receiving a brief initial report from Lt. Forde. Chief Silvia proceeded to the third floor and directed interior operations.

Engine 2, Engine 1 and Ambulance 1 crew initiated an aggressive interior attack to knock down the remaining fire in the kitchen and check for any extension of the fire in the walls. Ladder 1 crew shut off the utilities in the building and assisted the other units in checking for any extension of the fire in the apartment. Hingham Fire Medic 2 transported the Red Lion Inn employee who helped to extinguish the fire to South Shore Hospital to be evaluated.

Scituate Fire Engine 3 covered fire headquarters while units were operating at the scene. Captain Bilodeau responded back to headquarters and served as a guide for the Scituate Engine. National Grid Electric Division responded to scene and disconnected the power to the building at the utility pole. The cause of the fire was from cooking. Call Firefighters Adams and Mckay were also on scene and assisted in the overhaul operations. All units cleared the scene and the all out on box3121 was transmitted at 10 p.m.

Town reappoints Fire Chief

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's reappointment of Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

Silvia has been Cohasset's chief since 2006 and has been a mainstay of the department for over 30 years.

The chief's contract was renewed with a salary of $131,308.

The selectmen have 15 days to accept or reject an appointment but Milanoski asked them to waive that practice; the board agreed.

BRIEFLY

T-C resigns

Cohasset's Treasurer-Collector Jane Lepardo has resigned her position and plans to start a new job closer to her home sometime in July. Lepardo was hired in May 2012.

Finance Director Mary Gallagher, who used to work with Lepardo in Scituate, said that Lepardo plans to stay on long enough to help close out fiscal year 2013.

Lepardo said in her resignation letter that her new job will cut her commute down from 60 miles to six.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the town has advertised the Treasurer-Collector position and still has an opening for Assistant Treasurer-Collector position.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Layoffs at Elder Affairs

Selectman Martha Gjesteby posed a question to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski during Tuesday's selectmen meeting, having heard that some Elder Affairs employees received layoff notices. Milanoski said that he could not comment on a personnel matter.

Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande could not be reached for comment before press time.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Vets save on facilities sticker

The Board of Selectmen voted in favor of a request from Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski to reduce the price veterans pay for facility stickers from $60 to $35. This is the same "discount" that senior citizens receive in Cohasset.

The Cohasset Triathlon presents Team Hoyt

For decades, Dick Hoyt has pushed or pulled his disabled son Rick through the finish lines of over 30 Boston Marathons and more than 1,000 athletic events, including the Cohasset Triathlon. Along the way, the Hoyts have spread their "Yes You Can" message of determination and motivation to others around the country and world. Bring your family and come meet the Hoyts as they share their inspirational story.

What: Team Hoyt presentation, book signing
Where: First Parish Church (on the town common), 28 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA
When: Saturday, June 29, 2013, 1:00 pm
Cost: This is a free presentation sponsored by the triathlon.

TRIATHLON

birth and is unable to use his hands or legs and can only speak with the use of a computer.

What's triumphant is the Hoyts' legacy — the father-son team has competed in over 1,090 races over the past three decades, which this year has earned them the Jimmy V Perseverance Award to be presented at the July 17 ESPYS.

That's a lot of pushing.

Team Hoyt continues to push, competing in this year's Boston Marathon but unable to complete the race because of the bombs that detonated at the finish line. Prior to the tragic event, Team Hoyt was honored with a bronze statue at the marathon's starting line in Hopkinton. This year was to be Team Hoyt's last Boston Marathon, but since they were unable to cross the finish line, they have vowed to return in 2014. It will be their 32nd time.

This will be the third Cohasset Triathlon for Team Hoyt, and triathlon organizer and director Bill Burnett is excited to see them return.

"We are honored to have Dick and Rick Hoyt back in Cohasset this year — they have so many races to choose from and they keep the Cohasset Triathlon on the top of their list because they love the festive atmosphere, attention to details, and all of the support from cheering fans along the course," said Burnett. "Team Hoyt is inspirational at all levels; just an amazing father-son pair of true dedication and love."

This is why the Triathlon is sponsoring a special event the day before the race, featuring Team Hoyt. Father and son will share their story during a presentation at First Parish on the Cohasset common starting at 1 p.m. on Saturday, June 29. There is also a book signing to follow — the Hoyts have published three.

Both Dick and Rick, speaking through his computer, will share their 34-year racing history, hoping to inspire disabled and able-bodied folks alike with their mantra: "Yes you can."

Team Hoyt's story begins in 1977, when Dick first pushed Rick through a five-mile benefit run, where they finished second-to-last. Rick told his father afterward, "When I'm running, I feel like I'm not handicapped."

That sealed it — the statement fueled Dick, a retired Air National Guard lieutenant colonel, to keep running races with his son.

It's worthy to note that Dick did not start running until he was 40 years old, and did his first triathlon four years later. When asked if he and Rick have always competed as a team, Dick answered, "Oh, yeah. He was the one who asked me to run in that first race."

It was not an easy thing to jump into, said Dick. "It was very difficult" in the beginning, he said. "Really, people didn't know what to do with us; they didn't want us in the race; they didn't want us in a restaurant; they didn't want Rick to get an education. They didn't want us at all, but we just went; every weekend we went out, running in a different race. People could see Rick wanted to be out there — he had a big smile on his face, arms in the air. They could see he had a big personality and sense of humor."

For Team Hoyt, being shunned is a thing of the past.

"Now it's amazing what's happening," said Dick. "We're wanted all over the world."

They are especially wanted in Cohasset. Dick said the reason he and Rick keep coming back to Cohasset – and will give a special presentation this year – is because of all of the support they've gotten from the town.

"The reason we're doing it is we're so popular in Cohasset," said Dick. "We've met a lot of people who are looking forward to us coming down."

Dick lives in Holland, Mass. while Rick is based in Sturbridge. These two Massachusetts men were also recently inducted into the Ironman Hall of Fame. Team Hoyt competed in its first Ironman in 1989.

There is a reason the Hoyts keep racking up the accolades. "We're the first ones in the world to do what we're doing," Dick explained. "We were the first to do the marathon and the Ironman the way we're doing it... With Rick in a wheelchair, it makes it much different."

Dick reflected on his three decade-plus legacy of racing with Rick.

"It's amazing. I never would have thought" they would get this far, Dick said. "When Rick was born, they said he was going to be nothing but a vegetable his whole life. Now he's a full-sized bronze statue."

Dick, 73, and his son, Rick, 51, are familiar figures in races across the country. The father-son team has competed in over 1,090 races over the past three decades. COURTESY PHOTO

Jogger injured on construction plates

DPW alerted National Grid

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A Cohasset woman jogging along Forest Avenue and North Main Street last week passed out after tripping over construction material that was difficult to see on the sidewalk.

After the harrowing accident, Elizabeth O'Day was relieved to learn that the metal plates and bolts she tripped over were removed this week by the construction company that left them there.

O'Day was jogging near her Forest Avenue home on the evening of June 11 when she tripped over metal bolts sticking out of the sidewalk on North Main Street. O'Day landed face-first onto the spiked metal bolts, also injuring her palms, wrists, elbows and knees.

O'Day said she set out on her jog at approximately 8:15 p.m. while it was still light out. The rain from earlier in the day had tapered off to a drizzle, she said.

Even though it was not yet dark out, O'Day said that she could not see the bolts sticking up from the sidewalk. They were attached to metal sheets and were the same color as the metal, which blended in with the road. When she would return to the site later, O'Day would find four traffic cones stacked off to the side of the road, rather than around the road plates.

"They were not where they should be," said O'Day.

She was surprised to see these plates left in the middle of the sidewalk along her usual running route. "I have made the same run many, many times," she said.

O'Day slowly attempted to return home after falling but did not realize she had cut her face and was bleeding. When she reached the intersection of Forest Avenue and North Main Street, "I was really struggling and feeling dizzy," she recalled.

A good Samaritan driving by stopped the car and asked if O'Day needed help; O'Day tried to speak but found that she could not.

"That's the last thing I remember before coming to and recalling that someone was handing me ice to put on my forehead and then seeing Cohasset Fire, Police and an ambulance," O'Day recalled. She was transported to South Shore Hospital with a concussion and lacerations had to be stitched.

"I'm not sure why these plates and spikes are not made more visible."
Elizabeth O'Day

One week later, O'Day reported that she was still being treated for the concussion and dizziness, along with the lacerations and a low-grade infection in the cuts on her forehead. The injuries have impacted her ability to get to work, among other things — O'Day has also been training for two bike ride fundraisers coming up in July and August.

While the injuries were more than enough to deal with, O'Day, who works as a program manager at Partners Occupational Health Services, wanted to know what the plates were doing on the sidewalk without proper markings.

"I'm not sure why these plates and spikes are not made more visible," said O'Day, concerned that repeat injuries could occur. "Someone biking could easily get hurt if their bike tire caught on one of the spikes and anyone walking or jogging by, like myself, could trip over these sharp spikes if they did not see them — young children or elderly in particular."

O'Day returned to the scene of her accident a few days later and compiled a report with photographs. She went to the Police Department to correct the incident report that detailed her accident (the report said that a jogger had hit her head), said O'Day. She also went to the Department of Public Works (DPW) with the information she had compiled.

O'Day spoke with Mary Snow of the DPW, who said she was familiar with the construction site.

Snow confirmed on Wednesday that the plates were from work a contractor was doing for National Grid, extending a gas main at that location. Snow said that the site was repaired on Tuesday after she notified National Grid.

O'Day also reported Wednesday that she noticed the site had been cleaned up.

"I'm really thrilled," she said of DPW's quick attention to the matter. "My stepson's been driving me around and we drove by today, and it's all been cleaned up; that's the best you could have asked for."

O'Day noted the irony of what happened to her, since her job involves hazard identification and injury prevention. If nothing else, O'Day said that she is glad this matter was taken care of and hopes that her experience will help prevent future incidents.

She also expressed thanks for those who responded to her accident.

"I would really like to thank the people who helped me that evening – the woman who stopped her car and a man who handed me an ice pack and towel for my bleeding not to mention, the police, fire and rescue who helped get me to South Shore Hospital," O'Day said. "I would not have made it up Forest given the shape I was in, and if the woman in particular had not driven by when she did, I'm not sure how long I would have been out there since I had lost consciousness."

O'Day did not want to focus on her injuries, however, and said that she is simply grateful to those that helped her and is glad the site has been cleaned up.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's

The 89th annual Summer Recital Series will begin Sunday June 30, at 6 p.m., and will continue each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of 23 bells, President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

Schedule: June 30 – Mary Kennedy, St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset.

July 7 – Margaret Angelini, Wellesley College.

July 14 – Richard Watson, Georgetown, Ohio.

July 21 – Helen Hawley, Hudsonville, Mich.

July 28 – Gerard de-Waardt, Rotterdam, Netherlands.

Aug. 4 – Gordon Slater, Nepean, Ontario, Canada.

Aug. 11 – Philippe Beullens, Leuven, Belgium.

Aug. 18 – Lee Leach, Norwood.

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Cohasset family unites against Alzheimer's

Raising funds, awareness on 'The Longest Day'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Steele family of Cohasset is participating in the Alzheimer's Association's Longest Day event today, Friday, June 21, to honor the strength, passion and endurance of those facing Alzheimer's disease. Margie Steele, 57, has suffered from early-onset Alzheimer's since the age of 50.

The Longest Day is a sunrise-to-sunset challenge to raise awareness and funds to fuel the care, support and research programs of the Alzheimer's Association. Alzheimer's disease is a growing epidemic and is the nation's sixth leading cause of death.

Today's event consists of teams around the area doing various activities – from biking to hiking, swimming to running – to raise awareness and funds for Alzheimer's research. Those who wish to participate can do so wherever they are. Anyone and everyone can help out, and there is still time to contribute to the fundraising.

"You don't have to be a marathoner," said Matt Steele, Margie's husband. "This is a free form kind of event."

Matt explained that the Longest Day event is so named because it takes place on the longest day of the year, the summer solstice.

"The reason is to symbolize how difficult it is for the caregivers of people who have Alzheimer's," said Matt. "Every day they have to face, this is a huge challenge."

"Minds over Matter," the Steele's team name, was conceived by the Steele children (Cali, Sam and Grace) to honor their mother, Margie, and her younger sister Nancy Hughes — both of whom began suffering from young onset dementia in their early fifties.

The Steeles are long time Cohasset residents. Margie was honored by the Cohasset Mariner as Cohasset's Citizen of the Year in 2006 for her longtime work with the Cohasset Food Pantry.

The Alzheimer's Association will feature the Steele's story in their national newsletter this July.

"One of the worst things about this disease is the hopelessness — there is no cure," said Matt. "Participating in this event is our way of fighting back — it gives us a sense of empowerment that we are doing something to someday spare other families the pain we have had to endure."

Held on the longest day of the year, this event challenges people to choose an activity and complete 16 hours of it as a team.

"Participating in this event is our way of fighting back — it gives us a sense of empowerment that we are doing something to someday spare other families the pain we have had to endure."
Matt Steele

"We've assembled an eclectic group that will cover the entire day with activities: biking, running, hiking, swimming, golfing and even skateboarding," said Cali. "My dad and friends are doing a 60-mile bike ride. Thanks to technology, we'll stay in touch during the day with texts, Facebook posts, and a team photo sharing account where we'll create a team slideshow."

The Steele family appreciates those who have shown them support during this difficult time.

"The love and kindness my family has received from the Cohasset community has been simply amazing – prayers, well wishes, cards, emails, meals and random acts of kindness – we feel truly blessed to live in this community," said Matt. "We already have a large group of supporters for our team and are hoping for even more by The Longest Day."

Anyone wishing to contribute or learn more about Alzheimer's can visit the team page on the web at: thelongestday.alz.org

Public Notices tell you.

What are Public/Legal Notices?

Public notices are announcements from all levels and branches of government, as well as from individuals and businesses that inform you about government actions, environmental conditions and economic changes. They alert you when your interests, your family or your community is affected by what others do, and they invite you to participate in the democratic process or in business opportunities.

Watch this newspaper for public notices that inform you about things like:

- the restaurant at the end of the block that applied for a liquor license
- a proposed tax increase on the school board's agenda
- the neighbor that applied for a permit to enlarge her house
- the sewer authority that is issuing bonds to finance a new plant

show, titled "The Color of Nature," draws deeply from Joe's time spent with his grandfather, Sam Esposito, who designed the landscapes for some of Cohasset's most beautiful gardens.

Joe recalls meandering the lush art-filled nature trails at the home of BJ Andrus, catching frogs for the frog pond at Ginevra Higginson's home, getting lost in the grandeur of the grounds at Linda Wakeman's and Mal McCunney's home, as well as many other nature walks he took with his grandfather as a small boy in Cohasset. Those memories of nature as recalled through the lens of a small child are what helped to inspire Joe's latest show.

Cafe

The last Cohasset Café of the spring season will be held on Monday, June 24 from 9-11 a.m. at Cohasset Lightkeepers. Sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs, Café provides an informal environment in which to meet up with friends and enjoy conversation overlooking stunning views of Cohasset Harbor. Join us for a season finale pancake breakfast that will be served alongside the regular home-baked breakfast offerings. For transportation, call 781-383-9112. Café will resume again in September.

Elder law

On Wednesday, June 26 from 11 a.m. to noon, Leanna Hamill, Elder Law Attorney will present a seminar: "Helping Families Protect their Choices, Preserve their Relationships and Pass Down the Things that Matter" at the Senior Center, 3 North Main St.

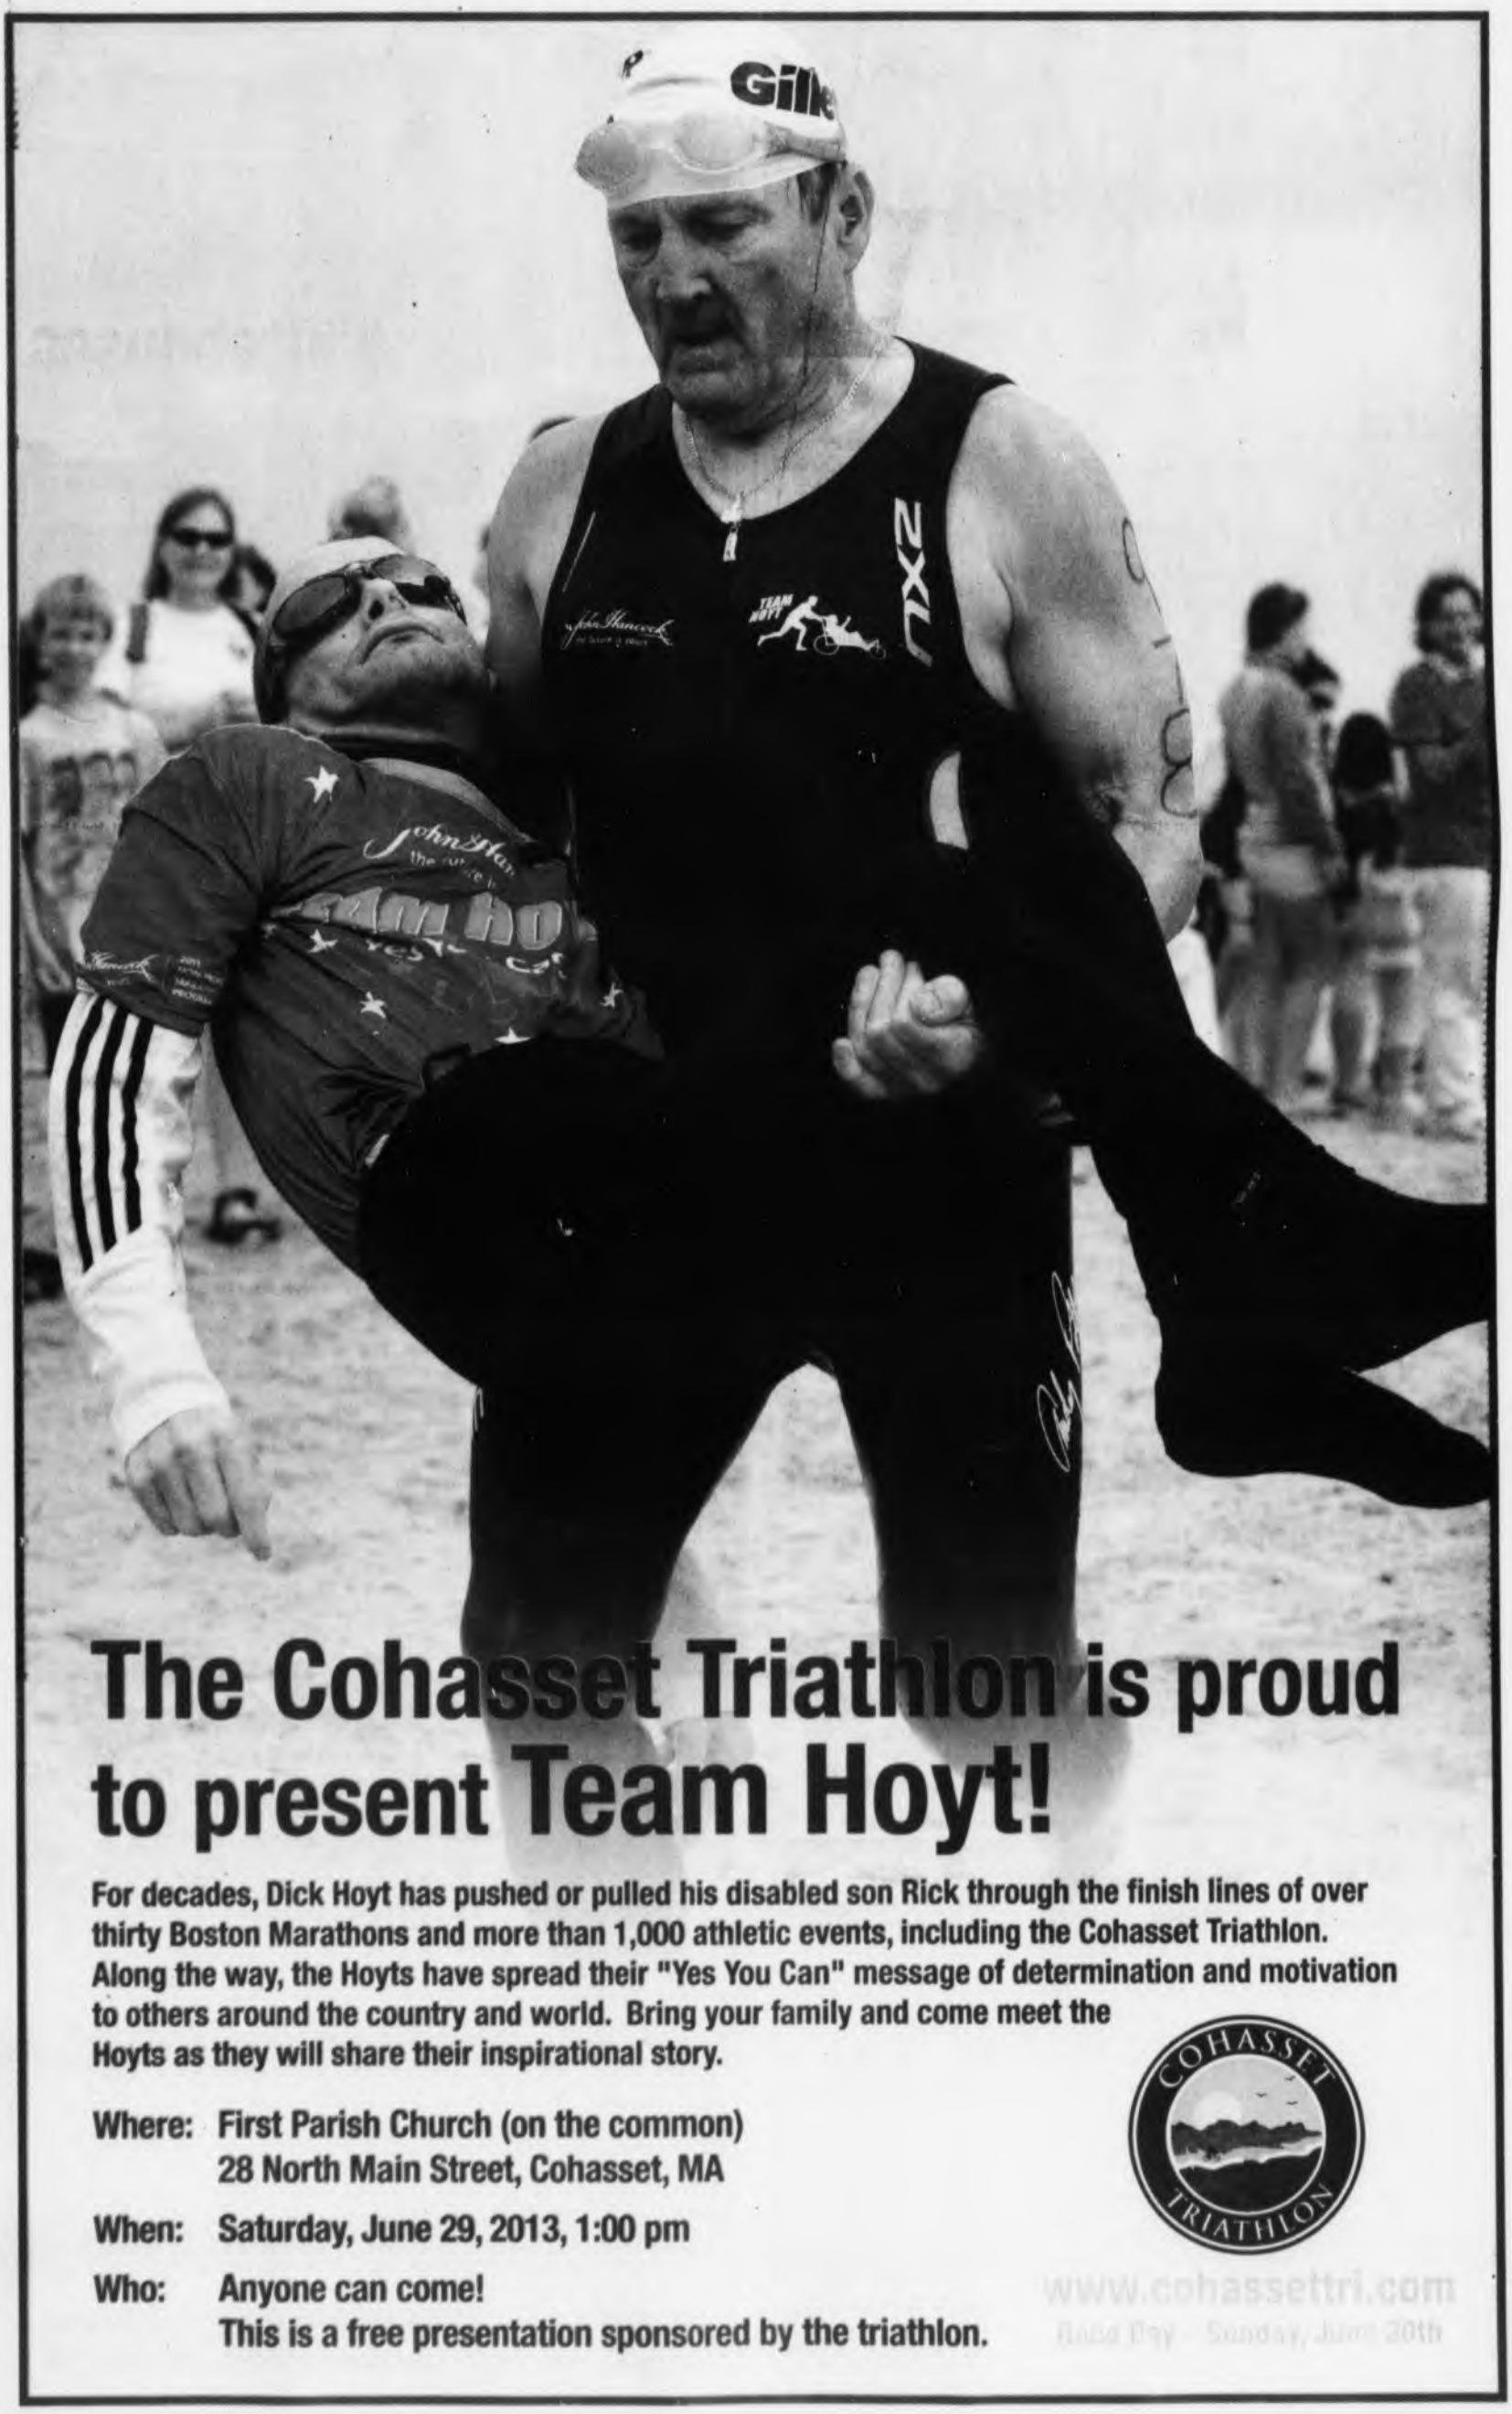
Did you take out a life insurance policy when you joined the service 50 years ago? Do you remember where you put those savings bonds your mother bought you? This workshop will help you recognize where your assets are, how they are held and who the beneficiaries are to make things easier for yourself and your family. After the seminar, a luncheon prepared by Mr. Dooley's will be served. Suggested donation for this event is $3.

ASO news

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra (ASO), the South Shore's premier regional professional orchestra held its annual meeting on June 11 welcoming two members to the Board of Directors and introducing Executive Director Diane Kennedy. Music Director Jin Kim also previewed the upcoming concert season, which begins with an opening night performance of Dvorak's Symphony No. 5 "New World" on October 12, 2013 at Thayer Academy.

■ New members of the Board of Directors are David Beal, of Cohasset, a retired engineer and longtime supporter of the Orchestra. He will serve the Board as Treasurer. Also joining the Board is Nathaniel Seelen of Boston, formerly of Hingham. Nat is a member of the award-winning Klezmer Band, Ezekiel's Wheels.

■ The ASO also welcomed its new Executive Director Diane Kennedy, of Cohasset. Diane will be working with Nina Wellford, who is remaining with the orchestra as development director. Diane has over 25-years experience in non-profit/arts management and consulting; she recently worked for the Hingham Community Center and for 12 years was with the South Shore Art Center. She was the recipient of a competitive arts administration fellowship with the National Endowment for the Arts and has extensive experience in marketing, development, and volunteer/personnel management.



The ASO will close its year on Sunday June 23 with a celebration "Musical Views" at the Cohasset home of Gordon and Motoko Deane. The event will feature pianist Misha Namirovsky, a renowned performer currently finishing his doctorate at New England Conservatory.

Tickets are $125 for Musical Views and are available at: atlanticsymphony.org or by calling the ASO at 781-331-3600.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

ELECTION IS TUESDAY

Special Senate race is in voters' hands

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

Ed Markey.

Gabriel Gomez.

Massachusetts voters will choose their next U.S. senator in a special election Tuesday, June 25, after a condensed campaign season that has pitted an experienced Democratic congressman against a political newcomer pledging to be a "new kind of Republican."

The GOP's Gabriel Gomez, a private equity investor, former Navy SEAL and son of Colombian immigrants, has emphasized his life story and painted himself as an independent thinker running against an out-of-touch career politician.

Rep. Ed Markey, D-5th, has portrayed himself as a longtime advocate for Massachusetts residents and a legislative leader on telecommunications, energy and the environment, while trying to tie his opponent to the national GOP and Tea Party groups.

Most polls have placed Markey in the lead, but it's too soon to count Gomez out, said Tom Whalen, a political historian and associate professor of social sciences at Boston University.

The question is whether Markey's supporters are enthusiastic enough to get to the polls, though Democrats may have learned a lesson from Republican former Sen. Scott Brown's stinging defeat of Democrat Martha Coakley in 2010, Whalen said.

Also unclear is how well Gomez will rally independent and Tea Party voters, he said.

"It's a special election," he said. "With such low turnouts, it's really kind of a roll of the dice sometimes."

In the final weeks of the race, Markey got some high-profile backing from President Barack Obama and former President Bill Clinton in dual campaign rallies while Gomez announced a series of town hall meetings to shore up supporters.

The winner will have to tackle a number of major issues that emerged during the short campaign, including U.S. involvement in Syria and government snooping on citizens' phone and Internet habits in the name of national security.

Polls will be open across the state Tuesday from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Anyone unsure where to vote can check online at wheredoivotema.com. A third party candidate, Richard Heos of the Twelve Visions Party, also will appear on the ballot.

Longtime U.S. Sen. John Kerry resigned in January to become Obama's secretary of state, triggering a race to replace him. Gov. Deval Patrick appointed interim Sen. William "Mo" Cowan to temporarily fill the seat.

Markey beat fellow U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, D-8th, in a Democratic primary in April. Gomez bested former U.S. Attorney Michael Sullivan and state Rep. Dan Winslow, R-Norfolk, on the Republican side.

New campaign finance reports showed Gomez, who lives in Cohasset, trailing Markey, a Malden native, in fundraising as the race wound to a close.

Since April, Markey raised $3.1 million, compared to $2.1 million for Gomez. That brought Markey's total fundraising haul for the year to $7.9 million, more than twice Gomez' $3.3 million, which includes $900,000 of his own money.

Markey's fundraising since April included $2.6 million from individual donors and about $343,500 from political action and party committees. Gomez raised $2.1 million from individuals since April and $170,000 from committees.

The most recent polls have put Markey ahead, but the gap between the candidates has narrowed. A poll conducted for the Boston Globe by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center had Markey leading Gomez by 11 to 13 points.

A Suffolk University poll a week earlier found a tighter race, with Gomez trailing Markey by 7 points. That was a thinner margin than in May, when an earlier Suffolk/7 News poll found Markey ahead by 17 points.

Gomez has done well popular with independent voters, but overall, women have not responded as well to his candidacy, Whalen said. Markey, meanwhile, has seemed to scale back attacks on Gomez to avoid making him a more sympathetic figure, he said.

"Especially if it ends up being rainy, a stormy day, who knows?" Whalen said of Election Day.

Facility stickers are now on sale

Stickers are now on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall only. Stickers will not be sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents younger than age 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25. A copy of one's current registration is required. If leasing a vehicle, people will need proof of residence in addition to the registration.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. People are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of one's current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Cullen and Murphy discuss Whitey Bulger

Library event is June 27

Beginning with Bulger's birth in Everett in 1929 and following the trajectory of his life, Kevin Cullen and Shelley Murphy tell a straightforward but riveting tale, one that has earned consistent high praise from reviewers. Join these reporters as they discuss their book and its back story — "Whitey Bulger, America's Most Wanted Gangster," at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Thursday, June 27, at 7 p.m.

Readers are in good hands with Cullen and Murphy since they have both been writing about Bulger since 1985. Cullen grew up with him in Southie, knew his family, his family's friends, knew the FBI agent who was Bulger's handler from childhood—John Connelly, a rising FBI star — a friend of Cullen's family, a friend of Whitey's family.

As Cullen's cousins related gruesome rumors of Whitey's exploits in Southie while family friend John Connolly praised Whitey for his good works, Cullen was struck by the disparity between the two portraits of the Southie gangster. Connolly's suspect naïveté ultimately led Cullen to be the first to raise questions about Bulger's relationship with the FBI.

Not a simple litany of chilling sociopathic crimes, Cullen's and Murphy's book delves deeply into the culture that nurtured Bulger and examines the tribalism that was his identity. One Boston Globe reviewer states, "...Whitey is a product of a particular time and place, and he cannot be understood apart from either...In that sense [the book] is as much social history as a biography or manhunt thriller."

Kevin Cullen is a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who has written for the Boston Globe since 1985; he is a frequent commentator on NPR and BBC. Shelley Murphy has covered Whitey Bulger and organized crime since 1985, first for the Boston Herald, and then for the Boston Globe. She has won a George Polk award for national reporting.

Cullen and Murphy will be available for book signing and further discussion following their talk. Buttonwood Books will have copies of their book available for purchase. (Note: Shelley Murphy's daily attendance at the trial may prevent her from attending this talk)

OUR VIEW

Government watchdog

In years past, we have sat through numerous selectmen's meetings along with fellow reporters from the local daily papers, which for a range of reasons can no longer regularly send reporters to selectmen or other town government meetings.

Therefore, the responsibility of "government watchdog" falls greatly on your weekly hometown paper, the Cohasset Mariner.

We want to be clear that the press is supposed to have a healthy adversarial relationship with government on all levels. We do our best not to take what is presented to us at face value. We try to dig further, ask questions, get copies of documents and look at the process with a critical eye – all in a balanced and fair way.

One of our jobs is to make sure when possible that the boards we cover follow the Open Meeting Law. To that end, we recently filed an OML complaint against the Board of Selectmen. We believe the board decided on who should fill the chairman's seat among themselves away from the public eye between the election on May 11 and the first meeting of the new board that Tuesday (May 14). At the May 14 meeting, the important vote on who should lead the board through these difficult, controversial times was conducted without discussion and appeared to us to be a "done deal."

Selectmen, in our view, nearly violated the law again this week when they went into executive session to discuss our OML complaint because of the "legal nature" of the subject. We raised an objection during open session. In executive session due to our objection, the board contacted Town Counsel, who advised them to conduct the discussion in open session.

The selectmen will respond to our complaint during their meeting next week – currently scheduled for Thursday, June 27.

It is clear when selectmen – some of whom have years of experience — go into executive session due to the "legal nature of a complaint," because "litigation is the natural course of the complaint," or that the complaint could "eventually" lead to litigation – they do not understand the OML. Under that scenario, nearly any discussion on any subject could qualify for closed-door debate, freezing the press and the public out of the process. An OML complaint is not litigation nor are the ramifications of a violation of the law.

Early this year, we called for a workshop on the OML in Cohasset, like the one presented by the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office years ago. This week, we learned Town Counsel Paul DeRensis has offered to conduct a workshop in July. In our opinion, it cannot come soon enough.

Town off watch-list; more communication is coming

MICHAEL MILANOSKI

On behalf of the Department Heads, I am happy to announce that the Town's Operations will finish within budget for fiscal 2013 — as was presented at the most recent Board of Selectmen's meeting. Next month, we will formally announce final results to the taxpayers as we have exceeded expectations for FY13.

In FY12, prior management had a projected operating loss of $600,000 beyond Town Meeting appropriations. In FY13, we have reversed this trend because of the management initiatives and dedicated work of our Department Heads. We will finish FY13 within the appropriated budget and we will collect additional revenues beyond the projections.

As many are aware, Cohasset was on the Massachusetts Department of Revenues (DOR) "watch-list" in FY12. As a result, the town was required to prepare additional financial disclosure and submit them to the DOR. Our posting to the "Watch list" was in part due to the town's inability to manage our financial affairs as required by DOR regulations. We are no longer under their "watch-list."

I continue to work to make town governance more transparent and financially accountable. Pursuant to my pledge, the professional management of the town (the 15 Department Heads and I as Acting Town Manager) will be preparing monthly financial and management updates that will be disseminated to the taxpayers of Cohasset. We have accomplished a lot, made tremendous progress from the "watch-list" days but there is still much more to do to meet the financial policies and objectives Town Meeting adopted a year ago.

In the next week, I will begin hosting a weekly cable show, which will explore the inner workings of your town with our Department Heads. Our goal is to show you what is going well, show you what still needs improvement, prioritization of those improvements, and discuss the issues that confront our community. Also, we will launch a Town of Cohasset Facebook page this week to further make this information available to you – our customers the citizens of Cohasset.

Our objective is to provide you the opportunity to be an informed citizen with factual information. Should you have questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me at Town Hall.

Michael Milanoski is the Acting Town Manager.

Town has made much progress

JACK KENILEY

As we approach the end of the 2013 fiscal year, June 30th, let's take a moment to review the work that has been done.

What did we accomplish this year?

If you are a casual follower of town politics, you might get the impression that Cohasset is "adrift" and town leaders are unable to get along long enough to govern. Many of the disputes, of course, have made the front page of the Mariner. Regardless, we have made significant progress towards improving the transparency, financial stability and accountability of Cohasset town government. Unfortunately, it seems like the progress that has been made has been, in part, obscured by political skirmishes that are bound to accompany any meaningful change.

As we approach the end of the 2013 fiscal year, June 30th, let's take a moment to review the work that has been done. The many accomplishments of this year stand in stark contrast to the last few years of confusion and instability.

How did we get here?

For years, we the taxpayers ignored the signs that the town was in trouble. The annual town audit reports from 2011 all the way back to 2005, describe in great detail, the significant managerial problems that were not being addressed by our town officials. It all came to a head in 2010 when the Water Department ran out of cash and could not cover its bills.

The Selectmen immediately created a citizens committee to review the problems surrounding the Water Department. The Water Planning Group found numerous problems including inadequate accounting controls, a lack of documented policies and procedures, issues with the way water rates had been set and an operating contract with an outside contractor that was too expensive.

The findings of the Water Planning Group opened the door to a review of all town operations. Not surprisingly, we had similar problems with other town departments. Unfortunately, an in-depth analysis of these problems was limited by an antiquated and inaccurate accounting and financial system. In the spring of 2011, Steve Lombard the interim town manager at the time approved the purchase and installation of a new accounting system and he approved the hiring of new staff for the accounting and finance departments.

What have we accomplished?

And so began the reconstruction. This year's Annual Town Meeting was a testament to how far we have come. The Town Manager and the Selectmen submitted a balanced budget and made a significant contribution to the stabilization funds. It is the first time in 25 years that Town Meeting has funded the stabilization funds in a meaningful way. We are now close to meeting the state guidelines for the amount of money we should be contributing to the funds. This month, the credit rating agency took notice of our improved financial position and rewarded us with a credit upgrade.

Funding the stabilization funds is just one example of the many improvements over the last two years. Here is my list of some of the other major contributions towards improving town governance and transparency in fiscal year 2013:

• The Finance and Accounting Department — It all starts with the collection of taxes and the tracking of the budgets. The Finance Department has spent more than two years rebuilding the accounting system. The Finance Department has developed policies and procedures for doing their work and they now have the ability to produce accurate and timely financial reports, on demand. Before the improvements were put into place, there were no policies for collecting funds or spending money and there was no way to track expenditures in a timely fashion. When reports were available, they were materially inaccurate.

Without accurate and timely financial data, town officials were unable to

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Candidates clash on energy, environment

MATT GREGORY

The notion of energy independence has become a focal point of executive and legislative policy as of late; citing the uncertainties associated with global trade, especially with ideologically dissimilar states such as Venezuela and Saudi Arabia, elected leaders on both sides of the aisle have made it a priority to ensure that America gains control of the resources upon which it relies. However, significant differences lie in how policymakers seek to achieve this goal. The special Senate campaign between Representative Edward Markey and Cohasset businessman Gabriel Gomez has served as a representation for the ongoing nationwide political battle over how best to reduce domestic dependence on foreign oil; Mr. Markey, a strong advocate of undertaking measures to control climate change, has supported initiatives designed to promote the development of domestic green energy, while Mr. Gomez has taken a stance more in line with that of the Republican party, supporting the continued utilization of oil resources rather than government investment in alternate sources of power.

Ed Markey's convictions regarding the importance of environmental activism and the development of alternate sources of power are rooted in years of legislative experience. Currently serving as Chairman of the Select Committee on Energy Independence and Global Warming in the House, Markey has voted in numerous instances in favor of initiatives designed to incentivize green energy development while reducing fossil fuel production. The Congressman co-wrote the Clean Energy and Security Act, which sought to ensure that by 2020, 20 percent of energy production would be clean, voted in 2004 to oppose Bush administration policies providing $11.9 billion in tax incentives for oil and gas production, voted to remove additional oil subsidies in 2007, and then a year later voted to implement tax incentives on renewable energy production. In addition, Markey is a staunch defender of the direct correlation between carbon dioxide emissions and climate change, has consistently voted to regulate and limit CO2 discharge, and has supported the EPA's ability to regulate corporations' pollution. Transparent in his support for clean energy and opposition to domestic oil consumption, Markey's web page describes the Democrat as "passionate about revolutionizing our country's energy policies to reduce our dependence on foreign oil and pave the way for more clean energy jobs here at home."

Political newcomer Gabriel Gomez may lack his opponent's political track record regarding votes on energy policy; however, the Cohasset Republican maintains a strong, independent perspective on the necessity of balancing economic growth with energy conservation. Gomez has stated that while "climate change is real, addressing the problem must be done rationally." Arguing that many solutions to the threat could put the American economy at a "competitive disadvantage," Gomez has further declared that while he supports private initiatives to develop renewable energy, he does not believe in government involvement in resource development projects:"...not every single green project is a good project. And that's one of the differences between me and Congressman Markey." Gomez has continuously referred to Solyndra, the California solar firm which received millions in government subsidies before falling into bankruptcy, as the epitome of governmental mismanagement and bureaucratic failure in its attempts to promote renewable energy development, and by consequence has also stated his disapproval of Massachusetts' Cape Wind Project, which he considers, "a perfect example of what happens when government interferes with private sector growth and innovation without the support of the local community."

Perhaps the issue upon which the candidates' views have conflicted most directly is that of the Keystone XL Pipeline, a proposal which would allow Canadian corporation TransCanada to construct a 1,700 mile addition to an already existing system of piping, allowing crude oil to be shipped from Alberta, Canada, to the Texas coastline on the Gulf of Mexico. Construction of the pipeline is estimated to create at least 5,000 new domestic jobs, and the project's completion would be a significant step in the direction of American energy independence. Mr. Gomez has strongly advocated construction of the oil transit system, stating on his website, "the Keystone pipeline...will create jobs, drive down our energy costs, and help us to become energy independent." Furthermore, Gomez was quoted as stating that the Keystone project is "environmentally friendly." Congressman Markey took exception to these comments, voicing concerns over the project's detrimental environmental impact: "The Canadians are mining the dirtiest oil in the world...there is no dispute that the environmental consequences attached to TransCanada's pipeline will be grave." Echoing sentiments expressed by numerous Democratic leaders, including President Obama, Markey, on his website, describes his desire to fight "Republicans' 'Drill, Baby, Drill' campaign" and to oppose "drilling in the pristine Arctic National Wildlife Refuge," and as a result, has received the vocal support of environmental activist groups such as 350.org, the NextGen Committee, and the League of Conservation Voters. Citing the debate over the Keystone pipeline as a significant factor in this campaign, NextGen Committee spokesman Chris LeHane observed that in contrast to Markey and his firm convictions on this issue, "The more we learn about Gomez, the more he looks like Mitt Romney without the experience."

Few would imagine that one oil pipeline could decide an election. Yet while concerns over the economy, foreign policy, gun control, and social issues have dominated press reports in recent weeks, the nation's future energy policies will inevitably prove central to its ability to remain economically competitive abroad, prosperous at home, and protected from the dangers of fossil fuel reliance. In short, America's energy policy will determine the character of its future. The implementation of the Keystone XL pipeline, one of the issues over which the candidates have most openly conflicted, has the potential to serve as a barometer for future energy initiatives. If the project is accepted, it would likely usher in additional oil drilling and fracking to utilize all available resources, thus reducing the necessity of developing renewable power in the near future; on the other hand, if the plan is ultimately rejected, the nation will likely embark upon a path to energy independence built upon green technology production. Both candidates' viewpoints have benefits and detriments, for the economy, the environment, foreign affairs, and national security; voters must consider these factors while determining which vision for the future and which path to the inevitable goal of energy independence is more likely to prove beneficial to the state of Massachusetts, to the United States, and to the larger world.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Water, water everywhere!

The ditches that border the field need clearing so as to better handle the overflow. Rain barrels need to be attached to every gutter, in hopes of dry, summer days ahead.

JON BELBER

This past week, I have often been reminded of the Native American phrase, from which the town of Cohasset gained its name, I believe, Quonahassit, which translates to the "long, rocky shore." It has plenty of rocks, and along the shore with a high water table, plenty of water. The deluge of recent rains has lent themselves well to wet fields and muddy paths. Too many young plants are overwhelmed by the recent rains and standing water. And when the tractors do take to the fields, now quite idle as they would surely be stuck in the mud, they are sure to encounter the perennial rocks and stones that continuously crop up in beds and fields.
